Opposing factions seek support on school tax issue

BY BOB FRYER

Opposing factions for the upcoming election on a proposed special two-mill tax for construction of schools are both working hard to see that their side wins when voters go to the polls July 18 to settle the issue.

A recently formed group, known as Taxpayers for Revision of School Financing, is against the special tax. The group was recently joined in their stance against the tax by board members of the Port St. Lucie Civic League.

Don Porter is chairman of the taxpayer group, and in a recent press release from the organization states, "At the outset, we wish to make it perfectly clear we are not opposed to new school construction when the need is demonstrated. However, we strongly oppose the school board's method of financing this endeavor. The school board has asked us to pay for a $6 million-plus capitalization plan in two years. This is not only unreasonable but in our judgment, inequitable."

According to the school board proposal a special two-mill tax would be levied for the next two years in order to generate funds for building a new elementary school in Port St. Lucie, one in the northern part of the county, and renovation of several older schools, particularly Fort Pierce Elementary.

Mrs. Butch Post, one of the proponents of the special tax, said a number of volunteers are going door to door to drum up support for the tax and she said others are calling residents on the phone to urge them to vote for the tax.

"The people against the tax don't seem to realize that if the tax fails, the school board would probably have to raise the regular school millage to its eight mill cap (it is set at 6.95 mills this year), and that if it is raised, there's a good chance it wouldn't be lowered. So, instead of paying a higher tax just for two years for the new schools, the taxpayers may be faced with higher taxes for a long period of time," she said.

In addition to the door-to-door and phone campaign, persons in favor of the tax are planning to be at a board of directors meeting of the Port St. Lucie-River Park Homeowners Association at 9 p.m. Friday, July 7, at the Community Center.

At that meeting, Porter, who is president of the homeowners group as well as chairman of the group against the tax, is expected to seek board endorsement of a stand against the two-mill tax. However, Don Horner, a board member and vice president of the homeowners group, is against the tax and is expected to voice his views.

School Superintendent Dr. Nolan Skinner may also be there to make a pitch for the tax.

A meeting sponsored by the pro-tax group is also planned for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, July 13, at the Port St. Lucie Elementary School. Citizens are invited to attend and hear arguments for the tax. Opponents of the tax are also expected to be there to be sure their point of view is expressed.

The payment of large construction projects should be spread over a reasonable period of time. The principal argument for this is that we are a very fast growing county, and it is unreasonable to ask present residents to pay for schools designed for both present and future use in such a ridiculously short period of two years. This indicates a lack of long range planning," the press release of the anti-tax group states.

Permit revocation issue draws debate

BY BOB FRYER

In spite of a heated debate with Seymour Fleming, who wants immediate revocation of two court-ordered building permits for the Southport Shopping Center, city attorney Spencer Gilbert declined to give a legal opinion Monday night on whether or not the city should revoke the permits.

Gilbert said several legal cases have been found which would support the move sought to revoke the permits. The cases support the argument that since the land in question is on the verge of being rezoned from a business to residential category, the permits for retail stores could be revoked. But Gilbert said he was not sure, and could not be sure until he researched the cases, about whether the city could have realistic chances of a damage suit if the permits were revoked. He said he expected to have an opinion in time for the council meeting on Tuesday, July 11.

The permits in question were recently issued to Fort Pierce developer Peter Smith for construction of a 3-11 store and a 10,000 square foot building to contain 10 retail stores. The city had denied the permits last year, but Smith's firm filed suit against the city. Last month Circuit Court Judge C. Pfeiffer Trowbridge ruled that two of the four permits which originally sought were to be issued, but the other two were to be denied.

Fleming wants no expansion of the center, which is now contained in one building on Morningside Drive, and he argued that Gilbert should have published the case and that he ought to give an immediate opinion on whether to revoke the permits.

Gilbert said he would not appeal the case because the judge made a correct decision based on law, but after a heated exchange of words, Gilbert did say that if he reaches a firm opinion on the permit revocation question before next Tuesday, he'll contact city officials.

One member of the audience stressed the need for quick action, saying that if foundations were poured, Smith might have a better argument for a vested right to the buildings.

A construction crew began turning dirt on the land last week and appears to be just about ready to pour a foundation.

In other action, council members heard from acting city manager Harold Van Patten on negotiations for a contract for extra police protection from the sheriff's department for next year, then instructed Van Patten to try again to get a $10,000 cut in the proposed $177,000 contract budget.

Frank Riegler, architect for the new city hall, told the council that groundbreaking for the facility should be possible on August 15, and that it would then take six and a half to seven months to construct the building. He also showed new cost projections. The new total cost was estimated at $616,122, more than $100,000 over an earlier total cost estimate. Riegler said.

City Planner Mike Szunyog suggested that city council members may want to adopt appearance standards for the city, based on Boca Raton laws. He said the new laws might include such things as sign and landscaping ordinances and an architect review committee to judge the architectural compatability of new projects with what is already in the city. Several council members expressed interest in the suggestion.

Leapin' lizards!

The Second Annual Lizard Race at the Sandpiper Bay Resort in Port St. Lucie Sunday afternoon proved to be popular with youngsters and is growing to become a major event at the resort for the Fourth of July holiday season.

Andrea George, social director at the resort and originator of the lizard race, said this year's event was much more elaborate than last year's, and she predicted it will increase in popularity in future years.

A total of 33 persons signed up to compete in the event, but when it was time for entrants to put their reptiles in the starting boxes, only 14 of the applicants had a lizard to race.

"We have a rule that requires that only lizards caught on Sandpiper Bay Resort property can be entered in the races, and it turned out that the lizards were pretty hard to catch. Many of the children spent a good part of the morning searching for lizards," she said.

Winner of the event, with a creature she named Superstar, was 11-year-old Maureen Reis of Port St. Lucie.

Chris Ross, 6, of Miami, produced the second place winner, which was named Mr. Greenjeans.

Lilly Lizard, the entry of eight-year-old Christa Haughton of Port St. Lucie, placed third.

A series of "heats" were held to eliminate the slower lizards, so the eventual winners had to be consistently fast to beat out other competitors. The top three winners each received a gold-plated trophy.

Ms. George says about 60 spectators were on hand for the races, and she said the track, made out of plexiglass and including starting gates, was far more sophisticated than the wooden, gateless one used last year.

"Next year we hope to make the event even bigger and plan on attracting more kids from the area to compete," Ms. George said.

Chappelle gets Phd

Steven G. Chappelle of Port St. Lucie was conferred his Juris Doctor degree recently, in commencement exercises at Catholic University in Washington.

He was one of only three Floridians to receive the PhD degree.

No damp spirits

It almost rained on the Fourth of July parade in Port St. Lucie, but it sure didn't dampen any spirits.

Mother Nature dumped a shower in northern Port St. Lucie shortly before the annual Independence Day parade was to begin. It got a few clown suits and floats wet but was gone by parade time.

All along the parade route from the North Port Marina to the Port St. Lucie Community Center, Prima Vista Boulevard seemed to be lined with a surprisingly large crowd. The adults seemed to be enjoying the music of the Port St. Lucie Band, and the kids, of course, took special delight in the clowns, floats with candy tossers, and horse riders.

Although parade awards were unavailable at press time, the decisions of parade judges must have been hard, based on the large number of good looking floats. Nearly every club and organization in the city was represented.

Following the parade, there were games, booths and a barbecue chicken dinner at the Community Center which attracted a crowd of July 4th celebrators.

Over at Spanish Lakes, a parade featuring a kazoo band was held Tuesday morning, following by a hot dog feast, afternoon games, and an evening disco dance at the clubhouse.

At the North Port Marina, the pool was opened especially for the holiday for those seeking a good place to cool off. Many others took to the St. Lucie River for boat rides and water skiing in Port St. Lucie.

CUB SCOUT PACK 499 was one of the many local entries in the Fourth of July Parade in Port St. Lucie Tuesday. The parade route down Prima Vista Boulevard from the North Port Marina to the Community Center was a long one. Parade marchers seemed to come through it a little sweaty, but still stepped proudly. A large crowd gathered along the route to watch the parade, undaunted by rains that fell a short time before it started. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

RESTORING THE SAVANNAS to a more natural condition was the object of a recently completed project to remove a causeway in the Savannas that was begun by a development firm five years ago. The causeway caused lengthy court battles, and eventually, the developers were ordered to have it removed. But when action on that was delayed, General Development Corporation and the conservation alliances of Martin and St. Lucie Counties applied for, and won, a permit to remove the causeway and restore the natural flow of water in the wetlands.

Kernohan wants Helmer

Charles Helmer, who retired on June 30 from his post as financial director for the Martin County School Board, may soon become an internal auditor for the City of Port St. Lucie.

The idea for an internal auditor came from Councilwoman Lalita Kernohan, who said she was afraid of billowing governmental costs. As an example, she noted that estimates on the cost of a new City Hall have ranged from $500,000 to $550,000, and even to $750,000. She wants the internal auditor to have access to all city financial records.

After stating the need for an internal auditor, Mrs. Kernohan suggested Charles Helmer as the person to fill the post. She noted that Helmer lives in Port St. Lucie and that he retired last week from his post with the school system. She said Helmer, a CPA, has told her he is willing to take the job, on a part-time basis, without compensation.

Councilmen Merle Anderson and Mike Reeb both said they liked the idea, so it is likely a vote on the matter will be held soon.

Heritage branch

Heritage Federal Savings and Loan Association of Daytona Beach, Fla., has filed an application to locate a branch office in the vicinity of U.S.1 and Port St. Lucie Boulevard.

THE BIG BAND SOUND poured fourth like French champagne over the breeze-cooled grounds of Sandpiper Bay Saturday afternoon, under the sophisticated and able baton of Joe Moniz. The musical aggregate, which sticks strictly to the jazz classics of the Thirties and Forties, has been increasingly in demand both as listening and dancing pleasure, and has unfailingly gotten standing ovations. Saturday's informal open-air concert was no exception. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Two-year-old girl accidentally drown

A two-year-old Port St. Lucie girl drowned on Saturday, July 1, when she wandered into a pond at the home of her grandparents at the Spot in the Sun Village development near Okeechobee.

The girl, Jamie Leigh Hunt of 750 Streamlet Avenue, Port St. Lucie, was apparently with a three-year-old relative when she wandered into the pond and drowned before the three-year-old could summon help. The girl's parents were reportedly not present for the weekend.

She was born in Decatur, Georgia, and had lived in Port St. Lucie for a year.

She was rushed to Okeechobee General Hospital, but was pronounced dead Saturday afternoon.

Summer sewing classes are slated

Sewing classes will be held July 5-August 2 in the home economics department (room B-2) at Fort Pierce Central High School.

During these four weeks instruction will be available for students who will be enrolled in grades 7 through 12 for the school term, 1978-79.

IT'S NOT OFTEN that conservationists like to see bulldozers and cranes in the ecologically-sensitive Savannas, but last week was a notable exception. The heavy equipment shown above was used by General Development Corporation to remove a causeway improperly built on GDC land in the Savannas by the Universal-Adams Corporation five years ago. Before it was finished, a court order was issued to stop work on the causeway, and eventually, the causeway was ordered removed. Conservation alliances in St. Lucie and Martin Counties joined GDC in the application to remove the causeway and to restore the natural north-south flow of water in the area.

Savannas causeway removed five years after beginning

Nearly five years after construction began on a causeway across the Savannas to what was going to be a high-rise condominium development near Indian River Drive, the causeway has been removed.

It was in October, 1973, that Universal-Adams, Inc., owner of a tract near Indian River Drive, north of Walton Road, began work on the causeway for its proposed Banyan Towers project.

State environmentalists took note of the construction and filed a suit against Universal-Adams to halt the work. The state won and the firm was ordered to remove the partially constructed causeway, which, it turned out, was being built on land owned by General Development Corporation, without GDC permission. The arguments against the causeway were that it was causing pollution of the water, it was blocking the natural north-south flow of the water, and permits needed for the causeway had not been granted.

Several years went by, but the causeway remained.

Finally, GDC and conservation groups of Martin and St. Lucie Counties jointly filed an application for a permit to remove the causeway. The Port St. Lucie city council also supported the permit application, but it was opposed by NGH Investments, a firm which in the meantime had bought part of the Universal-Adams tract after U-A dropped its Banyan Towers project idea.

The permit was recently granted, and for the last several weeks, a GDC bulldozer and dragline crew have been quietly removing the causeway.

"The causeway was built by dredging from the surrounding land, so we just had the bulldozers flatten everything out again. The north-south water flow has been restored and two lakes are now filled with water," said GDC publicity spokesman Bob Ross last Thursday, the final day of work to remove the causeway.

No replating of vegetation will be done, Ross said, adding that GDC feels letting natural vegetation grow there on its own will be better.

"It won't take long to get back to normal," he said.

The causeway was a little north of 687 acres GDC recently deeded to the state so that it will come under protection as environmentally-endangered land, but Ross said leaving the causeway there would hurt the state lands.

GDC's Port St. Lucie general manager, Bob Seeley, was on hand, as well as several area conservationists, for the last work on removing the causeway, and he praised the occasion as being a rare and good example of developers and conservationists working together to preserve the environment.

County Commissioner Maggy Hurchalla, Martin County Conservation Alliance member Dr. Walter Stokes, and Carl and Carol Herzog from the St. Lucie County Conservation Alliance were also present for the event.

Candidate seminar July 8

With the period for candidate-qualifying only a few days away, Supervisor of Elections Peggy Robbins is preparing her office as a political information center.

In every election year, the election department is bombarded with questions about the positions open and what the jobs entail. To make it easier for people seeking such information, Miss Robbins has scheduled a "candidates" seminar for Saturday, July 8, at 10 a.m. in the county commission room of the Administrative Center in Stuart.

Several seats are opening up this year, Miss Robbins points out. They are:

Two county commission posts -- those held by Tom Higgins and Maggy Hurchalla.

Three school board seats -- those held by Ron Becky, Dave Anderson and Charles Covington;

Three circuit judge posts -- those held by Charles Smith, Wallace Sample and C. Pfeiffer Trowbridge.

The county judge post held by Judge David Harper;

The supervisor of elections, held by Miss Robbins;

Two senate seats, now held by Harry Johnston II and Don Childers.

Two state House of Representative seats, held by Dale Cassens and Bill Taylor.

U.S. House of Representatives seat held by L.A. "Skip" Bafalis.

The governorship and the entire cabinet.

Also, five seats on the Soil and Water Conservation District.

The last-named, Miss Robbins explained, are unpaid, but carry a lot of weight in the state government.

The qualifying period is from noon July 11 to noon on July 25.

Miss Robbins also emphasizes that voters must be registered by Aug. 12, in order to be eligible to vote in the primaries. To facilitate registration, she has mobile units visiting throughout the county. The two latest will be added are the Monterey Country Club on July 18 from 2 to 4 p.m., and Jensen East Mall, July 20 from 1 to 5 p.m.

Myers leaving commission post to run for representative

Dr. William Myers, a member of the Martin County Commission for six years and chairman for the past year, this week announced his intent to resign his commission seat to run for the State House of Representatives.

He gave as the reason for his decision the need for Martin County representation in the state legislature, specifically accusing William Taylor, whose seat he is opposing, of failing to give this area fair and adequate attention.

A Republican, Dr. Myers said his prime concerns are getting action on I-95 and bills affected by the Department of Environmental Regulation and Department of Transportation. He also hopes to get more equitable treatment for the county in administration of state education funds.

Dr. Myers, a Hobe Sound physician, first ran successfully for the County Commission in 1968, serving a full four-year term. In 1972, he made an abortive attempt to run for Congress, but couldn't get the needed financial backing.

He ran again for, and was elected to the county commission in 1976.

He said his resignation from the commission is already on file with the Martin County Supervisor of Elections, effective Nov. 6. A special election must be held to name his successor.

Wall to wall people fill area for fourth celebration

BY SALLY LATHAM

If you have any doubts about the patriotism of today's generations, you've never been exposed to a Jensen Beach Celebration of our country's birthday. On Tuesday evening, as the time for fireworks drew near, the entire area, from Edenlawn to the Outrigger, was wall-to-wall cars, people and boats.

The crowds began collecting early on Jensen Causeway, to position themselves for the day long fun, feasting and competition. And somebody out there was saying the right prayers, because the black rainclouds that threatened several times during the day failed to produce any precipitation to slow down the chain-reaction games.

One event holding the rapt attention of parents and other spectators was the greased pole competition conducted by Chief Joe Luciano of the Jensen Fire Department. At least two dozen youngsters of varying sizes, ages and agility tried their luck at making it to the top into which a $10 bill was tucked. Finally, after two hours of try and try again for several of them, 11-year-old Kevin Grzelka made it, amid cheers from even his youthful competitors.

Winners in the Optimist-sponsored watermelon contest were:

Three to five year olds: Harry Adams.

Six to ten year olds: Darin Manning and Christine Taibl.

11-15 year olds: Kevin van Herpen.

16 year old and up: Charles Manning and Chuck Bell.

The Chamber of Commerce sponsored the always-popular innertube race. Winners were:

Girls six to 10: Sandy Lanier, first, and Rachel Gonzalez, second.

Boys six to 10: Kevin McClellan, first, and David Snure, second;

Girls 11 to 15: Becky Gonzalez, first, and Dana Calvin, second.

Boys 11 to 15: Ricky Gonzalez, Jeff Taible, Scott Morrison and Kevin Howard.

Norman Sanders won the free-for-all. Silver dollars went to all the winners.

Plenty of eager youngsters vied for dollars and half-dollars in the races sponsored by the Lions Club. Winners:

50 yard dash (girls six to 10): Diane Duncan and Dronda Jacobs, first; Sandy Lanier and Joy L. Durawski, second.

Boys six to ten: David Trusso and Bud Tucker, first; George Kimbrell and David Bell, second.

100 yard dash (boys six to 10): Bruce Tucker, first; David McClellan, second;

100 yard dash (girls 11 to 15): Beverly Jackson and Christine Taibl, first; Diane Craben and Donna Geral, second.

Sack race, 50 yards, boys six to 10: Michael George Motts and Darren Black, first; Claudio Finazzo and David Prusson, Xavier Jones and David Bell, second.

Sack race, 50 yards, (girls six to 10): Sue Ness, Ronda Jacobs and Joyce Zurawski, first; Teresa Complesi, Sandy Lanier and Lori Long, second; Sack race 100 yards (boys 11 to 15): Kevin Howard, Jeff Taibl and Scott Bowers, first; Frank Compesi, Quenton Jacobs and Ricky Meister, second.

Sack race 100 yards (girls 11 to 15): Diane Craven and Theresa Prussing, first; Christine Taibl and Marsha Hess, second;

25 yard dash (boys three to five): Randall McClellan, first; Christopher Rice, second.

25 yard dash (girls three to five): Donnal Jean Lott, first; Lynn Kimbrell, second;

Potato race, 50 yards (boys six to 10): William Young and David Snure, first; Michael Laidlaw, David Bell and Bryan Futo, second;

Potato race, 50 yards (girls six to 10): Diane Duncan and Lori Long, first; and Sandy Lanier, first; Monica Direite, Vicky Young and April McCallum, second;

Potato race, 100 yards (boys 11 to 15): Quenton Jacobs, first; Jeff Taibl, second;

Potato race (girls 11 to 15): Robin Bell, first; Diane Craven, second.

In the potato bag race for little boys three to five, Ronnie Gonzales placed first, and Sammy Staley, second.

Geneva Zurawski and Sharon Staley shared honors for first in the mothers' races, with Donna Taibl and Rose Dinnesen taking seconds. Doug Taibl and Paul Scandizzo were first prize winners in the fathers' race, with Steve Snure and Ray Kling taking seconds.

The spectacular fireworks, which filld the evening sky were worth all the pushing, shoving and jockeying for space on both land and water. The Chamber spent $3,800 for them, according to Chamber executive Helen Richardson, and it was money well spent, according to all who witnessed it. Mrs. Richardson is hoping more donations will be forthcoming, because it was necessary to borrow from the general fund to complete paying for them, but she's sure the money will be forthcoming.

"Last year I received a donation from a couple in Jacksonville, who wrote that they enjoyed it so much they wanted to share in the cost," Mrs. Richardson said.

Only a few jarring notes marred the perfection of the day. During the afternoon, careless people began littering the causeway with beer and soft drink cans. Mrs. Richardson, upset by the thoughtlessness, recruited two willing volunteers, Kevin von Herpen and Jeff Taibl, as a cleanup crew. And during the evening, one man with too much to drink got belligerent and had to be led off to jail by sheriff's deputies.

But on all, with that many people, Fire Chief Luciano commented that it was a perfect celebration of the nation's birthday.

MCHS stadium ready for fall but more money is needed

BY SALLY LATHAM

Thanks to funds from the Economic Development Administration, Martin County High School athletes will go out for fall training on their own field this year, instead of having to borrow Jensen Beach Field at Stuart Middle School.

The new stadium located in the high school's "south forty" is getting the necessary finishing touches. The asphalt oval for track events is being graded smooth, and the grass which has been sprigged in on the football field is green and healthy, and nearly ready for its final tonsuring.

Vice Principal J.C. Williams, taking the Mirror on a tour of the acreage which will ultimately become a complete sports complex, pointed with pride to the single bank of bleachers on the south side of the field, and the excellent banks of light on both sides.

"They'll last forever, Williams said, but we still need so much more -- bleachers on the other side of the field for the visiting team -- dressing rooms, the press box, restrooms and a concession stand."

The stadium, with bleachers and lights, took up all of the $233,000 which was the school's share of the $700,000 EDA grant received by Martin County. The fund was divided three ways, with a third to the county, a third to the school system and a third to the city.

The county's portion has been used for the Emergency Services center, parks (including Langford Park) and roads, and the City of Stuart also put its share into roads and parks. The money for the stadium didn't stretch quite far enough, Williams said.

There is no chance of getting state funds, because the State Board of Education doesn't shell out for "frills" like athletics or cultural programs. So extras will have to come from the community.

"The Men's Clubs of Martin County raised the money for the track," the vice principal said. "And Maggie (Commissioner Hurchalla) gave us $3,000 for the backstop on the baseball field."

The baseball diamond will be located immediately to the south of the football stadium. Dressing rooms, if placed between the two, Williams pointed out, could be used for players in either sport.

Williams also has visions of a concession stand at one end of the field, with restrooms adjacent, so that one water line could serve both.

Rounding out the entire project would cost between $200,000 and $250,000, Williams estimated.

"If anyone wants to give it all," he said, "we'll name the stadium for him."

The sports complex, when complete, will be one of the finest on the Florida east coast. On adjacent acreage on the west side of the tract, separate playing fields for volley ball, softball, archery and soccer are fast developing. The area is already beautifully sodded with funds donated by private individuals.

"Our own crews are doing the labor, when they have the time," Williams said.

ANNE SHEPARD

Anne Shepard died Monday

Anne Young Shepard, one of the outstanding community leaders in the Jensen-Stuart area, died of a heart attack Monday evening at her home.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Shepard came to Jensen Beach many years ago with her husband, the late William Clark Shepard, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Shepard, whose estate, South Harbor, became known as Shepard's Park in Stuart, next to the Chamber of Commerce.

A major benefactor of the Martin County Historical Society of which she was a member of the board from 1964 to 1977, Mrs. Shepard was chairman of the fund raising committee to save the House of Refuge. She also was chairman of the committee writing the History of Martin County. She was responsible for the furnishings in the House of Refuge.

A graduate of Ohio State University in nursing education and administration, Mrs. Shepard established training courses for nurses' aides at Martin Memorial Hospital. She also established the United Services Organization in Stuart, and helped build the Armed Forces center which is now the Civic Center.

She served on the board of the Pioneer Occupational Center, on the lay board of St. Joseph's College, and was a communicant at St. Mary's Episcopal Church.

She was a quiet contributor to all worthy organizations in need of financial help in the area, and was instrumental in financing the education of several worthy students who needed help through college.

She is survived by a cousin by marriage, Henry A. Hawood of Cleveland.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. Saturday, July 8, at Elliott Museum on Hutchinson Island. Memorial gifts may be made to the House of Refuge.

Both the Elliott Museum and the House of Refuge will be closed all day Saturday in Mrs. Shepard's honor. Both flags will be flown at half-mast.

Aycock Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

VIRGIL WILSON, whose Commercial Street barbershop is the collection and discrimination center for all the news in town, and who has long been an unselfish contributor to the community, has earned the plaudits of the Martin County Blood Bank. Last week, Wilson joined the ranks of the "five gallon club," those who have donated that much blood to the bank. A Past commander of the American Legion and past president of the Lions Club, Wilson has been donating blood regularly since 1956. He's working on Al Boley, another regular donor to the blood bank. It's time for seasonal dog-days growling

BY SALLY LATHAM

The holiday weekend, which for some lucky people extended a full four days is over, and now we can settle down to our full-time summer business of growling about dog days and trying to convince the world that we're working for a living.

Which admittedly is difficult, when combined with staring absently at itinerant sailboats wafting down the Indian River and listening to big fish stories from people with time to go out and see.

The biggest fish tale of the week is corroborated by the 160-pound black tip shark hanging on the wall at Jim Hummel's Bait Box. Jim is being mysterious about who caught it, except to say he was out on the 30-foot Sailfish Ontario Sunday night with "a VIP who is taking a few days' vacation and doesn't want his name known." Jim and the anonymous VIP were 40 miles out, looking for swordfish, and using a 120 pound test line with giant mullet as bait when the huge and very indignant lady shark sank her toothy jaws over the tempting come-on.

"I think them an hour and 45 minutes to boat the beast, and Jim says he's still beat from his role in the catch. The big mama, incidentally, dropped her babies during the fray, so they're still out there ready to grow into big fish unless some larger predator gets 'em first."

Jim says other than that, the fishing is not winning any prizes out there in the deeps and Gene Sweda, first mate on the Outrigger's Fan L, concurs.

"The sea is too smooth and too hot for good fishing right now," Gene says. "We were out over the weekend, but we're not bragging about it. We're getting a few sails, a lot of bonita and a few kings, but nothing spectacular."

The fishing in the river, though, isn't all that much to complain about, says Dave Lamb of Jensen Bait and Tackle. Several nice catches are on his list for the last week, including those made by old stand-by Charlie Areni and Ed Wagner. Charlie and Ed reported 15 trout, up to four pounds, on Trout Tout near the nuclear power plant, and in another outing, Charlie bagged a couple of trout on Ryan's poppers, wading near the Boat House.

Others on the Bait and Tackle honor roll are: nine-year-old Jason Killer, a seven pound channel bass from south Indian River Drive, on live shrimp; 15-year-old Bob Sherman and his father Jim, who walked in, bought some live shrimp, and walks out into the river behind the shop, and came in an hour later with seven black drum, a six pound trout and a snapper.

Lou Papandero and Gene Stevens, also wading near the power plant, took 12 trout up to seven and a half pounds, five snook (they released four of them) and two five-pound channel bass, on live shrimp. John Kavanagh hooked a 15 pound snook on live bunker out of the surf near the Sheraton, and Michele Kavenagh, at the same spot, brought out two snook weighing nine and eleven pounds respectively, also on live bunker.

Ed Sauermann and his wife Grace reported in to Dave with seven snapper and three sand perch, on live shrimp in the Indian River.

Outside, Ed Koepka and Jim Allen caught four kingfish weighing up to 10 pounds, on big rebel.

Mrs. John Crawford, who with her husband previously owned the Snook Nook and who is now helping out present owner Tommy Stewart, reports some kind of a record in fidelity and its rewards.

"Earl Wilson, who's been coming over here from Belle Glade every weekend for the past 23 years unless he was sick or out of town, got 15 whiting from the surf on Sunday," she said. That's perserverance.

Other prizes on the Snook Nook list are: Tom Hargrave, 31 whiting from the surf; Charlie Areni, one snook and two trout from the river; Ed Wagner and Charlie, six trout and one channel bass.

Also, Bill Ditzel, a 20-pound snook; nine-year-old Mark Mitchell (son of Jensen Bank president Ron Mitchell), a seven-foot sailfish; Fred Horsley, a 43½-pound wahoo, out in the deep water; six-year-old Mike Bowdish, a nine pound black bass, out in the savannas; Walter Neff, six snook, out of the surf.

The fishing prospects will remain almost identical to the same for the next few days, according to the National Weather service out of Miami. The chain-reaction highs in the top eighties and low nineties promise to continue through the weekend, with more marathon lows in the mid seventies. And daily thundershowers and storms stay on the weather menu, though as yet no bothersome little hurricanes have been spotted a-building in the Caribbean.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

The logical sequel to the overwhelming approval of Proposition 13 by the people of California would be the adoption of an Amendment to the U.S. Constitution mandating a balanced federal budget and prohibiting deficit spending. It is widely acknowledged that deficit spending by the federal government is the single greatest cause of inflation. At the same time, recent surveys have shown that inflation is the number one concern of a majority of the citizens of this country.

Five and a half years ago, I introduced into the 93rd Congress a Resolution to amend the Constitution mandating a balanced federal budget except in times of national emergency. This Resolution also requires the repayment of the national debt now approaching three quarters of a TRILLION dollars - at the rate of 1 percent per year for the next 100 years.

This legislation was re-introduced in the 94th Congress and again in the 95th Congress as H.J. Res. 14. It presently has 61 Congressional cosponsors. Unfortunately there has been no action taken on this proposal as yet. It is hoped that the recent experience in California will serve as the impetus to initiate expressions of support for this fiscally responsible legislation. Hopefully, also, taxpayer-oriented organizations all over the country will begin to marshall their forces to assist in focusing Congressional attention on the need for this action.

The approval of Proposition 13 has become popularly known as a "taxpayers' revolt". To me, this is somewhat of a misnomer. The term "revolt" has connotations of violence perpetrated by unthinking radicals. I prefer to think of this action as an "awakening" of concerned and knowledgeable citizens who are becoming more aware of the direction our great nation is heading and who want to do something about it before it is too late.

Those who join in this effort will not only be doing themselves a favor, they will be insuring the long-term economic health and well-being of our country.

Sincerely,
L.A. 'Skip' Bafalis

To the Editor:

The celebration of your newspaper's 17th Anniversary is a fitting tribute to your outstanding career. Your years of service to the community as well as to the field of journalism are commendable and we look forward to your continued good work.

With warmest regards,

QUESTION: I'll bet you've never been a situation like mine. A broker as a buyer for my six-family building. He'll pay me $50,000, and my target price was only $46,000. The trouble is he has only $8,000 in cash. My first mortgage is $30,000. I wanted $6,000 above that, and I need cash. I'd hate to lose this buyer. If you've already run into a mess like this, please let me know if there's a way to salvage the sale.

ANSWER: Assuming that your first mortgage cannot be increased you might structure your sale as follows:

First mortgage	$30,000
Second mortgage	$12,000
Cash	$8,000
Price	$50,000

Write the second mortgage at 8 percent interest for four years. Before signing a contract to sell the property, obtain a financial statement from the buyer. Take his statement and a property brief to a commercial secondary lender, and ask him to buy your $12,000 second mortgage for $8,000.

If your buyer is sound and the property stacks up, you should have no problem in converting this loan to cash.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

Groundbreaking is held for new branch

Groundbreaking ceremonies took place on June 13 for the branch office building of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Fort Pierce. The site is on U.S. 1 at the St. Lucie Village Shopping Plaza.

First Federal's existing Port St. Lucie office opened in February, 1975 within the plaza. Since that time the total amount of funds in savings accounts has quadrupled and more than 1,300 mortgages totaling over $32,340,000 have been originated there.

The new office will be a full service facility of more than 4,000 sq. feet with drive-in convenience and ample parking. The location is considered ideal for serving the Port St. Lucie community.

J. Hal Roberts, vice president and branch manager, has been with the office since its inception. He serves on the new membership committee of the Chamber of Commerce, is a member of the PSL Community Center and its board of trustees, is president of the PSL Exchange Club, a director of the Kiwanis Club and a member of the Treasure Coast Jaycees.

Other Port St. Lucie office employees are: Robert Evans, assistant branch manager; Diane Greggs, head teller; Sally Hakes; Blythe Parrot and Barbara Stashak.

First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Fort Pierce has seven offices serving the tri-county area from Vero Beach to Stuart.

8 PERCENT FOR 8 YEARS

New federal regulations now make it possible for you to earn 8% interest on new eight year certificates of deposit. With daily compounding, at First of Martin County, that's an annual yield of 8.33%.*

We challenge you to find a better, safer investment than these new 8% eight year CD's at First of Martin County. The truth is that no bank pays as much, no savings and loan pays more. The minimum deposit is the lowest allowable—just $1,000.

And, your invested savings are insured up to $40,000 by an agency of the federal government.

Visit one of First of Martin County's five convenient financial centers and talk to a savings counselor. They'll be happy to show you just how profitable, and safe, an eight year CD can be.

At First of Martin County, we want to help you save.

NOT OFTEN that conservationists like to see bulldozers and cranes in the ...gically-sensitive Savannas, but last week was a notable exception. The ...y equipment shown above was used by General Development Corporation to ...ve a causeway improperly built on GDC land in the Savannas by the Universal-Adams Corporation five years ago. Before it was finished, a court order was issued to stop work on the causeway, and eventually, the causeway was ordered removed. Conservation alliances in St. Lucie and Martin Counties joined GDC in the application to remove the causeway and to restore the natural north-south flow of water in the area.

Savannas causeway s finally removed

...arly five years after construction ...n on a causeway across the ...ies to what was going to be a ...rise condominium development ... Indian River Drive, the causeway has been removed.

It was in October, 1973, that Universal-Adams, Inc., owner of a tract near Indian River Drive, north of Walton Road, began work on the causeway for its proposed Banyan Towers project.

State environmentalists took note of the construction and filed a suit against Universal-Adams to halt the work. The state won and the firm was ordered to remove the partially constructed causeway, which, it turned out, was being built on land owned by General Development Corporation, without GDC permission. The arguments against the causeway were that it was causing pollution of the water, it was blocking the natural north-south flow of the water, and permits needed for the causeway had not been granted.

Several years went by, but the causeway remained.

Finally, GDC and conservation groups of Martin and St. Lucie Counties jointly filed an application for a permit to remove the causeway. The Port St. Lucie city council also supported the permit application, but it was opposed by MGM Investments, a firm which in the meantime had bought part of the Universal-Adams tract after U-A dropped its Banyan Towers project idea.

The permit was recently granted, and for the last several weeks, a GDC bulldozer and dragline crew have been quietly removing the causeway.

The causeway was built by dredging from the surrounding land, so we just had the bulldozers flatten everything out again. The north-south water flow has been restored and two lakes are now filled with water," said GDC publicity spokesman Bob Ross last Thursday, the final day of work to remove the causeway.

No replating of vegetation will be done, Ross said, adding that GDC feels letting natural vegetation grow there on its own will be better.

"It won't take long to get back to normal," he said.

The causeway was a little north of 687 acres GDC recently deeded to the state so that it will come under protection as environmentally endangered land, but Ross said leaving the causeway there would hurt the state lands.

GDC's Port St. Lucie general manager, Bob Seeley, was on hand, as well as several area conservationists, for the last work on removing the causeway, and he praised the occasion as being a rare and good example of developers and conservationists working together to preserve the environment.

County Commissioner Maggy Hurchalla, Martin County Conservation Alliance member Dr. Walter Stokes, and Carl and Carol Herzog from the St. Lucie County Conservation Alliance were also present for the event.

German-American Club

The German-American Club will have a social on July 21, beginning at 7 p.m. at the Community Center in Port St. Lucie. The club has a picnic every Wednesday, beginning at noon at the North Beach Jetty.

Special events at Holiday Out

Although the "back to work" Monday cut short the Fourth of July holiday for many, some were lucky and had a good time.

Among many special events were Artie Smith's birthday celebration, arranged by wife Lisbee. The guests included Joe Arena, the Arbos, Ellmanns, O'Connells, Freemans and Rays. They say it was wonderful... drinks, food, dancing, and most important, good friends. And that is hard to beat.

Gert and Bob Long entertained son Rodney and wife Susan, and grandson David over the weekend, with Bob's famous chicken barbecue treats. It was Susan's first visit to H Out, but we told me she would be back often.

Among lot owners who enjoyed the long weekend at were Helen and Bob Weeks from Miami. This is the first time they have visited here in many a month and we hope they will be able to come more often in the future.

Mac and Jean McCabe spent the weekend with good friends the Fredricks from Venture Out at their home in Loxahatchee.

Catty Ullmann heard from Carrie Ullmann, who said she and Charlie are enjoying the lovely weather in New ...

The Mathews reported to Catty that they miss all of H Out and friends.

Josie Arena called Joe to say she had friend made it to New York all OK. Josie returned Monday evening by air. She is getting to be a regular at planes.

Kellington and Isabel Kennedy returned to their new trailer for a short stay.

Margaret and Joe Dietrich spent their 42nd anniversary with good friend Mable Rose.

Bob and Rita Royal enjoyed perfect weather here in H Out for their two week vacation. They had a wonderful surprise for their daughter Linda and her husband Lenny Oorbeek when they arrived Sunday. The Royals brought them a belated wedding present, an Apache pop-up trailer. They are staying in H Out for a few days for the first tryout.

A little late on this news: While on vacation Bob and Gert Long visited Evie and Marvin Smith and Jim and Marie Williams in W. Va. They are all well and Marvin is still building their new homes. Bob was treated to a wonderful extra treat when Jim and Marie opened up their bakery shoppe at 11 p.m. and let Bob sample all he wanted of his favorite goodies.

Artie and Lisbee Smith returned to H Out last Monday and have already been to Bradenton and returned with the "mostest" a new motor coach. The next big project is a new porch and new living trailer.

The Dietrichs left the fifth for Long Beach Island, N.J., to spend two weeks with their daughter and her family. Then they will continue on to Kingston, R.I. to Margaret's sister and then will attend internation meeting of the Abborist Assoc., held in Toronto, Canada. Joe is a past president. Returning to H Out and Pine Lake in September.

It was nice to see Bob Hendricksen and family up for the Fourth. Bob is recuperating well from his illness.

The Cecil Roys write they are getting busy in Vale, Michigan. They are hoping for better weather though, as it's been cloudy and rainy for some time now.

Alice Perrault writes that she is awaiting a visit from her granddaughter and her husband from California. She only hopes Ashburnham, Mass. is going to have good weather for them.

Ann Gilbert and her friend drove down from Mass. and reports that she had dinner with the C.J. Ouellettes. She also saw the Ed Frosts when they returned to Mass. who said they had a good trip home.

Nancy and Ted Lontz's two grandchildren, David and Nancy Melissa from Burlington, N.J., are to be here for an extended visit. They are flying down with a hostess chaperoning them for the first time. David is the older while sister will start first grade this fall. This makes their second trip to visit their grandparents here.

Mac and Vicki McKeever wrote a card telling that after they left Durango, Colorado they went west to Pueblo and saw fabulous scenery. On

Why Tuff-Kote can effectively rustproof used cars.

If anyone tells you they can rustproof your used car in one step, start asking questions. One-step rustproofing may look like it coats the metal on your car. But if it doesn't penetrate existing rust, it can seal in moisture and air, and create more rust damage than you may have had in the first place. Only Tuff-Kote uses an exclusive two-step system which stops rust cold in both new and used cars. First, Tuff-Kote professionals apply a unique penetrant that creeps through all welds, seams and crevices. It displaces moisture, and goes right down to the bare metal to stop any existing rust. Second, Tuff-Kote applies a special abrasion resistant sealant that locks out moisture and prevents any new rust from starting.

If you have a used car, your Tuff-Kote Dinol dealer can effectively rustproof it. And if you have a new car, your Tuff-Kote dealer is the only one who should.

In Appreciation

I want to express my deep appreciation and thanks, to our relatives, friends and neighbors, for their prayers, calls, cards and concern, not only at funeral time for my husband, Fred, but all during the past seven years of his illness. I will always be grateful.

HOW TO BUY A LAWN MOWER.

VACUUM ACTION. Check to see if it has powerful vacuum action that cleans your lawn as it mows, an optional mulcherizer that mulches grass clippings and an optional Sweepersies that pulverizes leaves.

SIX SPEED. Check to see that it has a 6 speed transmission for easy handling.

LARGE GRASS BAG. Look for a bag that needs emptying less often. One that's between the handles for easy maneuvering in tight spots.

TRACTION DRIVE. Be certain the self-propelled mower has rear wheel drive for greater traction.

CHECK LIST. Now, if it has everything we've mentioned, buy it. It's a Snapper.

All Snapper mowers meet A.N.S.I. safety specifications.

Bond-Tilton break slump with 3rd at Daytona

BY BOB FRYER

Jensen Beach auto racers Rusty Bond and Ren Tilton finally broke out a bad-luck slump over the Fourth of July holiday by finishing third in class in the Paul Revere 250 at Daytona International Speedway early Tuesday morning.

And for Bond, the holiday was especially good, because on Sunday, he teamed up with North Palm Beach racer Mike Meyer to cop a seventh place finish in the Pepsi Six Hour race. He and Meyer drove Meyer's Mazda RX2 in the rainy endurance race.

For the last three years, Bond and Tilton have always been ranked among the top 10 drivers in the GTU (small engine) class of the Camel Challenge series of races, but this year a string of engine and other mechanical failures have kept the local team out of the points in most cases. They finished fourth in class at the season-opening Daytona 24 Hours and eighth in class at the 12 Hours of Sebring, then started their series of disappointments.

There are about 15 races per season, and the Paul Revere 250 falls in about the middle of the season. For Bond and Tilton, the good finish at Daytona, even with a slower than normal engine in their Porsche 911, may encourage them to try some races in the western part of the country. With the season about half gone and Dave White of Tampa in a comfortable lead for the GTU drivers' championship, it's not likely Bond and Tilton can catch him. But a few more finishes like the one in Daytona could help them get back into the points picture and turn a bad season into a good one.

As usual, the expense of engine building and travel to western tracks will be a factor in the team's decision about how they should handle the second half of the season.

Ladies only....

A discussion of how to say "Have a nice vacation" to Fran Tener, who left July 5 for some visiting first to Jekyl Island, then on to attend the wedding of Myrtle Abrams' daughter, and finally to the Washington, D.C. area, brought up the idea of a "ladies only" luncheon.

It grew and grew and 20 of the women still in the park, met and went to lunch at Ocean Village. Toasts to all the July birthdays were given: Fran Tener on July 9, Millie Capra on July 11, and Betty Jones on July 14.

It was a fun time and all agreed it should be repeated. It was lovely getting acquainted with several who had not previously attended any get-togethers. Hope we continue the friendships.

Lew Prew says, now that their porch is finished and furnished and the carport is ceilinged and painted, and each brick is in place, the Prews are off in their motor home for a three-month vacation. As usual, there is no schedule or steadfast plan, but they will square dance in Georgia and North Carolina, visit in Highlands and Franklin, N.C. - then on to Opryland and then to Washington, D.C., visiting friends in Maryland and New Jersey. Then to a park in Mass. to renew acquaintances and in to Boston, on to Maine and Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, "and who knows from there!"

Lou urges everyone to save all your "don't wants" for the flea market.

A card from Hazel Ramsey says they are at their first stop on their summer traveling in North Carolina - and so far, so good. Regards to all.

Mayor leaves without voting; shopping center stands

BY BOB FRYER

After lengthy city council debate over whether two building permits to expand the Southport Shopping Center ought to be revoked, Port St. Lucie Mayor William McChesney was called from his home, where he is recovering from a recent stroke, to cast a vote on the issue.

Mayor McChesney, accompanied by his wife, Marge, came to City Hall about half an hour after he got the call, and was at City Hall for about 15 minutes. But he left without voting, apparently as a result of his wife's concern for his health.

The Mayor was hospitalized on Sunday, June 25, and stayed there several days before returning home. When called at the hospital, he said his doctor had advised him to avoid stress and controversy for at least four weeks. He made an appearance at the Fourth of July Parade last week, but did not planned to return to the council meetings until next week.

But Councilwoman Lolita Kernohan called McChesney and asked him to come to City Hall to vote on the permit revocation question after her fellow council members seemed on the verge of letting her motion to revoke the permits die for lack of a second. As it turned out, that's what happened anyway.

When Mrs. Kernohan made the motion to revoke the permits, Councilman Merle Anderson was, initially, silent. Councilman Schuyler Sharpe had already stated he would oppose the motion, and Vice Mayor Ike Reeb indicated he might possibly second the motion, but said he couldn't vote, since he was presiding over the meeting in the mayor's absence.

But discussion of the issue continued, and council members agreed to have Mrs. Kernohan call the mayor. In about 30 minutes, he came to City Hall, where he met for awhile with City Attorney Spencer Gilbert.

While the meanwhile, other items on the agenda were acted on, and when all other business was finished, council members began drifting out of the council chambers, until only Reeb and most members of the audience were left.

During the lull in the meeting, Mayor McChesney was spotted in a nearby hallway, talking to Gilbert. A couple of minutes later, Gilbert was heard talking through a closed door to Mrs. McChesney.

The meeting reconvened and ended swiftly when Reeb announced that "Mayor McChesney isn't coming in...he went home, is all I know."

Gilbert explained after the meeting was adjourned that he had briefly told McChesney what had transpired at the meeting before his arrival, but didn't discuss whether or how the mayor should vote. The city attorney went on to say that he found Mrs. McChesney crying, apparently concerned for her husband's health. He said she wanted her husband to go home and rest. He apparently followed her wishes.

The two permits in question are for a 7-11 food store and for a 10,000 square foot, single-story building to contain about 10 retail stores. They were issued several weeks ago as a result of a court order, and on Tuesday, workers in the field next to City Hall on Morningside Boulevard appeared ready to pour the footers for the buildings.

Fort Pierce Developer Peter Smith owns the Southport Shopping Center, which presently consists of just one building that includes several stores and City Hall. Since last year he has been seeking to expand the center.

In addition to the two buildings now under construction, Smith originally sought to have a Winn Dixie supermarket and a two-story office-bank building. However, when the city refused to issue the permits for all four buildings, the matter went to court. Circuit Court Judge C. Pfeiffer Trowbridge ruled the supermarket did not conform to the B-1 zoning that applied to a portion of the tract just west of the Country Store and ruled out the two-story building, because it was on a portion of the tract that the judge agreed was zoned residential. Smith had contended all of the land was zoned for business uses.

Before the judgment came in the lawsuit, though, a group of about 500 residents in the nearby country club area signed petitions seeking to have the entire tract rezoned for residential use and to only allow the existing building to be used for stores. The city council began action to pass such a rezoning law before the judge ruled, but did not finalize their vote on the matter until after the judge's decision. It was also after Smith picked up his permits and had workers start preparing the ground for the two buildings.

When those opposed to any expansion of the center pressed the matter, Gilbert said he would prepare an opinion on whether the city could revoke the two permits without opening itself up for a damage suit.

Several council members said they did not fully understand the opinion after reading it. Gilbert said, technically the city has a right to revoke the permits, but he said the city could lose damage suits against it if the court determined that Smith acted in good faith to build the buildings and the city acted in bad faith.

Councilman Sharpe said he did not want to gamble with city tax money and indicated he would oppose the permit revocation. Mrs. Kernohan said the fact that Smith knew of the city council's intention and actions to rezone the entire tract as residential land, yet proceeded anyway to start construction, was evidence he was acting in bad faith. Councilman Anderson said he wanted to vote with the wishes of the people, but said he was afraid Smith already had a vested right to the buildings.

The reason for the urgency in getting the full council to vote on the matter was that the pouring of the footers and foundations of the buildings appears to be imminent and it will be at least three weeks before a full council can be assembled again, due to vacations.

Two-mill school tax issue goes to voters on Tuesday

Campaigns by workers for and against the proposed 3-mill special school construction tax are entering the home stretch now, with the election to be held on Tuesday, July 18.

The St. Lucie County School Board asked for the election, and is proposing the two mill tax as a special tax, to be levied for two years, and to be assessed in addition to normal school taxes.

The first priority for the $6 million the tax is expected to raise, if approved, will be to build a new elementary school in the Port St. Lucie area.

The city's only elementary school was designed for 750 students, had more than 950 there this year, and should have about 200 more students enrolled when school starts in September, school officials say.

The Port St. Lucie Elementary School will go on double sessions this coming school year, and pro-tax forces say if the tax is not approved, other elementary schools in the county will soon be facing the same consequence.

In addition to building a second Port St. Lucie elementary school, the tax money is to be spent on a new elementary school in the north part of the county and for renovation of some older schools, especially the Fort Pierce Elementary School. School officials say the latter facility does not meet state standards.

Groups both for and against the tax have been active recently, with representatives of each group attending civic and social club meetings in the area to drum up support for their position.

Last week, the board of directors of the Port St. Lucie-River Park Homeowners Association voted to endorse the stand of the anti-tax group, known as Taxpayers for Revision of School Financing. The Port St. Lucie Civic League has also come out against the tax.

On Friday, July 14, at 7:30 p.m. at the PSL school auditorium, the pro-tax forces are holding a meeting, open to the public, to discuss the school tax issue. Opponents of the tax plan to attend to argue their case, too.

Also, on the weekend, pro-tax forces will be handing out brochures on the issue to motorists at six busy intersections in the Port St. Lucie area.

The anti-tax group also has brochures to support their position, and they plan to distribute them at shopping centers and place them on car windshields at local churches on Sunday.

At the meeting Friday evening, School Superintendent Dr. Nolan Skinner and school board members Thomas Bruhn are expected to be on hand to question and answer panel.

Anti-tax spokesman Don White says his group is not opposed to school taxes per se, but is against the current proposal to have the two-mill special tax for two years. He says he prefers to see the tax burden spread out over a longer number of years. He also says the need for the school in the northern part of the county came up at the last minute and indicated poor long-range planning.

"The school board just hasn't done its homework on this," he says.

Pro-tax supporter Mrs. Butch Post predicts it will be a close election, but is hoping her side wins. She says she has talked to a number of persons who were initially against the tax, but then "changed their minds when it was explained to them."

Mrs. Post says she feels the two-mill tax will be the quickest and cheapest way to finance the new schools, and says if the issue fails, the school board may raise the taxes from the present 6.95 mill rate to the maximum rate of 8 mills to finance the new schools.

"If they raise the rate to eight mills, they may never lower it, and we'd be paying extra taxes for a long time," she said. She also said a bond issue can't be presented to voters unless the 8 mill tax cap is reached.

White said he feels the school system could borrow the needed cash from local financial institutions without having to impose the special tax.

PGA Open is this weekend

Three hundred sixty of the top professional and amateur golfers in Florida are competing this week in the 72 Florida PGA General Development Open.

For the second consecutive year, golfers are challenging Sandpiper Bay's tough Saints and Sinners courses in quest of $4,000 top prize money.

"The courses are in top-notch condition," says Sandpiper pro Chuck Johnson, Jr. "Our crew has worked hard to insure that the fairways and greens are perfectly manicured for the Open. The difference in conditioning could be the difference between par and bogey."

"We're very excited about the field for this year Open," said Roger Genern, executive director of the Florida Section of the PGA.

"Defending champion Richard Bassett of Miami is at the peak of his game, and veteran Julius Boros has committed to play in the Open. Also in the field are 1968 amateur champion Bruce Fleisher, who plays regularly on the PGA tour, as well as Nate Starks and Dean Refram."

The pro-am event was played Wednesday. The 72-hole competition began today, Thursday, and concludes Sunday, July 16.

"Sandpiper Bay hosted the Open last year in cooperation with another sponsor," according to William Avella, president of General Development Corporation. "This year we decided to take on sponsorship of the Open on our own. We're flattered the Florida PGA has selected us as the site for the Open and are proud to be a part of their most prestigious tournament."

The purse has been increased to $36,000 and the red carpet has been rolled out at Sandpiper Bay.

"We've been looking forward to the 1978 Open since Richard Bassett took home top honors last summer," said Sandpiper Bay general manager Bill Pullen.

Free trees for PSL residents

Don't forget, it's Plant A Tree Week in Port St. Lucie, and if you're a city resident, you can have one free.

The Plant a Tree Week is the idea of City Councilman Schuyler Sharpe. With a portion of his salary as a councilman, Sharpe bought 1,300 tree seedlings to give to city residents. There are a total of 600 eucalyptus trees, 300 silk oak trees, and 300 bottle brush trees offered.

The seedlings are being given away at City Hall and at Sportsman's Park from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Thursday, through Saturday, July 13-15. Volunteers to help give out the seedlings are needed.

Only one tree will be given away per family, and seedlings will only be given to persons signing their names and showing their addresses are inside Port St. Lucie city limits.

Sharpe says the project is designed to make the city more beautiful, and says he hopes it is successful enough to become an annual event.

Community meeting scheduled to discuss pros & cons of tax

There will be a community meeting Friday, July 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the Port St. Lucie Elementary School auditorium, to hear the pro and con views of the millage election.

All residents involved are urged to attend.

Nergard seeks old state house post

Former State Rep. Charles "Chuck" Nergard, 48, has announced his intention to seek re-election to a sixth term in the Florida Legislature and will file as a Republican.

Nergard took a two-year hiatus from District 76 seat to devote his time to his family, he says.

"My wife was ill at the time and our two children were still in high school. I felt I could not devote the necessary time to perform legislative duties as I had in the past, or give the personal commitment the people of this district deserved," Nergard said.

"His wife Kay's improved health, their children's entrance into Indian River Community College, and the working world have enabled Nergard once again to enter the political arena.

A great deal of Nergard's campaign will center around his previous ten years in the state legislature.

"I was the first legislator to open a part-time legislative office in Fort Pierce and a part-time office in Jensen Beach. I would continue this practice," he says.

Nergard points out his attendance record during the ten years of regular legislative sessions was one hundred percent, with one excused day during a special session.

Nergard says one of his primary concerns is property taxes. "We need property tax relief, and we need tax reform. I believe the recent victory of California's Proposition 13 is indicative of the feelings of the people of Florida as well. Our people want government at all levels to be more efficient and rightfully expect full dollar value for each tax dollar spent," he states.

"Our recent literacy test proves that we are failing our most precious resource, our children. It is time to return to the basics of reading, writing, arithmetic and classroom discipline," he says.

"I have always been concerned about our roadways. I pledge active involvement with ending the stalemate over completion of I-95 in St. Lucie and Martin Counties, as well as using forceful efforts to secure the four-laning of Virginia Ave. and other major road improvements in St. Lucie and Martin Counties recently curtailed by Tallahassee."

"I want to make it clear that I will campaign strictly on my own merits. I have no intention of getting involved with personalities, only issues. I am seeking re-election to a sixth term based on my previous record and positive programs for the people of District 76," concludes Nergard.

Lots of jobs up for grabs as election season begins

A host of political jobs are up for grabs this voting season, and from now through Thursday, July 20, persons will be eligible to file candidacy papers for those positions.

One of the first races to shape up this year, and one that will likely be a lively contest, is the one between Democrat Dale Cassens, who now holds and wants to retain a seat in the state House of Representatives, and Charles "Chuck" Nergard, a Republican who held that seat for five terms and wants it back again.

Cassens, 43, is a citrus grove owner in Fort Pierce, who won the post in an election against Sue Hickman in 1976.

Nergard, 49, is a Port St. Lucie real estate broker who held the seat for five terms before deciding not to run for reelection in 1976. He said he decided not to run then because of his wife's ill health and because his two children were still in school. Now, he says, his wife is healthy and his kids have entered college and the business world.

Both Cassens and Nergard say they plan to run on their records.

The District Two County Commission seat of E.E. Green and the District Four (Port St. Lucie area) seat of Republican Ed Enns are both up for grabs this year.

Green announced his intentions to seek reelection on Tuesday and, though Enns has not made a formal announcement, it is expected he will seek to keep his post. So far, nobody has announced intentions to oppose either of the two incumbent commissioners.

In the judiciary, Circuit Court Judge C.Pfeiffer Trowbridge is reportedly planning to seek reelection, and so far he has no opposition. However, for a Circuit Court judge post being vacated by Wallace Sample, Chief Assistant Public Defender Bruce Wilkinson, 30, has announced himself as a candidate. He will be opposed by Vero Beach attorney Kendall Sharp.

County Judge William Tye was said to be considering entering his hat in the ring for a circuit judge job, but said Monday he will seek reelection to his present job.

A total of three school board jobs are on the line this year, but it is still unclear who will be seeking those posts. Thomas Bruhn, Samuel Gaines and Jeffrey Furst are the three board members whose terms will expire at the end of this year. It is not known what Bruhn's plans are; Gaines reportedly has decided whether or not to run but hasn't announced his decision yet, and Furst has indicated he's still pondering the question.

The books are open for filing for candidacy from July 13-20. The first primary election will be held Sept. 12, the second primary will be Oct. 10, and the general election will be Nov. 7.

25,000 fill Jensen for 4th celebration

BY SALLY LATHAM

Jensen Beach is literally putting itself on the national map with its annual Fourth of July Celebration, chairman Jon Chicky told the Chamber of Commerce Monday night, at the monthly board meeting.

Last week's big event drew a crowd of some 25,000 for the evening fireworks, Chicky said, and at least 10,000 of them were on the causeway.

The entire day was an almost unqualified success, Chicky noted, with the weatherman being the biggest benefactor.

"We'd had storms the day before the the days after all through the week," Chicky said. "Someone was doing the right kind of praying."

The crowds this year began arriving and encamping early.

"There must have been 300 people out there by 7:30 a.m.," Chamber President Fred Meeker estimated.

By noon, nearly every parking spot was taken, and the Kiwanis Club did a land-office business in selling refreshments.

"The food was sold out by 6 p.m.," Chicky reported. "We got a check for $130 from the Kiwanis."

The fireworks, everyone agreed, were the most dramatic in the history of the annual celebration. But unfortunately, the Chamber has ended up in the red for its red-white-and-blue production. The outlay for the pyrotechnics was $3,800.

In past years, the fireworks have been paid for with individual and organizational donations, plus donations made at a booth on the causeway on the Big Day.

"We had $1,139.80 in donations at the booth," Chicky said, "but we missed out on the boats."

Some of the stores, too, fell short of past years in their giving, especially the larger ones, Chicky noted.

"We still need donations," he said. "We're now at $1,262, and it should be at least $2,000 at this point."

It is usual for people who saw the fireworks and enjoyed them to send in follow-up gifts, Chamber Executive Helen Richardson said.

"Some people who saw it from their boat called in to say how much they appreciated them, and asked how they could donate," she said. "They sent in a check for $25."

The lack of contact with the boat people was an oversight this year on the part of the celebration committee. Usually the boat people are very generous, and in past years, when a collection boat has made the rounds, large donations have been cheerfully forthcoming. Chicky is hoping those who were among the vast boat gallery will mail in donations as a ways of saying thanks for the show.

Dr. Stanley Wampler offered to be responsible for next year's collection program. I suggested, and got board approval of "I gave" buttons to be pinned on contributors in exchange for gifts to cover the expense.

A suggestion that 25-cent admissions be charged for entrance to the causeway was turned down.

Meanwhile, Chicky is proceeding with plans for bigger and better fireworks for next year.

"Disney World and Jensen Beach will be shooting the biggest shells in Florida on the Fourth," he said.

Chicky commended all the people who contributed their services and know-how to making the program go so smoothly. He particularly cited Commissioner Frank Wacha, whom "we can't replace," and all the other men who keep showing up to help, year after year.

"They can stack up against any fireworks people in the country," Chicky said.

Another move toward putting Jensen Beach on the map are the maps which the Chamber has been able to order, thanks to the help of Ron Mitchell, president of the Jensen Beach Bank.

The maps are nearly ready, Meeker told the board, and will soon be available at the Chamber office and through participating merchants. The maps will include street names and places within the Jensen-Rio area, as far north as Walton Road.

The only organizations listed on the map, Meeker said, are the Chamber and the Jensen Beach Bank, the latter acknowledgement made because the bank donated better than a third of the cost, asking no maps in return for the gift.

Although no official business could be conducted at the Monday session because of the lack of a quorum, the board recommended unofficially that a $25 half-year membership be offered to new members, allowing them to advertise in the annual Fishing Guide. This will not apply to delinquent members who have been paying for only half a year, Meeker emphasized.

"Delinquent members will be made to pay in advance if they want to be included in the fishing guide," he said.

1,800 witness turtle nestings

This year's turtle festival was a bigger success than ever, both for the turtles and the watchers, according to Chamber President Fred Meeker.

At Monday evening's meeting, Meeker reported that a total of 1,800 people "turned turtle" for the Saturday night watch, the final night of the festival week.

Some 125 cars showed up for the nesting of the first turtle, Meeker said, with nearly 150 for the second and 200 for the third.

"With the estimated two and a half people per car," Meeker said, "that's from 1,800 to 1,900."

The turnout was considered excellent despite the sharp winds which blew all that weekend. But the growing sizes of the crowds each year has been a cause for alarm among state conservationists, and as a result, the format will probably be changed next year, Meeker said.

"Next year, the state will help with the man power and educational material," the Chamber president said. "We want to move the watch to the two weekends before July 4 and the two after."

Chamber officials feel that the extension of the watches will have a dual benefit – it will minimize the size of the crowds at the individual nestings, thus being less disruptive to the giant mama turtles while they lay their eggs in the sand, and will draw the attention of a wider sector of the touring public, catching the western travelers during the earlier watches and the midwesterners in the later ones.

The Turtle Festival is drawing an increasing amount of national attention, executive director Helen Richardson noted. She has been receiving letters and calls from all over the country concerning the event.

Candidates play 'wait-and-see' game

This year's candidates for county, state and national seats appeared to be playing a wait-and-see game, on the opening day of the qualifying period which began at noon on Tuesday.

The only ones coming in to the office of the Supervisor of Elections Peggy Robbins were incumbents – County Commissioner Maggy Hurchalla and school board members David Lee Anderson and Charles Covington.

Mrs. Hurchalla's filing fee was $638. A Democrat, she lives at 5775 S.E. Nassau Terrace. She is a housewife, and has served the county commission for the past two terms.

The other county commission seat open for competition in the November election is held by Tom Higgins. He has indicated he intends to run, but was in Atlanta this week and has not made official declaration to the elections office.

Thus far, no one has indicated that he or she intends to oppose either candidate.

Anderson, who lives in Port Salerno, holds the school board seat for District 3. He is assistant dean of public instruction for Indian River Community College.

Incumbent Covington serves District 5, in the Indiantown area.

At least one of the three circuit judge posts is wide open. Judge Wallace Sample announced some time ago he didn't intend to run again. The other two seats are held by Charles Smith and C.Pfeiffer Trowbridge, neither of whom so far has had any expressed opposition. The county judgeship held by David Harper is also thus far unopposed.

The early political seas in the state senate also remain calm. Sen. Don Childers is unopposed, as is Sen. Harry A. Johnston, who this week announced his intentions to run again.

One hot-spot for political jousting appears to be the state House of Representatives. Rep. Dale Cassens, Democrat, who is completing his first term, will be opposed by his predecessor, Charles "Chuck" Nergard, Republican, who dropped out of politics four years ago to go into private business.

The other House of Representatives seat, now held by Bill Taylor, will be contested by Dr. William Myers, the present chairman of the Martin County Commission. Dr. Myers last week announced he will resign effective Nov. 6 to run for Taylor's seat.

Another open seat is the Supervisor of Elections post, now held by Miss Robbins. She has said verbally she intends to run again, but she was not among the ones filing on Tuesday.

The U.S. House of Representatives seat held by L.A. "Skip" Bafalis is also open, although there have been no rumors of any opposition cropping up from any direction.

At the district level, the five seats on the Soil and Water Commission are open, and at the state level the governor's seat and all the cabinet posts are ripe for the picking. Gov. Reubin Askew, by law, cannot succeed himself for a third term. The field of candidates for the governor's race is already thick on both sides of the political fence.

Deadline for qualifying is noon on July 25. And the deadline for voter registration is Aug. 12, in order to be eligible for voting in the primaries.

Wednesday morning, two contenders for the District 1 school board seat came in to qualify. They are Moira Moore, co-owner of The Bridal Fair in Stuart, and Norma Miller, a housewife who was on the school bond subcommittee.

Both Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Moore are after the school board seat held by Ron Becky.

Mrs. Miller is wife of Robert Miller, vice mayor of Stuart.

Mrs. Moore is wife of Eugene M. Moore, speech therapist in Martin County schools. They have one son in high school.

ADE IT, after nearly 20 tries. Kevin Grzelka, 11, son of the Grzelkas, finally made it to the pole's elusive top, and nabbed bucks tucked therein. He and other kid who tried the climb the July 4 competition put out fifty dollars worth of energy in mpt. (Staff photo by Sally)

Don't fret: It's Ma Nature's B.O.

People running up and down the river these days yelling "foul" on their neighbors may quit raising a stink. The odor emanating from the otherwise beauteous waters is the fault of no one but Mother Nature.

Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Helen Richardson, beset by complaints from visitors and residents unfamiliar with the almost inevitable summer complaint, wrote to Dr. Archie McCallister, director of the Environmental Health Section of the Department of Rehabilitative Services, for the official explanation of the unpleasant smell arising from our otherwise most admirable natural asset.

Dr. McCallister obliged by responding with the following:

"The foul odor noticed by those driving and living along the Indian River Drive (Sewall's Point, Jensen Beach and points north) is caused by the decomposition of river grasses. Not only do the rotten grasses smell, but to make matters worse, a type of algae (blue green) grows profusely on nutrients released from the rotting grasses.

"The odor caused by the growth of the blue green - algae has been described as 'smelling like sewage.' It is important to keep in mind that this is a naturally occurring problem which has been modified by man's activities. Bulkheading and construction of causeways interrupt the normal water flow. Destruction of mangroves at the water's edge helps to make the problem more noticeable. Fertilizing nutrients also wash from roads and lawns, thus providing growth nutrients for these algae.

"The problem is especially bad in the summer because of the prevailing easterly winds which concentrate the grasses along the western shore line of the Indian River, thus creating heavy concentration of these odor-causing materials."

BIG BAD MAMA, a blue-tip shark weighing in at 160 pounds, was brought in out of the deep water last week, by a fishing party which included Jim Stinefelt of the Bait Box, who is "holding her hand" to show off the now-helpless jaws. It took nearly two hours to board her, Stinefelt says. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

But he's not. And that's because he figures Blue Shield owes him "many hundreds, maybe a thousand or two," more for mistakes that he says haven't been corrected.

Alampi, a 65-year-old Port St. Lucie resident, says he's a retired insurance man and that "it makes my blood boil to see the way they're handling claims."

As a result of a request for an audit on April 4, 1978, Alamp received a total of 16 checks from Blue Shield in his mail in mid-June and received another one the following week. The checks totaled $504, Alamp says, adding that they're for a total of "22 corrections and partial corrections" that Blue Shield of Florida (this state's administrator of the Medicare program) has made to his bills over the past 15 months.

Claiming, "I'm probably the healthiest looking sick man you ever saw," Alamp says he is actually suffering a number of ailments. They include cancer of the colon, hypertension, pedal edema, diabetes, symptomatic congestive heart failure, ASHD, and arthritis.

In March, 1973, Alamp was operated on for cancer. Portions of his colon, urinary bladder and stomach wall were removed. Since then, he has been receiving weekly chemotherapy treatments from Dr. James Grossnickle in Stuart.

In July, 1973, Alampi became eligible for Medicare and in December, 1974, he suffered a heart attack.

Alamp says he has been partially disabled since 1953, and totally disabled since 1960.

"I moved down to Jensen Beach in early 1961, back when the only things to do in Jensen Beach were to drink and chase women and fish. I was in no shape to chase women or drink, so I fished a lot," Alamp says. Besides, he adds, he's happily married. After a few years in Jensen, he and his wife and son moved to their current residence at 110 E. Prima Vista Boulevard.--

As a result of Alampi's ailments, he pays frequent visits to a number of doctors in Stuart. Dr. Grossnickle and, when he's not in, Dr. Frederick Krumkopf, treat him once a week for cancer. Dr. Powers and, in his absence, Dr. James Gray, treat him every other week for cancer, hypertension, arthritis, pedal edema, diabetes and ASHD. He sees Dr. John Schoppe eight or nine times a year for foot care, and Dr. Schoppe says an infection in either foot could result in the loss of the limb. Alampi also has a complete physical twice a year.

All together, Alamp says, a total of 88 doctor visits a year have been ordered for him by his doctors, and he has notes from them, saying the visits are necessary. Yet he says a recent letter from a Medicare official in Jacksonville states he is only entitled to 24 office visits a year.

The dispute over the number of allowable office visits is just one of many bones of contention Alampi says he has to pick with Blue Shield of Florida over his Medicare coverage. He says that often when a doctor visit is allowed, the amount covered by Medicare is inconsistent.

Under the Medicare program, the federal government pays up to 80 per cent of medical bills, depending on the amount Medicare officials determine is allowable for the treatment rendered. But Alampi says he has numerous examples of a different amount paid by Medicare for the same treatment.

For example, on a drug that he receives an injection of once a week, Medicare has paid 80 per cent of from $1 to $8. For doctors' fees he's received 80 per cent of from nothing to $15, when the total bill was $50, and for a sigmoidscopy he's been paid 80 per cent of a different amount for every exam. For a liver scan, the doctor's fee has always been $50, but Medicare has paid 80 per cent of from $25 to $50.

For visits to Dr. Schoppe, 80 per cent of from nothing to $12 has been allowed. And when a $30 bill for a visit to Dr. Schoppe was submitted on Jan. 3, 1978, Alampi was told he had exceeded his limit on benefits for this year.

Alampi first complained to Medicare in September, 1976, and says to this date a letter he wrote back then has still not been answered.

But on April 4, 1978, Alampi wrote to Medicare officials in Jacksonville and sent a copy of the letter to U.S. Rep. L.A. "Skip" Bafalis. In the letter, he requested a complete audit of his claims since he went on Medicare in July, 1973.

Bafalis checked into the matter and got a reply from Medicare Service Representative Marjorie Parker, stating that there is a six month time limit for requesting a review of Medicare claims, unless good cause can be shown for a delay in the request. She also said that if more than $100 is at issue, he can have a hearing in Jacksonville.

JOSEPH ALAMPI

Alampi says he doesn't want a hearing, just a complete, accurate audit, and says as a result of his many ailments, "my health was such that although I knew Medicare was in errors on a large percentage of my claims, I was not able to correspond with them to call these errors to their attention."

When Alampi received the 17 checks in mid-June, he also received records of his Medicare claims. For a total of 82 mistakes, Alamp says, there was a note on the medicare claims records stating, "This is an adjustment to a claim and is the result of your request for a review."

But he says even some of the corrections are incorrect, and that many mistakes were not corrected. He says he still wants a complete audit.

The local Medicare claims office in Fort Pierce was called by The Mirror to determine whether Alampi is to get his requested audit. The woman answering replied that this would be up to Medicare officials in Jacksonville, but said it is a federal offense for specific information to be given out about a claim.

Meanwhile, Alampi has written Bafalis again, and Bafalis has made a new inquiry into the matter. As of yet, he has received no answer.

"I'm tired of hearing people say the doctors are ripping off Medicare. If anyone is doing the ripping off, it's Medicare itself. They've admitted ripping me off 82 times; and that's only a fraction of what they've done," Alampi says. He notes that he has total confidence in his doctors and says what they charge for their services is reasonable. He cited several examples where doctors provided what "is considered extra service at no extra charge."

When asked if he felt his fight over Medicare claims was worth it, Alampi said that after "thoughts of pulling the plug," he decided he wants his doctors to keep him alive as long as possible, "because the longer I have to suffer in this life, maybe the shorter time I'll have to spend in purgatory." He also says he's alive today, not only because of good doctors, but because of many answered prayers.

Letters to the Editor

...n Editor:

...is becoming increasingly appa... that those who are promoting the ...ill-2 year only tax for new school ...nstruction will continue to misre... ...ent the standtaken by those who ... opposed to it. Mainly the ...axpayers for Revision of School ...ancing" The name of our ...mmittee should speak for itself but ...there by any doubt, I want to make ...stand perfectly clear.

We do not object to the ...nstruction of new schools unless the ...d thereof has not been factually ...monstrated. A general unsupported ...ement that present facilities are ...fficient will not suffice.

We further object to the proposed ...hod of financing which departs ...m long established methods which ...vide that capital expenditures for ...ool construction purposes by ...ead over a longer period of time.

3. We question the wisdom and practicality of investing over a million dollars to renovate a school (Delaware Ave. Elementary) which is approximately 62 years old, especially since a major project of this nature will necessarily involve most of the work being done during school hours.

Let us now consider the first objection. As of now we have seen nothing but general statements of need coming from the school administrative offices. We are well aware of and support the need for providing a good education for our children, something we have been paying for, for many years, but have not received. This is evidenced by the results of the state mandated pupil examinations. New buildings alone will not correct this failure.

When a community of our size pours approximately fifteen million dollars a year into local education and is asked for six million more in a period of two years, we feel the taxpayers are entitled to a detailed report on how this money has been and is being spent, including details of the necessity for additional tax money. We feel we should be told why, over the short period of five years, four new schools, three elementary and one high school at a cost of approximately 15 million dollars has suddenly been found necessary. This need, if warranted, could and should have been known at least 10 years ago had an adequate method of long range planning been in effect.

Let us look at our second objection and consider the inequities of the 2 mill-2 year only tax proposal. Consider, if you will, a rental property assessed for tax purposes at $30,000, which would warrant the imposition of an additional annual tax of $60. Certainly the owner would increase the rental by at least $5 per month, but at the expiration date of the 2-year taxing period, is it reasonable to believe he would reduce the rental in the same amount as that by which it is raised? We believe not, that the renter would continue to pay for a "dead horse" and the extra $5 per month would go into the owner's pocket. Fair? Equitable? By whose standards?

Consider also the homeowner age 60 years and over, who would pay this tax, his full share for the two year period. Shortly thereafter he expires and the home is purchased by a young family with children. This family will enjoy, free of any school construction tax, these new schools and pay only the tax for maintenance and operation. Does this represent the American concept of fairness? We doubt it.

Thousands of people fall into these two categories. Is it any wonder that they cannot understand why they should provide "free wheeling" for so many others?

Our committee has had conversations with several persons knowledgeable and experienced in the field of school financing and have been advised that there is at least one method other than bond issue (which this committee has never proposed) by which financing may be obtained and which would have a much higher degree of public acceptance, but it is not our job or our responsibility to tell the school board what to do.

In closing, I want to repeat that we stand for and will support good education and school facilities when the need is adequately demonstrated and the financing fair and equitable. We will not support an easy way out of the dilemma brought about by the lack of long range planning. The taxpayers are fed up with picking up the tab and writing blank checks.

From this it may be judged we strongly recommend and urge a "no" vote on July 18, thus forcing the board of education to do the job for which it was elected.

Sincerely yours,
Don White

1977, Julius Boros reached $1 on in career earnings on the PGA after two years of struggle for the $10,000. He made himself the a 14th millionaire with a tie for in the Pleasant Valley Classic, a ney" that was worth just $493.75 m.

ros turned his back on a career as ccountant and headed out on the in 1950 at the age of 30. Two years , he won the U.S. Open in Dallas 11 years later, he captured the title at Brookline, Mass, by ting Arnold Palmer and Jackie in a playoff.

third major title was the PGA mpionship, which he won at San Antonio in 1968 by again beating back a challenge from Palmer. At age 48, he became the oldest PGA champion.

His longevity in the game is in large measure due to the trueness of his swing, surprisingly easy and long for so heavy a man, and also due to his relaxed approach to the game.

A gallery favorite, Boros has finished on the top 20 money list 10 times. He was PGA player of the year in 1963 and 1968, and was on the U.S. Ryder Cup team four times between 1959 and 1967.

Boros has said he will continue to play the tour as long as he is able, but he has been troubled with back and hip ailments in recent years. When asked not long ago about retiring, he replied, "Retire to what? I already play golf and fish for a living."

Little turtles elude followers in aquatic game of tag

BY SALLY LATHAM

Where do those little turtles go, when they've released from the protective shelter of the House of Refuge?

That was the question Ross Witham, environmental specialist who for years has become known as the daddy of turtledom at the Gilbert's Bar House of Refuge, was trying to answer Friday afternoon, when he and a contingent from the Martin County Environmental Center took 15 of the six-month-old babies to the ocean and turned them loose.

The little green turtles, as always, were properly tagged. But Witham, ever-curious about what direction they take, tried a new tactic in answering the question. He put two scuba-diving "detectives" on their trail as the amphibians headed out to sea.

It was quite an excursion. In the party were the divers – Doug Cooke, a senior majoring in aquaculture at Florida Institute of Technology, his aquatic "flagbearer," Jane Doucette, also an FIT student, Dennis Clark and Tom Stiles, of the Environmental Center, and a passel of eager youngsters from Small World Learning Center.

The adventure was an athletic one, for everyone concerned. The release of the little greens was originally to have been made from the pier at Seminole Shores, a rugged and hot walk through the weeds, sands, and the world convention of mosquitodom which was obviously in session at the time.

When everyone was gathered at the pre-appointed spot, Witham decided the waves were too rugged to try it from there, so the hike began again, this time back to the cars, up to the House of Refuge, and another sandy quarter-mile to a point past the ancient coquina-rock field, where the seas were less vigorous.

Then another long wait under the unflagging 90-degree sun while a bureau photographer from another newspaper rushed back into Stuart to get the right lens for her camera. By the time the turtles at last were taken from their ice-chest coop, Cooke and Doucette more than welcomed the wade into the water, and the rest were ready to follow them in, clothes and all.

The results of the experiment were disappointing, Witham said Monday.

"They didn't get to follow a one," the turtle expert commented. "To follow them, you have to stay behind, and they didn't get on the track of any. One turtle came up beside Jane, but it got scared away."

Witham isn't giving up, though.

"Next time we're going to try a fluorescent dye technique, on the divers can see where they're going."

Thus far, to Witham's knowledge, none of the greens released since the program began 18 years ago has come back to home shores. But that isn't significant, because it takes the young turtles 15 years to reach maturity. Increasing reports are received yearly that turtles tagged at the House of Refuge are showing up elsewhere – in the Islands, Nicaragua and further down into South America.

The green turtles have been of particular concern because a few years ago, they were threatened with extinction.

"From 1960, when the program started, to 1975, we had a 108 percent increase in the greens," Witham said, "and there's been a big increase in nesting green turtles this year."

NOW, YOU CAN BEAT THE U.S. TREASURY

Six month treasury bills have always been a good investment—offering safety and, usually, a good return.
But, now you can beat them with a six month "Money Market Certificate" from First of Martin County.

Here's how it works.
Each Monday the U.S. Treasury auctions off treasury bills, setting an average bill rate for that week.
At First of Martin County a rate above the treasury rate will be established which will be effective the following Thursday through Wednesday and may change every week.
A minimum deposit of $10,000 is required.*

The truth is that no bank pays as much interest on a similar certificate.
And, as usual, your invested savings are insured up to $40,000 by an agency of the federal government.

Visit one of First of Martin County's five convenient financial centers and talk to a savings counselor. They'll be happy to show you just how profitable, and safe, the new six month "Money Market Certificates" can be.

FIVE LITTLE GREEN TURTLES are ready and eager for their big swim into the unknown vastness of the sea, but Number Six, top of photo, obviously has other ideas about the life on the ocean wave. After all, there aren't any sharks in that nice tank back at the House of Refuge, and he knows the food's good there. The feet belong to one of the delighted kids from Small World Learning Center. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

TURTLE CHASERS Jane Doucette and Doug Cooke, both students at Florida Institute of Technology, wade out into the waves near the House of Refuge, waiting for the release of 15 adolescent green turtles. The little amphibians eluded them this time, but they'll try again, next time with fluorescent dye, says Ross Witham, marine scientist. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

ROSS WITHAM, known as the turtle specialist of Hutchinson Island (center) watches the take-off into the ocean of his small flippered friends, released so they can grow, flourish and multiply. With him are Dennis Clark (half-hidden from the camera) and Tom Stiles, new boat captain and marine scientist at the Environmental Center. The identity of the pretty lady obviously getting ready to join the turtles for a swim is not known. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

STORM VICTIM–This Florida Holly tree came tumbling down in the back yard of Rodger Corson on Castana Court in Port St. Lucie last Thursday when a storm, believed to have contained a tornado, struck the northern section of the city. Corson said the rain was swirling from every direction and the noise was so loud he didn't hear the tree fall. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

amaged in high winds

h winds, believed possibly to been a tornado, swept through ern Port St. Lucie around 6 p.m. esday, July 5, uprooting several causing minor damage to a few s, and ripping out a fence and net he city tennis courts at sman's Park.

ger Corson of 142 Castana Court ts he and his wife were listening radio station and watching sion shortly before the storm d through, and said he heard no ced warning about the severity storm.

n and hail, accompanied by high , whipped through the area, and n said he and his wife were ing a tree in a neighbor's yard, e if it was going to blow over, the winds got really bad.

r awhile, there was h the size rbles," Corson said, adding that what he feels must have been a do struck, "there was swirling oming from every direction and uldn't see in front of you."

son said the rain and wind made ch noise that he and his wife hear it when a Florida Holly lian Pepper) tree, about 60 to 80 all with widespread branches, prooted about 15 feet from his porch.

ral smaller trees in yards of 's neighbors, plus several ion antennas and small alumi-num structures blew down, but city Public Safety Director Douglas Stout said by far the most costly damage occurred at the city tennis courts at Sportsman's Park.

The net for one of the two courts was blown away, as well as the full length of tall fencing along the east side of the courts, and part of the fence along the south side.

On Tuesday, Acting City Manager Gerald Van Patten said he had received one estimate of damage to the courts, and that it was $1,100.

Stout says he has not heard whether the winds were confirmed as a tornado or not.

Whatever it was, it hit around 6 p.m., just an hour and a half before the city's disaster committee met. Stout said that he had time to tour the damaged area before the meeting, though.

The storm is one of several severe afternoon showers to hit the city in recent days, but was more intense than normal. The last time winds speculated to have been from a tornado hit the city was in March, when numerous aluminum screen porches and pool enclosures were blown off homes in the South Port area.

HOSPITAL

Fred Smith, 11 Kumquat, was taken to Martin Memorial Hospital July 5 for treatment.

Eloia Hoyt, 4th St. and Hibiscus, is in the hospital.

Cliff Cassaday, 20 SW 10th, is back for further tests.

RAMBLING AROUND

Some folks go around the world and other just around the corner, but all have fun, such as when Freda Peterkin and Hilda Giblin took off the other day.

Almost at the drop of a hat, off they went, north on A-1-A to St. Augustine, where the Chamber of Commerce advised them to take the sightseeing train. They did and saw it all, oldest of everything, then topped it off with a huge submarine sandwich and bottle of Fresca. Next day, heading across state, threatening thunderheads and deluge sent them scurrying back to OBP. But, they did have a grand time and welcome change.

Others take an ocean cruise, with something doing every minute and most of it good eating.

Len and Betty Brunt, Barney and Nat Chase, Elston and Doris Lehning returned Friday from an inland cruise, and it was almost noontime before they were up and around for an interview, as up at dawn and midnight snacks had taken their toll.

To hear them tell it, it was the greatest: visiting uninhabited islands for a swim in crystal clear water, wonderful entertainment day and night. Barney wasn't quite up to all the jaunts, but never missed his "table duty". All would like to do it all over again.

Keith and Barbara Creager are back from going up north with Ruel and Beulah Mertz to attend the wedding of their daughter. The Mertzes are staying on for a while at Pretty Lake, Ind., where they have a home on the lake, but sent word they wish they were back here to all the park activities.

The Creagers will remain here until January, when their son, now at El Toro, Calif. AFB, will be out of the service and can join the around-the-world cruise in their 32-foot sailing yacht.

Mary Kutil of 2 West End and Astoria, L.I., by way of 10 years at the Atlantic Court Apts. in Stuart, went to the recent pot luck and says she likes it here and hopes she can get acquainted. Her brother Joe is traveling around now, visiting all his relatives in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

Mary, OBPers will see that you get acquainted, and fast.

Jim and Teresa Innes, of 1 NE 3rd St. and Detroit, Michigan, are finding OBP "just great" and bridge fishing not too bad. Jim was a ticket taker at Olympia and Sports Arena for 20 years, while Teresa worked at nearby T.B. sanitarium. They have a daughter, two sons and four grandchildren, so next month they'll go north to visit them at Union Lake, Michigan.

Fred and Anna Schmidt, 11 Kumquat, came here in 1964 from Chicago, where Fred was a gas welder at Crane Co. for 28 years. They have a daughter and two granddaughters at Ft. Atkinson, Wisc., who often come down for a visit.

LETTERS FROM OBPers

Ellen Nixon of Center St. writes to Jim, who had to come back early, from P.O.Box 159, Jonesport, Maine 04649, where she is staying while her mother, Vi Alley, exOBPer, recovers from car accident.

She says: "Mother improving rapidly, they can handle dressing OK and Vi is even up to driving her car a bit." It is cloudy and cool with lots of rain, but they did have a warm day last week. Ellen doesn't know just when she can come back to OBP, but hopes it's soon.

The Groves are planning to fly to Colorado for three weeks in July, but say they sure miss the shuffle courts

Currently the school tax level is 6.95 mills and a budget for the upcoming school year, which is to be voted on at the Tuesday, July 25, meeting, is also based on a 6.95 mill tax levy. Bruhe said he did not think that in the wake of the tax issue defeat the regular tax rate would be raised.

"The people have spoken and I would not want to change that. It wasn't a close election and I don't see how we can have something the people don't want. We can't go in the back door to get what we couldn't get in the election and I, for one, would not vote to raise the tax (6.95) rate," he said.

Dr. Nolan Skinner, superintendent of the county schools, and school system finance director Frederick See were both unavailable for comment before The Mirror press deadline. Butch Post of Port St. Lucie, who worked for the school tax, was also unavailable for comment.

Don White, a River Park resident opposed to the tax and a member of the Taxpayers for Revision of School Financing, said he was pleased with the vote.

"Due to the large margin by which it was defeated, we feel some of the school wave of Proposition 13 did reach here. While we would rather have had the issue disposed of on its merits rather than an outside influence, we're glad the vote turned out as it did," he said.

White added, "People are aroused and the taxing bodies had better start taking notice."

As for another method of financing the school for Port St. Lucie, White noted that, prior to the decision to ask for the two-mill tax, school finance director See had come up with a proposal to borrow $2.5 million for construction of the PSL school and to pay off the loan over a four year period. White said if this is done and the second elementary school, which had been proposed for the north part of the county, is dropped from immediate plans, the school board could weather its financial bind until state construction funds became available in a couple of years.

Currently, and for the next two years, state school construction funds due to St. Lucie County are committed to paying for the new Westwood High School.

The breakdown of voting habits in Port St. Lucie shows that in three of the four precincts in the local area, the voter turnout was higher than the county average.

At Precinct 20, the North Port Marina, a total of 887, or 34.6 per cent of the precinct's registered voters, cast ballots Tuesday. The totals for that precinct show 737 against the tax and 139 for it.

At Precinct 21, the Spanish Lakes Recreation Hall, only 220, or 14.9 per cent, of the 1,467 registered voters turned out, with 173 against the tax and 47 for it. This is the only precinct in the Port St. Lucie area where the margin of opposition to the tax was less than the county average. In the county, a total of 83 per cent of those voting opposed the tax, but in Spanish Lakes, the margin of opposition was 78.6 per cent.

At Precinct 22, the City Hall, a total of 334 voted against the tax and 51 favored it. The voter turnout there was higher than the county average of 22 per cent. A total of 378, or 28 per cent, of that precinct's 1,338 registered voters cast ballots Tuesday.

At Precinct 23, the Community Center, 618 of the precinct's 2,048 registered voters turned out, representing a 30 per cent voter participation. The margin of opposition to the tax was 512 against, 104 for.

Internal auditor suggestion dropped by Mrs. Kernohan

BY BOB FRYER

A proposal by city Councilwoman Lolita Kernohan to have Charles Helmer, recently retired Martin County School system financial director, serve as a volunteer internal auditor for Port St. Lucie met stiff opposition Monday night.

Following debate on the matter, Mrs. Kernohan said she will drop her request.

The idea was proposed last week by Mrs. Kernohan, who said Helmer retired from the school system on June 30 and volunteered to be an internal auditor at no expense to the city. Helmer is a Port St. Lucie resident.

Prior to Monday night's council workshop meeting, Port St. Lucie Civic League directors went on record opposing the idea of an internal auditor.

At the workshop meeting, Mrs. Kernohan responded to the Civic League position by saying she was "astounded" at the opposition.

"For years the city has been seeking citizens with special talents to serve the city on a volunteer basis," she said, noting that many such persons do so on committees.

Mayor William McChesney, however, spoke against the idea of an internal auditor.

"We have an excellent city accountant who has been praised by the state auditors for the work he's done. I know Charles Helmer personally and I like him. He's a great guy with an excellent reputation. But I feel it's a disservice to our city employees. If they're not doing a good job, fire them...This is an insult, actually, to the city itself," he said.

He further pointed out that the city has numerous budget reviews before the city budget is adopted and that anyone is welcome to look at the city books.

Councilman Schuyler Sharpe said he is proud of the city employees and doesn't see the need for an internal auditor.

"What's he to do and who will he report to; what's his function to be?" he asked.

Councilman Merle Anderson said he thought it was a good suggestion and that it would be good to have someone "to check on things", but also added he was not accusing anyone in the city of any wrongdoing.

McChesney said the city plans to hire a city manager soon and that he expects the new man will be a good one. He said, "We don't need him (Helmer) interfering."

With the stalemate of two persons against the internal auditor and two espressing favor for the idea, the discussion was dropped. However, after the meeting, Mrs. Kernohan said she will not pursue the idea any further. Vice Mayor Mike Reeb was on vacation.

In other action, council members discussed and found no fault with a proposed ordinance to adopt state traffic laws, pledged to give John Saitta and his neighbors on Midfield Lane a logical explanation for proposed address changes (or else drop the proposal), and sent a proposed ordinance banning parking of trucks and construction vehicles under some circumstances back to the drawing board. They also gave the green light to Acting City Manager Gerald Van Patten to pursue bank financing for the proposed new city hall.

A plea for a setback variance to allow construction of a home on a lot on Crowberry Drive fell on receptive ears and approval will likely be granted next week to advertise for a public hearing on the matter. The landowner is seeking a variance to the setback line to allow room for building a home. An inaccurate survey showed the lot was 125 feet deep, but it is actually only 100 feet deep. It borders Long Creek.

DICK LUNDIN, president of the Port St. Lucie Community Center, was honored last week by the center's directors when they voted to approve a resolution naming the new addition to the center "Lundin Hall." The gesture was made to thank Lundin for the work he has devoted to the center over the years. Lundin said he was completely surprised by the resolution and is very proud to be so honored. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

Center's addition is 'Lundin Hall'

Sun City may have its London Bridge, but Port St. Lucie will soon have its Lundin Hall, an edifice of monumental achievement on behalf of the community by its namesake, Dick Lundin.

Friday, at its regular monthly meeting, the board of directors of Port St. Lucie Community Center voted unanimously to name the Center's new 44 x 70 foot assembly hall in Lundin's honor, in recognition of "his tireless dedication to the Center's objectives and growth."

The resolution reads:

"Whereas, for the past five years Dick Lundin has been the motivating dynamic force behind the continuing growth and development of the Port St. Lucie Community Center;

"And whereas his vigorous leadership, effective execution and dogged perseverance have made possible many of the achievements of the Center;

"And whereas his dedication and devotion to the furtherance of the Center's objectives, his faith in the potential of the Center to play a significant role as a community institution, and his unswerving determination to translate dreams into realities have inspired others within this community to come forward as active participants in this venture;

"And whereas he has given freely of himself in his personal pursuit toward the Center's goals;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that the Port St. Lucie Community Center Board of Directors, meeting in regular session on July 14, 1978, does hereby acknowledge the extraordinary contribution of Dick Lundin, and further, in recognition of his service to the community and to the Center, does hereby vote to name the new assembly hall, now under construction, in his honor as a tribute to his exemplary service in its behalf.

"And, be it further resolved, that the Port St. Lucie Community Center Board of Directors does recommend that this Resolution be presented to the Center's Board of Trustees for its endorsement at the August 10, 1978 quarterly meeting."

It was Lundin who originally conceived the idea of building a community center here after he had noted what Port Charlotte had accomplished. He brought his concept to fruition by obtaining the cooperation of General Development Corporation in donating land back in 1971 and interesting community leaders in forming a Board of Trustees and incorporating the Center under Florida statutes. He was one of the original trustees.

Following the three-year tenure of Dr. Evert Stabler who did the provisional work and got the Center concept rolling with the first phase completed in April of 1972, Lundin assumed the presidency of the Center in October of 1973. In his five years of leadership the Center has achieved extraordinary growth. In Friday's action, the board made clar its appreciation of his outstanding service.

The action came as a complete surprise to Lundin.

"He experienced one of his rare moments of speechlessness," reported Secretary Strelsa Schreiber.

When he recovered somewhat, he responded emotionally:

"This Center has meant everything to me. It is the most worthwhile thing I've ever done. This is a very great honor. I thank you."

By falling in the residential category, the stores will be subject to the business hour limitations for residential businesses, if the ordinance is approved. Those hours, for businesses on agricultural land, in residential categories and in open space and recreational categories, are proposed for 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Hours of 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. were suggested for stores on land zoned B-1, B-2 (commercial), LI (light industry), and HI (heavy industry). However, Mayor William McChesney said he prefers hours of 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. for such businesses. Further debate on the operating hours for such businesses is expected to take place next Tuesday.

Businesses operating on lands in planned shopping center and special commercial categories would be permitted to open at 6 a.m. and close at 2 a.m., if the ordinance is approved.

In other action, council members expressed approval of a plan to take over drainage and open space maintenance responsibilities for land in the Floresta Pines II community. A property owners association now has that responsibility, but there have been problems with getting enough persons organized and willing to pay for the maintenance.

Even though it appears the city is likely to take over such responsibility, councilmembers balked when General Development Corporation presented a plan for the city to take over 83 acres of open space and drainage lands in the Midport section of the city. Council members said no problems from that area have occurred yet and they don't want to consider such a costly move unless problems arise with a property owners association designed to take care of such maintenance.

A request to approve the final replatting of a 505-acre tract west of the Florida Turnpike and adjacent to the Windmill Point project got a negative response from city officials. The main objection raised was GDC's plan to drain the area with swales and ditches instead of curbs and gutters. Mayor McChesney said since six lakes are planned as holding ponds in the area, the company could use curbs and gutters instead. GDC officials, who are planning 488 homesites for the tract as well as commercial development of some of the land, said they will see if their engineers can design curb and gutter drainage

Mayor hopes city manager can be hired by Sept. 1

Approximately 50 applications have been received for the Port St. Lucie city manager's position, and Mayor William McChesney said Tuesday he is optimistic a new person can be found for the job by the first of September.

The mayor said he feels there are a number of excellent candidates for the job that City Treasurer Gerald Van Patten has been filling on a temporary basis since former City Manager Elmer Cox suffered a heart ailment on May 5.

Cox's attack came hours after two council members had called for his resignation. A public hearing on Cox's actions in regard to an alleged deal to swap building permits for a reduction in the city hall rent was to be held, but on doctor's orders, Cox decided to resign rather than fight for his job.

Since Cox was hospitalized on May 5, Van Patten has been acting city manager. He placed ads in several professional magazines and since then the applications have been pouring in.

McChesney noted that all city council members have copies of the applications and that all of the applications are numbered. Each council member is to pick out his favorites and list them by number.

Around the end of this month, the council plans to meet and narrow the lists down to four to six top contenders for the job. Then, during August, the finalists will be called before the council at public meetings to be interviewed.

"I've been through about 90 per cent of the applications and there are some excellent candidates," McChesney said, adding that he is especially impressed with two men living in Florida and two out-of-state applicants.

A BLOT ON THE ESCUTCHEON of our native beauty – the ebb-and-flowing slime grass, which has blighted the eyes and noses of residents and tourists since early summer clings to the river shore like a monstrous leech. Only a major turn of the wind for a prolonged period can dispel it, old-timers say. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Slime fertilizer ?

The vile-smelling "slime grass" that rears its ugly head every summer is like the weather; everybody talks about it, but nobody ever does anything about it

Or don't they?

Time and again, soon after the blue-green and sometimes pinkish scum begins building up along the Indian River shores, someone "in the know" will tell you to rake it up, dry it and spread it on your garden. Makes wonderful fertilizer, they'll tell you.

But has anyone every actually tried it?

Indeed they have, says Dennis Clark at the Environmental Studies Center. First you must wash the salt off it, the environmental expert says, but by doing so, you get surprising results.

"Jay (Jarrett, director of the center) has raised some monstrous carrots, and unbelievable tomatoes, using it," Clark said Tuesday.

Other people at the center, as well as some gardeners who have experimented with the odoriferous weed, have met with equally amazing success, Clark reports.

The Mirror is interested in learning of other beneficial uses to which the pesky invader has been put. If you or your neighbors have found any degree of benefit from its use, call us at 334-4333. We'll welcome your information.

It was hardly dry on the Rep. Dale Cassens, Democratic incumbent for the House of Representatives in District 10, said this week he doesn't know on what basis the courts moved in favor of the objectors. Both as a legislator and as a candidate, he said, he favored the bill.

"I don't think that's a proper function of a party committee," he told The Mirror. "In past years the system has worked well, and I don't think it should change. Policy-setting is the function of an executive committee, not endorsing candidates in a primary."

Cassens will be opposed in November by Republican C.R. "Chuck" Nergard, who relinquished the seat two years ago due to family considerations."

Equally outspoken in opposition to the new Democratic policy is Democratic incumbent County Commissioner Maggy Hurchalla, also to be on the fall ballot.

"It probably is not a good thing," Mrs. Hurchalla told The Mirror. "It lends to awkwardness and divisiveness, if you have a small committee. And it means spending people's own money against them."

Rex Andrews, a newcomer to politics who qualified for the county commission contest in District 3, a seat being left open by the pending resignation of Dr. William Myers, is also against the Democrats' new policy.

"I don't believe it's fair to other candidates," he said. A certified public accountant, Andrews was formerly employed in the business office of County Commissioner Frank Wacha.

"I personally don't think they should endorse in the primaries," he said. "It is not their function."

Commissioner Wacha, though not a candidate this year, added his objection to the policy.

"I would rather that the committee not make commitments in the primaries," he said this week. "Regardless of who's successful in the primaries, they would expect the party's full support. By endorsing prematurely, they will be in an embarrassing position."

Another of the commissioners with two years to go, John Holt, Jr., said he "thought it was illegal, so I never gave it a thought."

However, he added, he feels it should be illegal.

"They should wait and back the candidates after the primaries," he commented.

R.D. "Skip" Breeden, a candidate for the school board in the 1976 election and now president of the Martin County Democratic Club, took the opposite stand.

"I think it is good," he said Monday. "There are people who work hard for the Democratic party, and they should get the support of the Democrats."

He added that he feels it will "help to let people know" who they are.

Supervisor of Elections Peggy Robbins, who has indicated she will run to succeed herself in office, told The Mirror she is "on the fence" about the issue, but contended primary endorsements would have their advantages.

"I feel that they (the committee) will have that much more weight," she said. "By waiting until the election, it's too late. Voters have already made up their minds."

Miss Robbins did point out that one of the new policies written into the Demo executive committee's resolution is illegal.

It reads: "Also the committee voted to accept the two percent of the filing fee required by candidate to post with the supervisor of elections."

The statute, Miss Robbins said, specifically states that all filing fees must be posted directly with the elections office.

Jensen youth seeking funds for state trip

The surprising youth slow-pitch Jensen team, winners of the district tournament, is seeking funds to travel to Ft. Walton for the state championship.

Playing in the 16 to 18 year class, Jensen softballers will be wearing their uniforms and collecting money for their trip today and tomorrow (Wednesday and Thursday) in local shopping centers.

The state tournament is this weekend in Ft. Walton, and the team leaves Friday for the trip.

Donations to help the youngsters go to the state tournament can be mailed to Jensen Cubs, Jensen Beach, FL 33457.

Pop Tilton industrial park wins county approval

The final legal gates were opened to Jensen Beach's first industrial park on Tuesday, when the County Commission approved on second reading a plat request on a 25½ acre tract being developed by Jensenite Ransom Tilton and his family.

The tract, located adjacent to the Jensen Beach Animal Hospital of Dr. Stanley Wampler on Savanna Road, is already under development, and the roads are almost complete. Tilton, contacted Tuesday evening by The Mirror, said that as soon as the landscaping and utility lines are in, the lots will be offered for sale.

"All the commissioners but Maggy Hurchalla voted for it," Tilton said, "and she votes against everything that involves anything you want to put on the land."

The tract, Tilton said, is being subdivided into industrial lots of a half-acre or more, depending on the needs of the purchaser.

"Pop (W.B. Tilton) owns the land, and we saw there was a need for light industry in the area. There was no industrial land available, and we decided Jensen needed some."

The Tilton thesis apparently was correct, because already four of the lots have been spoken for.

The industrial lots will be put on the market for priceings of from $24,000 and up, with an average of $30,000, Tilton said. The properties will have all utilities available, and will be landscaped to comply with the county landscaping ordinance.

Sewall's Point Commissioners ed a number of clarifications ditions proposed for the new hensive Ordinance 111, inclu- e pros and cons of allowing n docks, landscaping require- and the "decriminalization" of arking in the town limits at its g last week, in advance of final ation of the bill in August.

new ordinance, when passed, upplant Ordinance 95, passed a few months ago by the ission. After the present set of ations became effective, loop- and neglected areas were nt to the commission's attention, new bill was suggested. Town ey Thomas Thurlow, Jr., was ted to whip it into shape for tation at the next official r Ed Gluckler, fresh back from to California and other points on st coast, objected to allowing n docks, saying they would be in the event of a hurricane.

Ordinance 95 it a criminal offense for trucks or other large commercial vehicles to be parked overnight outside a residence. When it was passed, on a split vote, several residents expressed concern that the law was too stringent.

A landscaping clause is also in the pending bill. It would require the owner of a property to begin landscaping within 90 days from the time the building permit is issued. It would also ask specific definition of which is the back yard and which the front, on a corner residential property.

Town Engineer Richard Hellstrom reported on the status of the bicycle paths, due to be constructed with the help of the county up Sewall's Point Road.

"I've sent memos to Southern Gulf and Southern Bell asking which side of the road they held the right of way," Hellstrom said. "We have to know before we begin. In St. Lucie County, Southern Bell has hogged the right of way on both sides of the road."

MARTIAN LANDING? It would appear so, as the awesome beast hovers over the treetops. The Mirror, where he visited last week, made haste to get the visitor identified at the Environmental Center, and was informed by Tom Stiles that the curious critter is a member of the family Mantidae, order of Cursoria. In English, a walkingstick. Approximately three inches long, Mr. Mantidae was caught by the camera kibitzing over the shoulder of City Editor Bob Fryer while doing his column. Animal ordinance wins county okay

If your kitty is the roving kind, from now on she'll have to be sporting a license, or she's likely to get picked up by the fuzz. On Tuesday, the County Commission passed an animal law putting both dogs and cats in the licensing category.

Dr. Stanley Wampler, local veterinarian, explains that the law is written as a control on dogs and cats throughout the county, and has been worded so that, if the commission finds it advisable later, it can be revised to cover other types of pets.

"It increases the Humane Societ's ability to pick up strays," Dr. Wampler said, "and gives a centralized control by number in the sheriff's office. It will make it easier to locate the owners of dogs that are properly licensed."

The law doesn't apply to cats or other animals confined inside the home, Dr. Wampler said.

The county has had a dog licensing law in the past, he said, but it had poor enforcement. The major change, which gives better over all control, is that now veterinarians will be responsible for selling licenses.

"It will make more work for the veterinarians," he observed, "but it will be an advantage -- people will come to us for the license and get the rabies vaccine for their pets at the same time. A dog will get the vaccine only if it is examined and found to be free of rabies."

How do you spell good softball? -SDS

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Despite a sun that wouldn't quit and a few nerves, SDS Sporting Goods, playing out of Jensen Beach, captured the Boys' 18-and-under District 4 Softball championship at Langford Park last Saturday.

SDS put on a show for the fans who came to see the two-team, best-of-three elimination, exhibiting an airtight defense and more-than-adequate pitching by David Bocchino.

And at the plate, Bocchino, along with Henry Harriel and Malcolm Delancy, showed they can match any team run-for-run, something which will become even more important this weekend, when SDS travels to Fort Walton Beach for the state tourney.

SDS won the District 4 competition with consecutive 9-5, 7-0 victories, as Bocchino and Harriel each knocked in three runs to lead the "tournament" in RBI's.

In fact, the two games were played merely to determine which competition the teams will face this weekend at Fort Walton Beach. Both SDS and Sunrise, their opposition last weekend, from Broward County, will be in the title tourney, but SDS, by virtue of the victory over Sunrise, will receive more favorable, or easy pairings in the early rounds.

Sunrise started fast in game one, scoring four times in the first inning. Kenny Miller doubled to open the game, then scored one out later when Jeff Scribner singled. Clean-up batter Mark Pinket followed with a double, which scored Scribner all the way from first base. After Mitch Monte flied out, Billy Wagner singled to score Pinket, and make it 3-0. Howard Widletz later singled, and Wagner came across the plate with run number four.

But after early explosion against the as-yet untested SDS defense, Sunrise came apart. Although they led until the fourth inning, they seemed more concerned about trivial rules being enforced (example-the batter must wear a hat while batting) than about the actual progress of the game itself. So, while Sunrise and their unruly manager continued their ways, SDS set out to dismantle their opponents, which they did quite easily.

Nick Barker opened the SDS first inning with a double, and Billy Rinaldi reached on an error. Later, both scored on back-to-back singles by Delancy and Bocchino, cutting the score to 4-2.

In the third frame, Delancy triples with one out, and Bocchino's single moments later scored him. Bocchino, who opened the game with three straight singles, tied the score at 4-4 when he scored on Pop Delancy's double.

Sunrise did their last offensive damage of the two games in the fourth inning, when Steve Monte opened with a triple. He scored seconds later when Widletz singled.

But Sunrise's 5-4 lead quickly melted under the pressure of the hot sun and the SDS bats, as the hometown boys responded with two runs in the bottom half of the same canto. Harriel, pinch-hitting for Roger Welker, singled, as did Barker one out later. Rinaldi's following singled loaded the bases for Darryl Delancy, who flied out to left field. But Harriel tagged up and scored on the fly ball, and the game was tied once again. Bocchino's third straight RBI single followed, and SDS had a lead they would never again give up.

At the time though, it seemed SDS might not remain under control. In Church League games, they have been awesome, but in other exhibitions, they have showed a tendency to fall apart when the going gets rough. However, this tournament was a perfect testing ground, and this time, the experiment proved to be successful.

So instead of rolling over and playing dead, SDS poured it on, scoring three more times in the fifth inning. Pop Delancy doubled for the second time in the game, Bob Casey singled, and Harriel doubled, scoring Delancy. Then, after a walk to Dean Tucker, Barker knocked in another tally with a sacrifice fly ball to left field. A single by Darryl Delancy moments later provided the last scoring of the game, as Harriel tallied to make it 9-5.

In the second game, SDS got what they didn't have in the first encounter – a quick lead. Barker singled, as did Darryl Delancy, and scored when Malcolm Delancy grounded into a force play at second. Sunrise's infield made no attempt to throw home, something they might have tried had they known they were letting what proved to be the winning run score.

But the second inning is what really tore Sunrise apart. SDS scored four runs in that inning and totally demoralized Sunrise. Casey reached on an error, and made it 2-0 when he scored on Tucker's triple. Barker then singled, scoring Tucker, and Rinaldi followed with a two-run, inside-the-park home run.

In the sixth inning, Steve Coy singled, and reached second when Pop Delancy's ground ball was fielded, then thrown away for an error. Both men scored on Harriel's encore – a two-run single and his fourth hit in five at-bats on the day.

So both teams will go to Fort Walton Beach – SDS, hopefully, to win, and Sunrise perhaps only to provide trivial humor. SDS will leave Jensen Beach sometime Friday, as they make the long drive to the Panhandle.

Rinaldi's flying high in nat'l tennis circles

Those tennis-playing daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Dennis Rinaldi of Sewall's Point are ace-ing all over the place, in the world of junior tennis.

Eleven-year-old Kathy, a sixth grader at St. Joseph's School, last week came in sixth in a field of 96 youngsters in the 12-years-and-under, at the National Hard Court Tennis Championship event at Mountain View, Calif. At the same time, 17-year-old Tina Rinaldi was distinguishing herself in Burlingame, Calif., some 80 miles away.

This week, Kathy is competing in the Southern Sectional Tourney at Lafayette, La., and next week she'll come home to play in the U.S. Tennis Association Clay Court event at Wellington in West Palm Beach.

Meanwhile, this week, Tina is competing in the Pacific Coast Junior Championships, and from there will go to another tournament in Memphis, Tenn.

Kathy has been playing tennis for the past three years, and qualified last year in the Clay Court championship circuit, her father said.

enforcement of the setback requirements for construction along the dunes north of the House of Refuge.

Vice Chairman Frank Wacha, one of the three members of the Beach Committee, said Tuesday evening the state has granted exceptions allowing people to build on the dunesline which is actually state property.

"If people are allowed to use the property," Wacha said, "they should have to buy it."

At the Tuesday commission meeting, the consensus was that the state has been too permissive in controlling the narrow strip of land on which many homes in the MacArthur Boulevard area are being built.

The land particularly in question involves the strip south of the C.Scott and Billy Fletcher Beach strip to the sound end of Yacht Club Beach, the area which was purchased by the county.

The County Commission wants to meet with the state officials involved to firm up a set-back policy for future building.

County challenges compliance

The moratorium on building on Hutchinson Island will have to hold off a little longer, the County Commission decided on Tuesday. Southern Gulf Utilities' contention that it has complied with all the requirements on correcting deficiencies was taken with a grain of salt, and a report is being sent to Tallahassee that the corrections are "not adequate."

Approximately two months ago, the Public Service Commission held hearings on the water supply of Southern Gulf to Hutchinson Island, where residents in the mushrooming number of dwelling units were finding the water supply inadequate. Many of the highrises were unable to get water up past the second floor.

As a result of the testimony, SGU was ordered to make the corrections, and a moratorium was declared on further building until the required improvements were made.

Although the Tuesday report from the utility company pronounced it had met the PSC order, the county commission disagreed, and voted to send a letter to Tallahassee to that affect.

RAMBLING AROUND

The other day, Leta Keith, involved in one of those "clean-ups", came across an unanswered letter from John and Clara Kerr, formerly of 2 Mango. To make up for the lapse, she gave them a phone call.

They were delighted and full of news. Now at P.O.Box 174, Sandy Lake, PA 16145, they'll be celebrating their 67th wedding anniversary August 2. Although John is 90 and Clara is 88, they are enjoying themselves with a little garden, congregate meals, and there is a young girl from their senior center that drives them to church, doctors and shopping. They'd like to hear from their OBP and Community Church friends.

Lester and Ann O'Neil are those new people staying in Helen Dennis' home, 4 Bay Drive. They came here from Riverland by way of San Diego. It seems they wanted to be nearer to their son, who lives in Japan, so it would be easier for him to visit. San Diego was a "no-no", however, so back they came and with nowhere to stay until their place in Spanish Lakes is ready, cousin Helen made her place available.

Latest on Helen: She's having a great time this summer visiting her sisters and daughters in Mass. and New Hampshire. After a stay at Hampton Beach, she will head south, possibly around August 20.

Axel and Mildred Beck of 2 Key Lime came down here from Delevan, Wisc., in 1963 and until 1974, went back every summer to a cottage on Lake Loraine. Axel was a master carpenter foreman in Chicago for years, working on such projects as the Cubs' ball park. He is now in the hospital for treatment, but was able to sit up on his birthday and wedding anniversary, July 14, when the nurses brought him cake and milk and sang Happy Birthday to him.

Bill and Ethel McDowell, 9 Cypress, are back from two months up north, where they visited Bill's sisters in Detroit, took a jaunt over to Boston to attend the Harvard graduation of Tom, their oldest grandson, then back to Ann Arbor for high school graduation of the youngest grandson, John. Robert, another grandson, is at Alma College.

They are following in their father's footsteps, becoming lawyers. But Judi, the granddaughter has other ideas. She's the breast stroke state champion and in line for the Junior Olympics.

So, they had a grand time, but both said it's great to be back in good ol' OBP.

Wilfred (Buster) St. Onge, 8 Melaleuca, has just back from two weeks in Massachusetts and Lake Winnipesaukee. Marion, not being up to it, kept the home fires burning. Buster visited brother and sisters and friends and found the weather not bad, with some rain.

Pauline Kaeppner, 2 Melaleuca and Columbus, Ohio, is feeling much better. Maybe a visit the other day from her niece, Mrs. Adrienne Jordon, helped with the recovery.

LETTERS FROM OBPers

This section has been curtailed by summer reduction of space available, but from time to time, a brief acknowledgment will be made to let folks know they haven't been forgotten, such as below:

Larry and Minnie Brammer, 30 SW 5th, had a safe flight to Eaton, Ind., where son and daughter drove their car. Helen Hamden writes from somewhere in Michigan that she just Warren and Evelyn Grove write from Lewisburg, Pa., that the Witmers and the Ballets are fine. Margaret Johnson, from Petersham, Mass., says ex-OBPers Harry and Ellen Oaks are busy with raising iris. Irene Burgess, out there in Long Beach, Calif., is enjoying the nice weather. Julia Aumiller writes from Port Royal, Pa., saying they are attending congregate meals and her 10 tomato plants sure need rain.

Dot Snyder of Oak St. writes from Sewell, N.J., that she is busy getting her house ready to sell, so she can make OBP her permanent address.

Adele Garrison, Third St., writes from Pennsville, N.J., that she has seen ExOBPer Annie Saunders, and she looks real chipper. She expects to visit Dot Snyder, who lives nearby. Having family picnics, but the weather is a problem.

Our Silver Haired representative, ta Williams, is back from a week in llahassee working on legislation for or citizens and says, "It was very rth while, more so than expected, d must be repeated next year."

Leta was assigned to the Finance and Taxation Committee, keeping her busy from 8 a.m. breakfast calls to talks and educational movies at 9 p.m. A total of 150 bills were drawn up. The House passed 27, which included health care, crime against elderly, community care, "add dentures and eyeglasses to Medicaid coverage, and a tax relief bill pegging seniors' property taxes at 1978 level.

Governor Askew told them that they'd have to find funds for any measures they advocated. So they've asked for the three to seven million unallocated Title XX funds, for some of these services.

It was a bit fatiguing, according to Leta, but thoroughly enjoyable, especially when the page girl delivered a beautiful bouquet from Dale Cassens.

Thank you, Leta, for representing us so well.

Here's a little fun item:

The other day I received a letter from New Jersey, addressed: Ernie Curwen, AARP, Ocean Breeze, Florida 33457. No problem...delivered within two days.

In that same mail, there was a letter returned, marked address incorrect, that had been sent to MCCA (Martin County Council on Aging), 295 Lincoln Ave., Stuart, FL 33494. (It should have been 925.) Some postal workers are "skilled", entitled to their high salaries, but others...one wonders?

Noticed in the supermarkets the other day - pineapples 49 cents, good big ones at that. Way back in the 50s out there in California, if we'd been able to get 'em for 49 cents, we'd thought we had a bargain. How do they do it? They know their "better for less".

Some may remember this one:

Back in the Great Depression days, even the cost of a new razor blade was hard to come by, so some of us were given a blade sharpener for a Christmas present. An old 3-hole blade would last a year, until it cracked, and be just as sharp as a new one. Kept mine well into the 60s, when it wore out and blade sharpeners had gone off the market (rumored, blade manufacturers bought 'em out). Maybe the Small Business Administration could help a group of retirees revive this "better for less" gadget.

Seniors were doing a lot of talking about the "weak dollar" this week, saying, "It's come to a pretty pass, when we have to plead with Germany and Japan to stop sending their 'better for less' goods." We apparently can't compete any more and now there's little, if any, wage differential. You can hear such things as, "Things like this couldn't have happened in Teddy Roosevelt's day, or even Ike's for that matter." Have we lost our will to be number one?

Then, instead of rejoicing at the low unemployment figure, some seniors pointed out that USA productivity is still dropping off. Why, even the building contractors on TV last week were complaining, that it now takes 50 per cent more labor to build a two-bedroom home than it did two years ago. Are we lacking in skill or will to do a good job, or have government regulations made "better for less" impossible?

So, again this week, it seems all is woe for the seniors, with nothing good in sight. But again, that's just not true and here's another "Good for Seniors" item:

Early in the spring of 1978 a meeting was held in Dr. Archie MacCallister's office, with Leta William of MCCA, Ernie Curwen and Pearl Wyse of AARP present to discuss a geriatric clinic. It was from this meeting that the Martin County Health Clinics grew. Now, the Langford Park clinic serves up to 80 seniors from 9 to 11 a.m. on the third Friday of each month (next, Friday, July 21).

There, health department nurses give free blood pressure checks and nutrition counseling. At times, the nurses have found in the pressure checks that medication wasn't adequate and advised a visit to the doctor. Also, substitutes for items on special diets were suggested that would be more agreeable.

Therefore, seniors do have some very helpful services available to them and it's up to them to use 'em.

Congregate Meals are holding at 70 servings and when Arlene Fletcher, director of this Treasure Coast project, and Vince Bocchino, supervisor of Langford Park, met last week, arrangements were made to continue for another year. As there are a few openings at this time, any qualified senior citizen over 60, interested, should call Betty Mattix, asst. manager, 334-8994, or Ernie Curwen, 334-0756.

CHAPTER EVENTS

At a special board meeting June 28, Larry Thibaut, marketing director, and Charles P. McLeod, executive vice pres. of First National Bank and Trust Company of Stuart, explained the different methods of investing the Senior Center funds. A resume will be presented to the members at the October meeting.

The regular board meeting was held July 13. Motion to purchase 15 chapter handbooks was tabled, then revision of the by-laws and standing rules were discussed. These changes will be presented to the members at the October meeting.

Leta says, 'worthwhile'

CHAPTER 1158 AARP — INDEPENDENCE PURPOSE DIGNITY

ERNIE CURWEN 334-0756

Apparently, through publicity in local paper, ByLines, radio announcements and the Golden Eagle bulletin, the chapter is becoming known as a place to go for senior information and help. Right now, employment referral is active, yard men, short-run drivers, sitters with ill or feeble, fix-it, etc. Both wanting and want to. If you need this service, call Frank Edwardson at 287-0473, or Ernie C., 334-0756.

Leta Keith sent a clipping from Robinson, Ill., showing that they have a very active travel committee.

Dot Beck writes from Beverly, Mass., sending clippings showing that within 15 miles there are six active senior centers: Lynn, Salem, Manchester, Marblehead, Peabody and Beverly, all serving meals five days per week. Some have a program every day, health clinics, games, cards, swimming, musicals, rehearsals for show, many sing-alongs and one had "Beano"! haven't heard that old fashioned name for ages).

Thursday, July 10: Deadline on items for the August bulletin.

Friday, July 21: Martin County Health Clinic for free blood pressure checks and nutrition counseling, 9-11 a.m., Langford Park.

Monday, July 24: Congregate Meals, 4:15 p.m. at Langford Park, every Mon. thru Fri.

Wednesday, July 26: Senior Activities Club, 1 p.m., Youth Center in Stuart, for cards and crafts.

Elsie Hutton files for Supervisor of Elections

Aftr an informal coffee for the media and campaign officials, Elsie Hutton qualified Wednesday as a Republican candidate for Supervisor of Elections of Martin County.

Although this is her first try for public office, she has been active in local affairs and has extensive experience in the elections office.

She served as chief deputy supervisor of elections under former Supervisor of Elections Sandra J. Randolph from January 1973 through March 1977, and is basing her campaign on qualfications, experience and reputation.

During her service in the elctions office, the Martin County Charter election and the Jensen Beach Incorporation (freeholder) election were conducted, in addition to regularly scheduled local, state and federal elections.

Challenges resolved during that period include the wholesale change of addresses throughout Martin County, multiple book closings, recounts, precinct splits and a candidate lawsuit that held up absentee ballots until within a week of the election, she recalled.

"If elected," Mrs. Hutton said, "I will operate the office in the same friendly, professional manner exhibited under Mrs. Randolph. I am known throughout the county from having served in the elections office and was recommended for the position of Supervisor of Elections by Mrs. Randolph when she resigned to be married last year.

Her goals for the office include continued emphasis on voter registration with the establishment of permanent field offices in Jupiter, Hobe Sound, Indiantown, Port Salerno and Jensen Beach. This can be accomplished with no additional expense to the taxpayer, she says.

People feel that their vote does not count and many persons registered do not vote on election day, she said, adding that she has plans to stimulate interest and enthusiasm, thus educating the electorate as to reasons their votes do count, increasing voter turnout on election day, the 39-year-old candidate said.

She vowed to eliminate unnecessary spending and said on the job experience has shown methods of conducting the office in a more economical manner, actually improving services.

To bring the office up to a par with services provided residents of most other counties in Florida is another goal she listed.

Mrs. Hutton was born and raised in Ligonier, Pa., graduated from Ligonier Valley High School, and came to Florida in 1960. In 1966, she moved to Martin County. Her husband, David, has been employed by Sears since then, and was voting machine custodian during the time Mrs. Hutton worked at the elections office.

The Huttons have two children, David, Jr., 14, and a daughter, Robin Sherill, who recently married.

Mrs. Hutton is a graduate assistant for the Dale Carnegie course in human relations now being taught each week in Stuart and until last month had been working in the Circuit Court Clerk's office.

"I left in June, so as not to cause a conflict for Louise (Isaacs) by being a candidate while working for her and I could spend more time with my [illegible] David," she said.

Not much news...so, not much of a column. No news...no column; so, if you like it, you must contribute.

Vita and I might collaborate and think up some real juicy news about all who are gone and then we'd get some response pronto. How about it?

During the two-month course at Port Hueneme, Calif., he received instruction on engineering management, network analysis, financial management and Naval organization. Barba joined the Navy in September 1967.

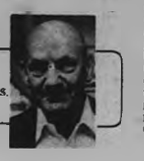
Home health service is AARP topic

CHAPTER OF AARP
INDEPENDENCE PURPOSE DIGNITY



HUGH JENCKS, 878-3856

The July meeting, this week on Thursday, will feature Mrs. J.E. (Irene) Wampler of the Home Health Service, who will discuss services available to patients confined to their homes.

At the time this was written, it was not known whether President Maurie Arluck will be able to be present. Maurie has been running into health problems and may have taken off for New York for further consultation by meeting time. Vice President Muriel Sysak will preside at the meeting.

Paul Perington and Charlie Coffman, who have been riding herd on the acquisition of fire extinguishers for the benefit of members, will have samples of extinguishers available and will take orders for anyone interested. Members have not shown such interest to date, but perhaps the sight of the samples will stimulate some. The extinguishers they have been looking at are the type mentioned by Fire Chief Rogers in his appearance before the chapter as the best suited for home use.

Two donations have been made recently by the chapter. One of $50 was sent to the Meals on Wheels program, for which a thank-you letter was received from Sam Lawder, director of the St. Lucie County Council on Aging, which supervises the program. The contribution was made in the name of Morgan Jones, one of our founding members who died earlier this year.

The other donation was in the amount of $20 to the Port St. Lucie committee which strenuously opposed the 2-mill tax levy proposed by the county school board. By the time this sees light, the issue will have been decided at a special election Tuesday, July 18. That committee from the start emphasized that it did not oppose the construction of needed school facilities, and that it did not hold that older people should be exempt from paying school taxes just because they were past the age where they had children attending school. What they objected to was the idea of raising the money in two years and thus having to shell out money for buildings that will later be used by the children of people who pay nothing.

At its July meeting, the board named Peter Sysak chairman of the nominating committee. This committee's job is one of the most important in the chapter because it has to find competent people willing to serve in the jobs that need to be done in running the chapter. If you know of anyone who fills this bill, please let Peter know.

Another topic that members might well bit giving some thought to is the nomination of a candidate for the award to be made at the annual Christmas season lunch. This custom was started last year, and former President Fred Wiggin was the first recipient of the plaque, awarded to the person who was deemed to have rendered outstanding service during the year to the elder people of the community.

Our board of directors may have to find a new meeting place. For the past year and a half, the board has been meeting in Room 13 of the Port St. Lucie Medical and Professional Center. However, the vacant units of the center have been filling up fast, and according to Fred, who runs the place, they probably will all be taken by the end of the year, or before that time. When that happens, Room 13 will obviously no longer be available, and the board will have to find other pastures. The Northport Marina is a possibility, although there's nothing definite on it as of now.

Don't forget that the district representative of Colonial Penn Insurance Company, where many members have policies, is here each month the day after our regular meeting, for consultation and to answer inquiries on insurance problems. He is Fred Wahlquist of Fort Lauderdale, who will be in Room 13 at the PSL Medical Center from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. this Friday, July 21. His first visit occurred last month, when he talked with 10 or 12 members who got there in time. Quite a few showed up after he had left. They were under the impression that he was going to be there all day. He has a large territory to cover and can only be at one spot for half a day, so if you need help with your insurance, be sure to remember the hours: from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30.

In response to a request from the Community Center, the board of directors voted to sponsor a pancake breakfast at the Center on next January 7. The various organizations that use the center sponsor a number of fund-raising projects, and ours will be pancakes. Jot it down in your date book.

$25.8 million school budget and 6.95 mill tax rate okayed

BY BOB FRYER

The St. Lucie County School Board voted four to one Tuesday evening to adopt a $25,857,436 budget for the coming school year and then unanimously voted to keep the school tax millage rate at 6.95 mills.

The action came after several Port St. Lucie residents, who recently opposed a special two-mill tax for constructing new schools, spoke in favor of raising the millage rate to 7.25 mills.

The suggested millage hike was made by members of the Taxpayers for Revision of School Financing group who worked to defeat the two-mill tax issue in an election on July 18. Though only 22 per cent of the registered voters in the county participated in the tax election, 83 per cent of those casting ballots were against the special tax.

"We have noted from newspaper accounts that various school board officials have interpreted the millage election of July 18 to be a mandate for no new taxes. We do not wholly agree with that interpretation.

"While we do agree that this is the taxpayers' general attitude, we have received a different consensus from voters interviewed by members of this committee. The indications clearly expressed were an objection to the specific methods of financing as proposed in the election issue and a sincere doubt that the request was a result of adequate planning..." said Frank Alexander, a member of the Taxpayers for Revision of School Financing.

Another member of that group, Don White, said those in favor of the two-mill tax criticized his group for being against children and against new schools. He said this is not the case and that his group opposed the method of financing, but not the goals of better education and new schools when needed.

The suggestion of the 7.25-mill tax made Tuesday is the same suggestion School Superintendent Dr. Nolan Skinner made to the school board in May. At that time, school board members rejected the suggestion and, a few weeks later, opted to propose the two-mill special tax, to be imposed for two years, as a means to raise $6 million for two new elementary schools and refurbishing some older schools.

White and Alexander asked the board to reconsider Skinner's earlier suggestion, with a provision that the three-tenths of a mill increase (from last year's 6.95 mill tax rate to 7.25 mills this coming year) be levied for the next four years in order to raise enough cash to build one new elementary school. School officials have already designated the Port St. Lucie area as having top priority for a new elementary school.

During the recently ended school year a total of 962 children were enrolled in Port St. Lucie Elementary School, which was built to house 750 students. The school board has already decided that, since an added 200 students are expected to enroll by the time school starts in September, the PSL school will be the only one in the county to go on double sessions in September.

In addition to the call for the three-tenths of a mill hike in school taxes for the next four years -- to be used solely for school construction -- the Port St. Lucie taxpayers' group called for better long range planning of school facility needs.

The school board members discussed the proposed hike of the school tax rate by three-tenths of a mill for the next four years, but again rejected the suggestion. Dr. Skinner said he would not recommend the three-tenths mill hike again because he believed the voters' mandate against the two-mill tax was an indication they want no increased taxes and that he would not want to try to get around the two-mill tax defeat by recommending another method of raising taxes.

As for long range planning, several board members said the state has a five-year plan, which shows the need for more schools, but which provides no funds for building the new schools. They also pointed out that, since the school board does not know from one year to the next how much financial help the system will get from the state until the end of each year's session of the state legislature, it's hard to make long range plans.

Though the suggestions of board member Jeffrey Furst admittedly were no solution to the problem, Furst proposed two measures to reshuffle the school budget items to provide more money for refurbishing existing school facilities. His first suggestion was to reduce all line-item school system allocations for operating funds by 1.3 per cent except the item for refurbishing existing school facilities. This, he said, would not materially affect the line-item budget figures, yet would allow for an increase of money for school facility refurbishing from $367,000 to $600,000.

That suggestion died for lack of a second, as did another suggestion by Furst to reduce the amount of cash carry-over from this year to the coming year by $233,000 in order to raise the amount budgeted for school refurbishing to $600,000. He said the classrooms were in most need of extra funding and that it was time for others to do with a little less so the classrooms could be improved.

When the vote came on the proposed $25,857,436 budget, Furst was the only member to oppose it. However, once that budget figure was set, Furst joined other board members in voting to approve the 6.95 millage rate. In the 1977-78 school year, the tax rate was 6.95 mills and the total school budget was $25,805,725.

The breakdown in the new budget indicates $20,147,440 for operating funds, $1,824,625 for debt service, $636,049 for capital improvements, $401,702 for federally funded school programs, and $2,847,618 for food service. A total of $6,687,099 for operating funds is anticipated from state sources, $10,748,554 is expected to be generated from local taxes and interest, and about $3 million more is anticipated from present inventory, accounts receivable, cash on hand, and prior year encumbrances.

School board members pointed out that unlike many other counties who receive a proportionately higher share of funding from the state, the St. Lucie County School system will have to generate 61.5 per cent of its operating fund revenue from local taxes and will receive only 38.5 per cent of those funds from the state. This, they indicated, is due to the fact that the county has a growing population and because of a complicated funding set-up that is based to some degree on the relative wealth of county taxpayers.

r county services that aren't of much benefit to the city residents, or for having to pay city taxes for services the county should be providing on a larger scale.

The two areas of possible double taxation that have historically drawn the most comment -- and which will most likely be the main topics of discussion at the meeting Monday -- are police protection and recreation services.

For about the last five years, city council members have contracted with county Sheriff Lanie Norvell to have extra police protection in the city. Within the last year, plans to start a city police department have drawn council attention repeatedly. This resulted in a vote a few months ago to move ahead quickly with formation of a city department and a later decision to delay, at least until after a new city manager is hired.

Intermixed in the city police department discussions at council meetings have been talks with Norvell about the extra police protection his department provides to the city under terms of the contract. At times, council members have expressed opinions that the city may not be getting its money's worth from the $171,000 contract, while at other times Norvell's department has been praised for the service it provides.

During discussions on police protection, it has been suggested several times that if the city weren't paying for extra protection, the normal level of protection offered in the south county area would have to be increased, as it is the duty of the sheriff to provide basic protection to all areas of the county, whether incorporated or not, and especially where municipalities don't have a police force.

ssens seeks reelection to House assens, 43, of Fort Pierce, has ed he plans to run for n to the District 76 State Representatives seat.

DALE CASSENS

Cassens is a Democrat who won the post in an election against Sue Hickman, now Sue Hickman Gould, in 1976. His Republican opponent this time will be Chuck Nergard, 48, of Port St. Lucie, who held the District 76 seat for five terms before deciding not to run in 1976. Both Cassens and Nergard say their campaigns will be based on their records in the legislature.

"Two years ago when I qualified to run, I felt I could do the best job for our area, and I think the last two years have proven me correct," Cassens said when announcing his candidacy this week, adding, "The experience I have had in Tallahassee will enable me to move into a leadership position with the majority party in the House next term."

Cassens, a citrus grove owner, said of his freshman term in Tallahassee, "I was able to return the Port of Fort Pierce to the primary port list, to introduce and pass a bill to resolve the king mackerel dispute, to introduce and pass a bill to resolve septic tank problems, to amend a bill which provides more effective mosquito control programs, and to work on many other issues vital to the interests of our district."

"Seniority is still the name of the game," Cassens said, but noted "there aren't too many old-timers around."

"I have also learned what it means to represent the people of my district. They have contacted me, written me, telephoned me and kept me in touch with their reactions to the job I am doing..." Cassens said.

"I have learned what it means to be part of a governmental system which is often complex and filled with red tape. I have learned how to use the system to do an effective job of representation and I have learned how to make my voice and the voices of the people I represent heard in Tallahassee. I look forward to the campaign ahead and to the opportunity of returning to the legislature for another tem," he said.

Cassens and his wife, Norma, have two children: Steve, 20, and Cathy, 16.

Board still seeking new PSL school site

BY BOB FRYER

Although school board members included no funds for a new school in Port St. Lucie when they adopted a budget Tuesday night, they did authorize Superintendent Dr. Nolan Skinner to continue negotiating for a 10.7 acre school site in the city.

School system finance director Fred See explained Wednesday that the board's action "was not to authorize buying the school site, but an authorization for Dr. Skinner to continue negotiating with GDC for the site."

After looking over about six sites GDC had to offer within a three mile range, school officials have zeroed in on a 10.7-acre tract along Gowin and Deming Avenues.

See says GDC is asking $20,000 for the site, which is north of Port St. Lucie Blvd. and a little east of Morningside Drive, between U.S.1 and the North Fork. "But we still have hopes we can get the land at a reduced price, or as a donation."

Bob Satchwell, the school system's vocational education director, has been working on getting the school site and a new elementary school in Port St. Lucie. He says several sites in the area were inspected, but that the 10.7 acre tract "is the most suitable and has the best location," as it is near the

Fort Pierce developer Peter Smith confirmed Monday that he is hoping to build a 200,000 square-foot enclosed shopping mall on U.S. 1 adjacent to the newly-opened Village Square Shopping Center.

Smith noted that he is planning the $8.5 million mall as a joint venture with Headway Corporation of Canada, which Smith says is the third largest development firm in Canada.

Smith said he plans to have a major supermarket, drug store and a major department store, as well as a number of smaller shops in the mall, and said he hopes groundbreaking can take place by early next year.

The site for the proposed mall is about 22 acres, lying west of U.S.1. Already, a 200-foot deep strip of the land along U.S.1 is zoned for commercial use. Smith said that at a county Planning and Zoning Board meeting tonight (Thursday, July 27), he will seek rezoning for the balance of the tract to a shopping center category.

Though one source has reported that the mall may include a Penney's department store and a Publix supermarket, Smith said he could not comment yet on who the prospective tenants for the mall might be. The mall is to "be one large building," he said.

Smith said the tract is 800 feet deep and that it "wraps around behind Village Square Shopping Center," bordering that center on the north and west sides. The back of the property is about 800 feet from the North Fork of the St. Lucie River and the Spanish Lakes Riverfront mobile home park, he said.

Provided the Planning and Zoning Board approves the rezoning, the matter of rezoning and the plans for the mall will go to the county commission for acceptance or rejection.

Corps tells inlet plans:

Sand will all go south

BY SALLY LATHAM

The U.S. Corps of Engineers, optimistic that the $6 million appropriation for the St. Lucie Inlet improvement will be forthcoming within the next two months, is winding up studies on the exact approaches that need to be taken to create maximum benefits for the long-suffering waterway.

The plan of operation is fairly complete, according to Jim Garland of Jacksonville, Chief Engineer of the Corps of Engineers. Contacted in his office by phone on Monday, Garland told The Mirror his teams have been at work on the inlet study for some time.

"It has been slow," he said. "It's been extremely rough and real treacherous. We've had difficult times getting the surveys made."

Garland is considered the Corps' ace expert on the inlet, because he has been responsible for the dredging operations for several years. The ever-shifting inlet floor has required unclogging at least twice a year ever since the Corps has had responsibility for the ocean-to-rivers passage.

The dredging has been done with the Corps' site casting dredge Merit. Over the years, it has cost the government approximately a half-million dollars annually to clean it out.

"One problem is," Garland said, "all it takes is one little storm and the work is undone."

With the anticipated government grant, Garland expects to be able to make effective lasting improvements.

"We'll be improving something over a mile, to a 16 foot depth," he said.

Plans are to add on to the existing jetty on the north side of the inlet, and to build a 1,500-foot jetty on the south side, extending well beyond the shore line.

The deepest cut, to a 16-foot depth, will naturally be on the outside, "to give as much latitude and safety as possible." It will level off from 10 to seven feet as it progresses into the intracoastal system.

They will be taking out some 50,000 cub yards of sand, Garland estimated. But while it will be good news for the Jupiter Island side of the cut, it's bad news for Seminole Shores, the Mobil property on the south end of Hutchinson Island.

Mobil developers have been trying to get the government to put the dredged-up sand on their land, to enrich its beach.

"Mobil will have to get its fill somewhere else," Garland said. "We have agreed it must go on the north end of Jupiter Island, for planned parks and beach development."

The Mobil Estates people were to have met on Wednesday in Stuart with the Martin County Commission and with Bill Carlton, Chief of Bureau and Shores for the Corps in Florida, who came down from Tallahassee this week for the conference. Whatever decisions were reached as an outcome of the meeting weren't known by the Mirror's press time.

Will the work planned for the inlet have any helpful effect on the Indian River's almost inescapable "slime grass" which has been choking the western shores for the past few months?

"I'm afraid it will have very little effect on the weed," Garland said. "Other measures will have to be taken to solve that problem."

THAT EVERPRESENT SLIME GRASS is strictly for the birds, and they're not too fond of it either, as can be seen from the wary expressions on the beaks of the small blue heron in the foreground and the Great Blue pickily fishing out beyond the worst of the mess along the west bank of the Indian River. The weed, which emerges annually from the river bottom and which harbors the green-blue algae which make it smell so terrible, thus far has the upper hand over those who would get rid of it, and this week, the Corps of Engineers says the imminent dredging of the inlet won't help, either. Others are Laura Flinn, Martha Granneman, Tracy Cristie, Carla Bellinger, Christina O'Connor, Colleen Horrigan, Jennifer Bush and Donna Hill, all of Stuart; Dierdre Blatch of Port Salerno and Janet Neubeaur of Jupiter.

The girls had been going through intensive practice for more than two weeks under the tutelage of their coach, Mrs. Murphy, a former cheerleading champ, prior to attending the Miami clinic. And it paid off. Kim Geraghty was chosen as the top individual cheerleader of the entire field of 150 girls, and now has a chance to compete for the award of Individual National Cheerleader – if she can get there.

Kim and three others, Tracy Christie, Martha Granneman and Laura Flinn, were chosen as among the top ten individual cheerleaders, and all four received plaques for the honor.

Capping the triumph for the MCHS team was being awarded a large plaque on the final night of the clinic, for being a National Championship Team. The squad placed third over-all in the competition, and in addition, received ribbons every night of the Miami event.

Mrs. Murphy said Tuesday that prospects are dim for getting all the girls to Lansing, but they are hoping to at least send Kim, since she was winner of the highest award and stands to compete for a top national spot.

"We'll welcome sponsors," Mrs. Murphy said. "And I'm sure they'll be forthcoming. The community leaders have a lot to be proud of in the team."

Candidates are at the post; hottest contest is school bd.

The books in the office of the Martin County Supervisor of Elections closed Tuesday noon, with plenty of competition for the school board, two contenders for the county commission seat being vacated by Dr. William Myers and one newcomer vying for Commissioner Maggy Hurchalla's position. But Commissioner Tom Higgins appears to be sailing through without a political hurdle to cross.

The recently-passed school bond issue which is being contested in the courts is expected to become the political hot potato in the school board race. Last to qualify was Mildred Perry, who with her daughter went to court to challenge the legality of the bond issue vote. She is seeking the seat being vacated by board member Ron Becky.

Also in the school board contest is Norma Miller, who campaigned energetically for the bond issue, and who "wants to see that it is administered properly." She is the wife of Stuart vice-mayor Robert Miller, but she claims there can be no conflict of interest, because "the schools and the city have nothing to do with one another."

The school board seat held by Charles Covington of Indiantown is being challenged by Pete Marovich, a salesman for International Mineral and Chemical Company.

A third school board candidate is Moira Moore, a former teacher who now is co-owner of the Bridal Shop in Jensen Beach. She is the wife of E.M. Moore, special education in the Martin County School system. Both Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Moore have high school-age children.

Two contenders are running for the seat which will be vacated by County Commission Chairman Dr. William Myers. Dr. Myers has announced his resignation from the commission to run for the state House of Representatives post held by William Taylor. The candidates are Rex Andrews, an accountant (not a certified public accountaint as stated in a previous article in The Mirror) and Lavon (Bud) Bagwell. Andrew, a Democrat, lives in Stuart, and Bagwell, a Republican, lives in Hobe Sound.

Supervisor of Elections Peggy Robbins, appointed to the post last year and coming up for her first election race in the fall, is opposed by Elsie Hutton, a former courthouse employee.

A last-minute qualifier is Dr. Edward A. Geary, a dentist, who announced he is running against Commissioner Maggy Hurchalla in District 4. Like Hurchalla, Geary is a Democrat.

Five candidates have announced for the open Supervisor of the Soil and Water Conservation District post. All filing at the last minute for the non-paying job are: Raymond Bowles, Group 1; Corrine B. Calvasina, Group 2; Judson Minear, Group 3; Ken Farrari, Group 4; and Kenneth Ringe, Group 5.

Residents in Martin County ar reminded they have only until Aug. to register, to be able to vote in t primary elections. The office at courthouse will be open on Saturd until that date.

HERMAN REITZ of Stuart Marine Center proudly shows of the plaque and the product that won the honor for the center located on U.S. 1. The award was made at the Evinrude 1979 Product Introduction meeting held in Buford, Ga. Bob Anderson, Evinrude's sales manager from Milwaukee, Wisc. made the presentation.

Burtoft, administrative assistant, trust, of First National Bank and Trust Company of Stuart, recently returned from a week of study at the 18th annual session of the Florida Bankers Association Florida Trust School at the University of Florida in Gainesville. Hot? Tried northern cities lately?

BY SALLY LATHAM

The electronic temperature reporter in the front of Jensen Beach Bank is proclaiming an awesome 94 degrees.

You may not believe it, because the breeze off the Indian River is sweet and kind to sun worshipers on the beach, and to fishermen intent on bringing up trout, snook and snapper out of the gently undulating Indian River. But that's what the computer says.

You don't really care, especially if you're talking to one of the old-timer "imports" who can remember what summer heat really is, up north.

The tanned, bare-chested gentleman on the causeway, his wavy white hair shining like spun platinum under the early afternoon sun, relaxes in his folding chair and says:

"You don't know what heat is until you spend July in Washington. Lady, you walk down F Street and you'd better have asbestos shoes on. That sun'll melt the fillings out of your teeth."

You listen, agree, and thank the Lord for the breeze off the river. You know what he's talking about. You've been there, before air conditioning. After summers in northern cities, the heat in Jensen Beach, at this high point of summer, is a gentle spring zephyr by comparison.

The fishermen standing out in the river will tell you the same thing. And they're having so much fun hauling in their piscine quarry that the thermometer holds no terrors. The heat of the briny is much more interesting to record.

Like Junior Dishman, when he brought in two snook from the causeway. His biggest, caught on live mullet, weighed in at 30 pounds. Or Monty Braune, who snagged a five and a half pound sail catfish, on live mullet, casting his line off the Ten Mile Bridge.

They were just two reporting in to Tommy Stewart at the Snook Nook. Others were: Joe Senatore, four trout to seven and a half pounds and a channel bass, wading out in the river, on a mirralure; Hal Kelsey and Jim Wagner, 16 trout and three snook, also on Mirralure, wading in the river; Ed Wagner, Charlie Arend and Pat Patterson, 21 trout, four snook and two channel bass, wading in the Indian River, on Trout Tonts;

Also, Lou Smitten, one snook in the surf on a metal squid; Ray Greenwald, a five pound trout of the river, on Ryan's Poppers; Norm Soyka and Walter Krutsich, six trout, out on the river in a small boat, on live shrimp; Tom Hargraves, four whiting and four croakers, on cut shrimp while fishing out in the surf;

Fred and Blanche Muller, out on their Froggie II, one trout, a grouper, a bluefish and a sail cat on shrimp, up near the power plant; Henry and Mary Boyer, a five pound four ounce sail cat and three snapper, on the causeway, caught on live shrimp.

Outside, Tommy says, all they got was seasick. It was too rough.

Jim Stinefeld, at the Bait Box, says there are lots of whiting out in the surf, which has cleaned up considerably after its recent infliction of weed, and a few snook are taking the bait. His most impressive river catch was made by Jerry Huggins, who caught a fourteen pound snook on pinfish, off the causeway, on a 30 pound test line and spinning reel.

Dave Lamb, over at Jensen Bait and Tackle, puts good old Charlie Arend and Ed Wagner at the top of his list. During the week, between the two of these intrepid fishermen, they've brought in ten trout, three snook and a channel bass on Trout Tonts and Mirralures, out of the river.

Dave also reports: Bob Burgess, a four and a half pound sheepshead, on live shrimp, at the Beach Club cove; Herman Goodson, a two pound pompano off the causeway, on live shrimp; 14-year-old Bobby Baker, a four pound black drum off Jensen Beach Causeway; James Smid, a five pound sheepshead, eight snapper, two black drum and a flounder, right out of Dave's back door wading in the river.

Outside, Dave reports, Tommy Thomas, Bill and Chuck Norvell brought in a seven pound dolphin, six barracuda and a bonita, caught while out on Tommy's boat Rabello.

High and low temperatures, during the past week, have been:

'IMPOSTERS' SOUGHT

The Martin County Sheriff's Department is looking for three men who reportedly posed as Federal Bureau of Investigation agents on Sunday, at a local motel.

Harold Bishop, owner of Bishop Cottages on Indian River Drive, told Sheriff's Deputies that the trio had entered his office and identified themselves as FBI agents. They asked by name for a man, claiming he owed them money "in reference to marijuana." Bishop told officers the men "showed him a gun."

According to the report, Martin authorities have relayed the information and description of the three, seeking their arrests on charges of impersonating federal officers.

Lifelong dream to see Florida comes true

A lifelong dream came true for 98-year-old Frank Granbois of White Rock, British Columbia, Canada, when he got to see a bit of Florida for the first time last week.

Mrs. Laverne Granbois of 644 S.E. Keyes St. in Port St. Lucie said her husband's father has always wanted to see Florida.

"He flew down with my brother-in-law, and has really enjoyed his stay," she said, adding that he's gotten a tour of Hutchinson Island and the Port St. Lucie area. Last weekend he got to visit the NASA facilities at Kennedy Space Center.

"He's originally from Wisconsin and had never been this far south at all," Mrs. Granbois said.

When asked if he minded the Florida heat, Mrs. Granbois said, "No, he's taking that pretty well. He's used to the mountains in British Columbia and said he was surprised at how green everything around here is. He says he likes this area."

On Tuesday, Granbois returned to his northwestern home, taking a lot of fond memories of Florida with him.

Girl pleads guilty to manslaughter in death of father

Faith Myra Webster, 18, of Delray Beach, pleaded guilty Tuesday to manslaughter in connection with the killing Sunday death of her father, whose body was discovered in a vacant lot in North Port St. Lucie on April 3.

The girl, who turned 18 the day after her father's body was discovered by real realtor Chuck Nergard, was allowed to plead guilty to the manslaughter charge in juvenile court, rather than stand trial as an adult on a second degree murder charge. She entered the guilty plea Monday before St. Lucie County Judge William Tye and is to be sentenced on Wednesday, Aug. 2. Had she been convicted of second degree murder as an adult, she could have faced a sentence of life in prison. Though it is not known what her sentence will be yet, it is anticipated it will be much less severe.

The decomposed body of the girl's father, Raymond Webster, 41, of Delray Beach, was found in a vacant lot in East Lake Drive in north Port St. Lucie on April 3. It took about a week to identify Webster, and his daughter was reportedly stopped by police in Fort Lauderdale as she was trying to board a plane for Chattanooga, Tenn.

The girl agreed to return to St. Lucie County for questioning and subsequently was indicted to stand trial as an adult on a second degree murder charge. St. Lucie County lawmen state that on Easter Sunday, March 26, the girl and her father were in Fort Pierce and got into an argument over some friends of the girl. She allegedly struck her father over the head with a hammer and is said to have told lawmen that her father was still alive when she put him in the car and drove south. When she went to Port St. Lucie, she allegedly discovered her father had died and then placed his body among the trees on the vacant lot.

Because the girl was 17 years old when her father was killed, the she was originally detained by juvenile authorities. State law provides that all murders – regardless of age – can be tried as adults if indicted by a grand jury. Thus, when she was indicted, she was moved in the St. Lucie County Jail and tried as an adult.

But officials in the state attorney's office reportedly felt it would be hard to prove second degree murder, so opted to plea bargain and accept the guilty plea to manslaughter with the girl having the legal status of a juvenile. When she entered the guilty plea Monday, she was transferred to a juvenile detention facility to await sentencing.

New stadium will get press box

BY DONNIE WILKIE

The Martin County School Board voted last week to use some $7,000 in equipment funds to construct a press box at the new Martin County High School football and track stadium.

The vote was 4-1, with the only dissenting opinion coming from Carolyn Liehty.

The funds were originally allocated for use in the stadium project, but the construction firm of Montgomery and Associates returned them to the School Board.

According to plans, the press box will be about 30 feet long, with facilities for timekeeper, public address announcer, and both visiting and home broadcast crews. The 1978 football schedule includes home games against Fort Pierce Central and Belle Glades Central, both of which have their games broadcast on local radio.

The press box will cost about $10,000.

PEGGY ROBBINS

Peggy Robbins qualifies for Sup. of Elections

Peggy Robbins, the incumbent Supervisor of Elections for Martin County, qualified Friday to run to succeed herself in the coming election.

Mrs. Robbins was appointed to the supervisor's post last year, to fill the vacancy left by Sandra Randolph who moved out of the county. Hence this will be her first competition for the job in a general election.

As of Monday afternoon, she had only one opponent -- Elsie Hutton of Stuart, a former employee in the elections office.

Mrs. Robbins said she is entering the race this year because she feels a responsibility to the voters.

"I feel this office should be responsible to the voting public -- running elections should be a secondary function," she said Monday.

During the past several months Mrs. Robbins and her staff have been scheduling voter registration days in all parts of the county, and have been working Saturdays to give employed people a chance to register on their days off.

"I don't want anybody to be able to say they couldn't vote because they couldn't get to the courthouse to register," the candidate said. "We've been trying to take the courthouse to the people."

A native of Steinhatchee in north Florida, Mrs. Robbins came to Stuart 15 years ago when her former husband was assigned to the Publix Market there. She has three children, Cynthia, 18, Robin, 17 and Garrish, 10. A past president of the PTA, she is a member of the Martin County Mental Health Association, the Soroptimist Club and the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Broward bank eyeing Martin Co.

Another banking corporation, this one from Broward County, has its eye on Martin County as the site of a new facility.

The Summit Banking Corporation, owner of the Summit Bank in Tamarac, Broward County, is moving northward, according to Thomas J. Seward II, chairman of the board and president. The organization has applied for a bank charter in Palm Beach County with the Division of Banking in the Florida Comptroller's office with the FDIC, with an initial capitalization of $1.8 million.

"This move into Palm Beach County is in line with our bank's orderly growth," Seward said. "The success of our holding company in Broward has prompted us to make this decision. Now we are now also formulating plans to seek a charter in Martin County."

A number of locations are being considered, the president said. The projected population density will be a major factor in influencing the decision as to where it will be situated.

The capitalization of the new Palm Beach and Martin County branches will come from a public offering of common stock and convertible notes later this year, Seward said, with proceeds expected to exceed $8 million.

The Tamarac bank, established in 1974, began in that year with total deposits of nearly $6 million. At the end of 1977, deposits had reached $34.5 million, and today resources total some $41 million.

It now has two branches, one in Lauderhill, and another in Fort Lauderdale. The first branch in Palm Beach County will be in Boca Raton.

MCWA meets August 2, 16

The Martin County Writers Association has scheduled next month's meetings on Wednesdays, August 2 and 16. Meeting time is 12:30 p.m. at the Martin County Public Library in Stuart.

All persons interested in writing are welcome.

Trinity Methodist plans picnic

Trinity United Methodist Church will hold its third annual Summer Picnic this Saturday, July 29, at the Jensen Beach Causeway. Fun and activities for all ages will begin at 4:30 p.m., followed by supper at 6 p.m.

Those attending are requested to bring covered dishes. Grills will be set up and available for those wishing to use them.

New headmaster at St. Michael's

Sheldon Clark, formerly assistant headmaster at Ransom-Everglades School in Miami, has been appointed headmaster of St Michael's School in Stuart. He fills the vacancy created by the departure of Thomas Southard to the Cathedral School in New York City.

Clark has been in private education for the past 12 years, serving at Westminster School in Simsbury, Conn., and Pembroke-Country Day School in Kansas City, Mo., before his appointment at Ransom-Everglades in 1976.

A 1958 graduate of Washington and Lee University, Clark brings with him a wide diversity of private educational experience.

Mrs. Clark, the former Conard Eyre of Honolulu, and the rest of the Clark family, Sheldon III (age 11), Megan and Crocker (3), will arrive shortly after their summer residence on Cape Cod. The family will live in Stuart.

St. Michael's is a private Episcopal day school serving grades pre-kindergarten through 9. Ninth grade is a new addition at St. Michael's for the coming school year.

Few vacancies remain in that school and a few in the lower grades, according to Clark, but the school is expanding its capacity with an anticipated fall enrollment of almost 200 students. Clark may be reached at the school office for further enrollment information.

...it as out to pasture?

Seniors like to talk, that's for sure, and they seem to like to talk mostly amongst themselves, and that may not be so good. When asked why they don't open up with the younger folks, some says "We sound too critical, insinuating the good ol' days were better, and they'll think it's time to put us out to pasture."

Others point out that the seniors do have something valuable to offer, and that's experience. Although technology has completely changed our world, by our antics, it is very evident that human nature is unchanged. Therefore, some of the basics of successful living that were learned the hard way should be passed on.

One issue that's bothering seniors this week is all those strikes against public services, for they can well remember the time when a person was expected to earn an increase rather than extort it with a threat to the safety of the general public. Last Saturday on the Washing Week program, the spokesman was complaining that now there is no reward for doing well, only for belonging to a group strong enough to demand what it wants.

Many retirees tell how proud they were of doing a job the best they could and were not just interested in quitting time so they could get home to a sports program on TV. Some ol' timers had a loyalty to their company and knew it was "the best" because they did their best to make it that way.

All this leads up to the fact that there must be a better exchange of ideas between the generations, so the seniors can help the juniors solve their problems. Probably not many seniors know that to buy a home, through the VA, the banks insist on a monthly income of $1900 before they'll talk mortgage, and there is no relief in sight. Some seniors have now become brave enough to mention the unmentionable and say that, unless union demands are kept in line with increased productivity, $100,000 home, $10,000 cars and $5 hamburgers are just around the corner. Seniors can tell 'em that hard work isn't too painful. They did it and were able to retire to sunny Florida.

All's not lost up Washing way, as Senator Richard (Dick) Stone responded to a personal letter on holding unions in check until inflation stabilizes. A two-page letter states, in part, "In my opinion H.R.8410 in its present form would impede rather than expedite the resolution of labor-management disputes." In any case, the bill was sent back to committee, and if it comes before them again, it'll be in a much changed form. He is much concerned.

So, again this week, it seems as though the problems of the seniors were beyond their control and no matter what, next week will be worse. But that's not so, as here's another "Good for Seniors" item:

Last Friday, at Treasure Coast Congregate Meal, Langford Park, Pam Pickard of HRS explained that agency's services. HRS (Health and Rehabilitative Service of Florida) has a volunteer center at 311½ E. Ocean Blvd., Stuart, tel. 287-8585, for the many services that Pam explained in detail.

In general, she said eligible adults having difficulty managing for themselves because of physical or mental health disability, or because of age, can be helped to remain in their own homes or to arrange alternate living facilities when necessary. Disabled adults and those on low incomes over 60, who need support services or alternate living arrangements, can be helped.

So, again, the seniors have something going for them, no further away than the nearest telephone.

CHAPTER EVENTS

As the Chinese might say, this is "The Week of the Bulletin." It went to press last week and will be picked up at the printer, Tuesday, July 25. Then the fold, seal, label and bundle bunch will go "to-it" at 9 Ne 6th St., OBP. This is generally done at the monthly picnic at Langford Park, but during the summer, with picnics on the breeze causeway, it would be a flying, scattered mess. However, the 01 bunch of yester-year, Ernie and Marion C., Veronica Snyder, Mildreda Capanna with the new addresser, and Al Tucker to deliver to the P.O., will see that the bulletin gets out on time.

This is a good time to tell the Golden Eagle story. The first issue, without a name, came out November 1, 1975, a single sheet with a circulation of 400. It has since grown to 10 pages and 800 circulation. Mike Mann, deceased, beat the bushes for the first 12 advertisers to cover the costs. Then, with funds available, printers were contacted and Russell and Schmoyer came up with the best deal.

The bulletin came to life as Pete Petroy and Ernie C. batted out the copy. Many contests were run and one of the first was "Name the Bulletin" contest, which resulted in the name Golden Eagle being chosen.

Many innovations were tried: an "HAARPS" column with AARP gripes (very popular); an insert page with photos (would have more if there was a chapter photographer); lost and found, employment referral, trade and traders, etc.; in fact, about everything but "Lovelorn" (and who knows?)

Now is the time to start contact old and new advertisers for another six-month series. Asst. Adv. Mgr. Mrs. Evelyn Cotter can again tell the advertisers that the rates are still being held at the 1975 level in spite of 30 percent inflation during that time. You see, they've squawked so much about "better for less" that they don't dare to add their lil bit to the general inflation. Anyway, by some good ol' New England pinch-penny methods and plenty of volunteer help, the cost has been contained.

Speaking of containing the cost, about Health Cost Containment Committee. It seems as though the medical profession is going to take a wait-and-see policy, so it's up to us to shem them what we have in mind.

Therefore, at the next meeting of the Martin County Interagency Steering Committee (Oct. 6), it will be the main item on the agenda. MCCA, VNA, SAC and the Health Dept. and many others will have representatives at the meeting and it is hoped that from there, the committee can be formed.

Another angle that's progressed a bit: one way to approach this problem would be to make an investigation of the health needs of the elderly and propose remedies. "FEH" (Florida Endowments for the Humanities) was contacted regarding a "grant." Here's the latest reply, in part: "If AARP is seriously interested and some one persons masters guidelines, I do not see why you could not receive a series of grants." So, here is a way open to us, and it shall be pursued.

Al Tucker, 2nd V.P., sent a card from Tallahassee, where he attended the Silver-Haired Legislature, saying it was very impressive, and "we're off now to Florence, S.C., and some peach festivals."

Confusion, confusion

...s the old saying goes, confusion ...gned supreme last Thursday, the ... of the chapter's July meeting. To ...rt with, the folks at the Community ...ter did not know we had a meeting ...anized, or rather, they thought we ...tinely were not having a meeting. ...e called for a considerable amount ...scurrying around, removing tables ... putting up chairs, but finally, ...erything was arranged satisfac- ...ly.

...hen there was confusion over ...ether the meeting was supposed to ...rt at 1 p.m. or at 1:30. In this ...ance, a compromise was arrived ...and the session was called to order ...Vice President Frank Alexander at ...proximately 1:20 p.m.

...ial for the record and to avoid ...fusion in the future, the scheduled ...e of the meeting is 1 p.m., with refreshments being served at the conclusion of the regular program.

Frank A. presided in the absence of President Maurie Arluck, who left Wednesday of last week for New York to seek medical consultation. We wish Maurie a speedy recovery and return.

One by-product of Maurie's recent indisposition has been the absence of the chapter's news bulletin. Whether it was because members hadn't received their monthly reminder, or whether it's just because so many people are out of town, the attendance at the July meeting was very small.

Those who were not present missed an illuminating and informative presentation by two delightful ladies -- Irene Wampler and Dorothy Chubb -- on the services offered by the St. Lucie Home Health Agency, described in its brochure as "A Medicare Provider."

What the agency provides is skilled care for people who are housebound with illness and are under a plan of treatment by a physician. This care is free to the patient. The Home Health Agency bills Medicare for its services, and the whole tab is picked up by Medicare (providing the $60 deductible has already been satisfied).

Mrs. Wampler said that private insurance companies are becoming quite interested in this type of care because it is much cheaper than either hospital or nursing home. Home Health Agency, while receiving most of its income from the feds, is a private enterprise. It must meet stringent federal, state and local qualifications before it is certified to set up for business.

The three conditions that must be met by sick persons in order to receive the Home Health services are:

1. Be housebound (dependent on someone else in order to go anywhere);

2. Need skilled care on an intermittent basis (patients who need 24-hour care have to enter nursing homes).

And 3. Be under a plan of treatment by a physician.

The trained nurses of the service cannot call on you at home until your doctor has approved. He reviews the case every 30 days.

"While your physician continues to supervise your care, our agency can send out a team of health care specialists with the necessary equipment and supplies to give you the best care in your own home," Mrs. Wampler said. The interest aroused by the ladies' presentations was reflected in the number of questions put to them afterwards.

Fifty-fifty winners were Charlie Coffman and Thelma McComb, which was fitting since both of them have worked hard on behalf of the chapter. Charlie is on the board and, with Paul Perington, has been handling the effort to secure home safety devices at reduced prices for AARP members. Thelma, assisted by Ethel Krall, handled the refreshments after the meeting.

Charlie reported that he and Paul had secured from Robaico a price of $35 for a 5-lb. ABC fire extinguisher, of which Paul showed a sample. However, he added, research had shown that Sears, Roebuck now has on sale a similar extinguisher for $16.88 plus tax and shipping charges. He also told members that Robaico now has a special price of $20 for the smoke detector that earlier sold for $22.75.

Treasurer, Elsner ruffman reported a balance of $875.41 as of July 1. That ain't bad chum.

Don White, who has a remarkable track record on civic responsibility and interest, was applauded for his brief remarks on the apathy reflected in the school financing election last week, when only 22 per cent of the electorate voted. "We can keep our freedoms only through the ballot box," he said, "and when we fail to make use of this right, we lose it. The result of last Tuesday's election shows that we are only 22 per cent removed from dictatorship."

There's a great deal of wisdom in what Don says, but most people won't do anything about it until it's too late.

PSL man arrested in pot boat seizure

Nicholas Jennings Uhl, 42, of Port St. Lucie, was arrested last Saturday night in Boca Raton aboard a boat which U.S. Customs officials say contained more than three tons of marijuana.

Uhl was charged with possession of marijuana and possession with intent to distribute it.

Customs officials reported Uhl and three other men were aboard a 43-foot Sportfishing boat, the Gem, when agents made a routine check of the boat. The craft, said to be registered in West Palm Beach, was stopped in Lake Boca Raton Saturday night after lawmen noticed it had no running lights on. Three men jumped overboard and escaped but Uhl was caught aboard the boat, agents reported. The marijuana was said to weight 6,520 pounds and to be of Colombian origin.

LETTING GO–Whenever it gets too hot for boys in North Port St. Lucie, they don't have to look hard for a spot to cool off. A swimmin' hole just north of Prima Vista Boulevard provides the answer. Just grab a rope, take a swing, and let go. You're guaranteed to be cooler for doing so.

PSL youngsters beat the heat at swimmin' hole

TRAIN TIME–These Port St. Lucie boys form a "train" by progressively adding more buddies to a swinging rope at their swimmin' hole in North Port St. Lucie.

Text and photos by Bob Fryer

In Port St. Lucie, where summertime has produced its usual combination of sweltering heat and idle time for kids out of school, a group of youngsters has found what they feel is the perfect way to have some fun while beating the heat.

Their solution to the ages-old dilemma of what to do on hot summer afternoons is probably the same one many of this city's older residents used to engage in – a trip to the old swimmin' hole.

If you thought the swimmin' hole went out with the horse and buggy, think again. There's a delightful spot along the North Fork of the St. Lucie River where area youths gather daily to do just what their forefathers probably did when they were kids. A huge oak tree stands atop a bluff on the river about 100 yards from the Prima Vista Boulevard bridge. With the addition of a couple of ropes tied to large branches that bend over the river, a group of Port St. Lucie boys have made the spot into a modern-day swimmin' hole.

Some of them take daredevil dives from the tops of the highest branches, while others prefer to use the ropes to swing out over the water before taking the plunge. They do backflips, frontflips and, of course, bellyflops.

One of the more inventive methods of getting wet is a thing they call a "train." It begins with one youth grabbing a rope and swining over the river. When the rope swings back to the tree, another boy hops on. Then another. And another -- until a complete "train" is formed.

Usually, the "trains" don't last long after the fourth or fifth passenger has boarded, as the weight of riders becomes too much for the engineer on the bottom. But when the inevitable splash comes, nobody seems to mind.

CRASH LANDING–After making a "train" by having one new boy hop on the rope each time it swung by the tree, the weight of the extra passengers became too much to bear. The result: a watery crash landing.

Hurricanes

RC disaster team prepares around clock

BY SALLY LATHAM

People who have never been through a Florida hurricane either look toward one as a potential game – (is it going to be a two-bottle or three-bottle blow?) – or as a minor nuisance involving laying in a supply of canned goods and a few candles.

But Peter Otovic, disaster chairman for the American Red Cross in Martin County, will tell you that getting ready for the Big Blow, when it comes, is a full-time, around the calendar job, and a serious one.

"The main thing is to know your home, and whether or not you should evacuate," Otovic said. "Everyone on the island should be ready to evacuate. They may think they're safe in those condominiums, but wave action can undermine any of them."

The same goes for people living in mobile homes.

"Everybody should get out of mobile homes, no matter how well they're tied down, if they're within 50 miles of the coast," Otovic warned. "True, the law requires tie-downs for all of them, but they aren't required to tie down added Florida rooms or garages. They can go flying."

There are many details that people forget when they're getting ready for evacuating, the disaster chairman told The Mirror. Everything should be disconnected, the faucet turned on, and everything loose like garbage cans and lawn furniture brought inside.

One thing nearly everyone tends to overlook which is a potential dangerous weapon is the mail box, generally set only superficially in the ground. In winds of hurricane strength, such boxes have been known to be hurled like javelins through the sides of buildings.

Otovic and his Red Cross crew are vital to the community in time of natural disaster. Their job is to work closely with the Civil Defense office in keeping people informed on the status of the developing storm, and to make certain the shelters are ready for the influx of people when they have to get out of their homes.

"We're always in need of volunteers, especially nurses and emergency medical technicians," he said. "At each shelter, we have an overseer, a nurse in charge of first aid, another person in charge of food, and a registrar in charge of keeping track of people. We also need someone to serve in communications."

Residents who know they must get out of their homes and into shelters, he suggested, should prepare themselves well in advance with personal medications. They should bring pillows, blankets for each person in the household, flashlights and extra batteries and changes of clothing.

"You should also bring reading material, cards, games or other diversions to make the time go faster," Otovic said. "You might as well make up your mind you'll be holed in for as much as a week."

If you have an extra pair of glasses, it's a good idea to have them with you, in case one pair gets lost or broken, he said.

"And you should have eaten your first meal before coming to the shelter," he cautioned. "It takes a while to prepare food for large numbers of people."

The Red Cross, even before the annual hurricane season begins, makes the rounds of the proposed shelter with the county engineer, to make sure they are storm-proof, and determines the potential capacity of each. This way, they are prepared to direct people to shelters where there will be room enough.

Through the Red Cross's various other services, the disaster crew keeps pretty well up on invalids and shut-ins who would need help getting to a shelter, and they stand ready to supply transportation.

"Just one thing," Otovic warned. "Expectant mothers six months or more pregnant shouldn't go to the shelters – they should go to the hospital."

If you feel your home is safe and sturdy enough to withstand the hurricane and you plan to weather it out, you should take several advance precautions, Otovic says.

First, make sure your car's gas tank is filled. For boarding up windows, he recommends ¾ or ⅝ inch plywood. Stock up with an adequate camp stove, lanterns, candles, plenty of canned or dried meats, vegetables and fruits, canned juices and bottled drinks.

Many Floridians, especially old-timers who have been through hurricanes, make a habit of filling empty quart and gallon bottles with water and always have it on hand, "just in case." If the bottles have tight caps, the water will be good indefinitely without replacing it.

In areas that have city water, water mains have been known to burst or clog during a storm. And if you have well water, you're out of luck when the electric power goes off. But if you have a good supply of emergency water on hand, you can still pour it in the tank to flush the commode, or use it for cooking.

However, Otovic warns, before you make plans to remain at home, go to the county offices and ask to inspect the flood plain maps to check the elevation of your residence. In a major hurricane, even the sturdiest houses have been known to be flooded, and even wash off their foundations.

Seek shelters or not?

If your home or mobile home or apartment is anywhere in the questionable flood plain area, it's best to plan on going to an official shelter, says Steve Wells, deputy director of civil defense for Martin County.

The flood plain maps are located in all post offices, he said. No matter how sturdy your home, it is senseless to take the chance of being trapped by the inevitable flooding which accompanies hurricane winds along the coastal areas.

In the Jensen-Rio area, there are five designated shelters, with varying capacities. In Port St. Lucie, father inland where the flooding threat is less intense, there are two.

The Jensen-area shelters, their capacities and telephone numbers are as follows:

Jensen Beach Elementary School, 740 – 334-1666

Jensen Beach Community Church, 400 – 334-8716

Jensen Beach Bowling Lanes, 300 – 334-2733

First Baptist Church, 400 – 334-2282

First United Presbyterian, 300 – 287-2511

People are asked to remember that the shelters open only after a hurricane warning is officially announced. Transistor radios should be kept on during the watch period, to listen to the advice and directives from the civil defense headquarters.

Presently, there are only two approved disaster shelters in Port St. Lucie, but Gerald Girard, head of the city's disaster committee, said in a recent interview that he hopes to add more shelters to the list in the next few months.

The two shelters now approved are the Port St. Lucie Elementary School on Curtis St., just north of Sportsman's Park, and the Community Center, on Prima Vista Boulevard just across the street from Sportsman's Park.

"We'll be working to get more shelters, and hope to have five or six more before too long," Girard said. He noted that the Port St. Lucie Bank may be one of the new shelters, but said Citizens Federal Savings and Loan, which had been under consideration, will not be a shelter.

"We decided that with a whole wall of glass on one side of it, it wouldn't make a good shelter," he said. He also noted that since flood plain maps show Sandpiper Bay Resort may be susceptable to flooding, it will not be on the list.

HURRICANE EXTRAS

USE THIS CHECK LIST WHEN BLOW NEARS

Here, in brief, is a suggested list which should be filled before the big blow hits. Pasted to a small piece of cardboard and hung in the kitchen, it will provide an immediate reference during the rush-around period the day before a hurricane hits.

Skip the non-essentials, except such things as a favorite doll or a toy for the children. Leave the portable TV set at home. There won't be enough power for it and you might find you enjoy talking to your family or neighbors.

In the event the storm is of such intensity that your family decides to take shelter in a Disaster Center, take with you:

( ) Battery radio, with spare batteries
( ) Flash lights (2), with spare batteries
( ) Electric lantern, with spare batteries
( ) Three to five gallons of water per person
( ) Canned meats, soups, etc.
( ) Canned fruit juices
( ) Special foods for babies, the aged, and invalids
( ) Can opener - not electric
( ) Dried cereals
( ) Crackers, cookies
( ) Milk, powdered and evaporated
( ) Sterno or other self-operating stove
( ) Matches
( ) Cot or sleeping bag (there may not be enough to go around if the shelter is jammed)
( ) Flashlight or lantern of your own
( ) Any special foods and the utensils to prepare them
( ) Small quantity of water
( ) Change of clothing
( ) Blankets
( ) Mops, rags, buckets
( ) Up to date and "refreshed" first aid kit
( ) Paper plates (to conserve water)
( ) Small tools (brought in from carport) such as screwdrivers, pliers, nails and hammer

Hurricane survival demands advance planning

If a hurricane warning goes into effect, you have only three choices of what course you can follow.

A number of factors must be taken into consideration regarding the final decision you must make, and careful consideration could make the difference between survival and disaster.

A resident must make up his mind whether or not he should batten down the hatches and stay in his home until the hurricane passes, leave and seek higher and safer ground at an official shelter or reliable hotel or motel.

Officials say 75 to 90 per cent of damage done by a storm is caused by water, not from wind. This means a person should learn what the elevation of his property is. Maps at all U.S. Post Offices show the elevations of property in Martin County. The elevations are broken down to from 0-5 feet, 5-10 feet and above 10 feet.

For precise locations residents should check the maps or call the county engineer. Generally, all of Hutchinson Island, the Town of Sewall's Point, the causeways, and most of Ocean Breeze Park are in the 0-5 feet category.

In the 5-10 feet category is the center portion of the Sewall's Point peninsula, Port Sewall, parts of Rio and parts of Pineapple Ridge north of Jensen.

The top of Pineapple Ridge and the west bank of Sewall's Point are above 10 feet.

Martin County Civil Defense Director Brian Tredray said that in the event of a hurricane warning, meaning a storm is imminent within the next 12 to 24 hours, residents who live on land from 1-10 feet should seek another location to weather the storm.

"Because nature is undeterminable, it's best to be on the safe side," he said. "In the last 12 hours a storm can pick up speed and strength. If we could get those people out we would have almost no problem whatsoever. We would have accomplished 90 per cent of our job."

If your home is built to withstand strong winds, is above the 10 feet mark, it should be safe to stay in.

It must be taken into consideration that even though a home may be located on high ground and safe from high water or wind, it still may not be safe to stay. It could be that access roads to the home are low and might be washed away making access after the storm impossible for daily transportation or emergency vehicles. If such is the case, evacuation should be considered.

If residents live in a boat, motor home, or perhaps an old and unreliable home, they should consider relocating during the storm.

If a person does decide to stay at home he must make some basic precautions. Canned foods should be stockpiled and other types of food, particularly those which do not require refrigeration.

A first aid kit should be adequate.

Bathtubs should be sterilized along with other water containers so they can be used in case the water system fails or becomes contaminated. Clean containers with chlorine to disinfect them, and always boil stored water before drinking it.

Stock up your home with batteries, candles and whatever other types of emergency lighting equipment you may want to use. Check out or purchase a battery operated radio.

Refrigerators and freezers should be put on the coldest settings and should then be opened only when necessary. If electric service is shut off, a freezer could keep foods frozen for 48 hours, maximum. Check into the possibility of purchasing dry ice.

The gas tank of your car should be filled in advance of the storm. Do not wait until the last minute to get gas because gas stations are bound to be crowded and they may not be able to stock enough to serve everyone at the last minute.

Particularly check your outside yard. Everything that is loose, or could possibly become loose, should be stored away in a garage or tied down. Swimming pools should be half emptied and TV antennas should be taken down and lashed to a tree or to some solid object.

Board over and tape windows which are not protected by awnings. Keep tools handy for repairs during the storm.

Changes in barometric pressure could cause windows to blow out from the inside. It is advised that a window be kept partially opened on the downwind side of the house, and internal doors be kept open. When winds change during the storm, keep track and close the opened window and open a second one on the opposite side of the house.

If you happen to be directly hit by a hurricane, the "eye" will pass over you. If the eye passes, it will seem as if the storm has ended. Really, it is only half over. Do not go outside for a prolonged period of time because the wind and rain will resume, probably within a half hour.

There are a number of guidelines to follow for those who plan to go to a shelter.

Shelters will be announced during a hurricane watch and are usually opened during the warning period.

Personal items, including pillows, blankets and other supplies should be taken, along with food for the first meal in the shelter.

Parents of babies should bring baby food, formulas, diapers and other necessary equipment.

Once inside a shelter, no one will be permitted to leave until the storm passes unless an emergency arises.

Make arrangements to store pets at kennels or friends' houses, because no pets will be allowed in a shelter. Alcoholic beverages are not permitted.

Women in the last stages of pregnancy or sick persons should have arrangements made to go to a hospital or a shelter, depending on the advice of a physician.

Store water in a sterilized bathtub before leaving the home in case it is needed after the storm.

If you choose to leave the area, make the same precautions at home as if you were going to a shelter, but remember to go to a safe area to stay. Select a good motel away from low areas or stay with friends who live in a safe location.

After the storm has passed when going outside or returning home, be very careful to avoid all fallen or entwanging wires. Wild animals, especially snakes, can be hiding in any wreckage because they are usually driven from their homes during the storm.

Don't go joyriding in your car, and don't use your phone unless you really have to.

Report to the proper authorities all hazardous conditions such as downed electric wires, broken water mains and overturned bottled gas tanks.

For those who want to make a hurricane damage insurance claim, don't touch anything until your insurance man arrives to see the original damage.

What to do with your pet

Since hurricane shelters operated by the American Red Cross will not permit animals in the shelters during a disaster, many may wonder what they can do with a pet when evacuation is planned during a hurricane.

Kennels in the Martin County area are in their busiest time of year during the summer season, mostly because many owners leave pets in kennels while on vacation.

If you have made an advance reservation with your favorite kennel and they have the room, you will having nothing to worry about, except it isn't easy to plan in advance for a hurricane.

Some kennels have insurance policies which do not cover dogs brought in during disasters.

So, what can you do?

One answer is to find a motel inland, away from the path of the storm, which allows guests to have pets. That way you would be able to evacuate your family and pet and weather the storm together.

If you have a pet, must evacuate, but don't want to spend the money for a motel room, you can always make plans to leave the pet with a friend in another town or in some home where it is considered safe to be during a hurricane.

Some may even plan to leave the pet alone at home and take the chance it might survive the storm. If this is done, make sure there is adequate food and water for the pet and that the home is properly prepared for the storm.

Jean Henry, a noted animal keeping expert in Martin County, said that keeping a pet at home could have some bad effects.

"If you have a high-strung animal you may come back to find your home a complete disaster," she said. "The pet may be subject to stress, heat and lack of ventilation."

Secure your mobile home

It is a well-known fact that, because they are light, portable units, mobile homes are particularly vulnerable to high winds created by tornadoes and hurricanes.

Florida, among many other states, has a law requiring that mobile homes be tied down, and Martin County building codes follow the state law.

According to Martin County Building Director Harold Glass, the code requires that trailer tie-downs be secured to sand anchors in the ground beneath the trailer.

"But in a bad storm, I'd say it would be a good idea to get out of them," Glass said. "Even though they might be tied down."

The Civil Defense Preparedness Agency of the United States Department of Defense offers the following advice for those who receive notice of a hurricane warning:

Tie down or remove all awnings, cabanas and other outdoor fixtures.

Pack up and secure all breakables inside the trailer.

Tape all windows.

Disconnect electrical, sewer and water lines.

Open faucets so water will drain out. Leave the faucets open.

Commission outlines island evacuation

If you live on Hutchinson Island, be prepared to get out if a hurricane threatens. The Martin County Commission emphasizes that ALL island residents will be evacuated should a storm of hurricane dimensions appear to be heading in this direction.

In an open letter to Hutchinson Island residents, Commissioner Tom Higgins defines the plan:

"Hurricane season is here again. In planning for the protection of human life, we have focused on the county's most serious problem, the evacuation of Hutchinson Island.

Taking into account the severe wave action and erosion that we have experienced with strong northeasters, when a hurricane was not even involved, we are concerned with

1 The only route out for those residents living south of the Elliott Museum.

2 The causeways to the island which are only of an average of five feet above mean sea level.

3 The anticipated use of the Jensen causeway by the large population in South St. Lucie County on Hutchinson Island.

We propose and urgently request that you study and familiarize yourself with the following evacuation plan.

Hurricane Watch Period: Residents living south of Elliott Museum--make immediate preparations for evacuation to be effected before wave action threatens curtailment of traffic on McArthur Boulevard.

Remaining residents of the Martin County portion of the island make advance preparations for evacuation.

Hurricane Warning: Remaining residents make final preparations for evacuation to be effected before gale winds arrive and subsequent increase in tide levels, using the Stuart Causeway only. It should be noted that preparation time may be curtailed to a period of two to three hours.

The Jensen Causeway will be restricted for use by those residents of Hutchinson Island portion of St. Lucie County, many of which will be pulling trailers. On reaching the Jensen mainland, these residents will be routed north on Indian River Drive to Walton Road where they can follow their choice of utilizing U.S.1 and the turnpike to areas North or to Fort Pierce for shelter. Those residents will not be allowed to use the Stuart causeway.

Our objective is to prevent needless loss of life and your cooperation is urgently solicited."

Safety measures after storm

Stay out of disaster areas. Unless you are qualified to help, your presence might hamper first-aid and rescue work.

Drive carefully along debris-filled streets. Roads may be undermined and may collapse under the weight of a car. Landslides along cuts are also a hazard.

Check refrigerated food for spoilage if power has been off during the storm.

Remember that hurricanes moving inland can cause severe flooding. Stay away from river banks and streams.

NOAA Weather Service advisories will keep you informed on river flood stages.

FLAGLER STREET DAMAGE--Debris filled the streets of Stuart when the famed hurricane of 1949 struck.

'Cane cycle says we're due

"The weather is changing. We're not going to have any more hurricanes."

You hear these words so frequently they begin to sound like a catechism. But if you notice, they usually come from the bright, scientifically inclined young people who have never encountered the insidious wiles of the gusty ladies, which have been playing cat and mouse with Florida's coastlines since long before the weather bureau was born to give them feminine names.

Although totally unpredictable, "hurricane years" appear to run in cycles of ten to 15. Deputy Civil Defense Director Steve Wells pointed out in checking the historical background of Big Blows on the records in his subterranean office on Flagler Street. And the records show that, often, when one year sets off a chain reaction of storms, it carried over to the next year.

For example, both 1908 and 1910 brought disastrous hurricanes to the Florida Keys, and both were late storms, occurring in October. Then a hiatus of nine years for the Keys, during which time the only 'cane of serious dimension went up the Gulf and hit Pensacola in 1917.

The next hurricane worthy of the name to hit the east coast waited until nearly ten years later, and that was one old-timers never forget. In 1928, on Sept. 16, destruction hit. The storm, tearing into Palm Beach, swept into Okeechobee and literally blew all the water out of the lake, killing 1,838 natives, most of them Indians.

Palm Beach was again the target for a storm in 1933, but not of nearly the severity of the '28 blow. Then another 13 years of quiet for the east coast, when a September storm lashed the upper Keys and Miami.

Around these parts, old-timers are still talking about the hurricane of 1949. That storm, hitting at Palm Beach and moving in on the Stuart-Jensen area, tore off roof-tops, downed giant trees, and flooded the entire area. People who still remember "Cleo" are saying the next one will send them to high ground, wherever they can find it. The flooding aftermath of a storm can be more deadly than the blow itself.

In 1965, the killer was Betsy, which decimated the Keys, marched up the line pulling a sneak attack on Fort Lauderdale, where the hurricane was supposed to pass ten miles out to sea. The damage was in the millions wherever Betsy put her foot down.

The Atlantic side of the state has been free from the big storms since then, so as Wells points out, the law of probabilities says we're "due." He cautions people it's better to be prepared and wrong, than to be too optimistic and "caught."

Wells, though a comparatively young man, is well-versed in the matter of preparedness. In the service, after returning from Vietnam, he had four years of experience in disaster preparedness at the base in Grand Forks, N.D. He joined the CD office in Martin County in January of 1977, and last month was named Deputy Director.

...was asked about a report that Fort ...Mayor Buell Brown may be ...ced in having the two cities join ...e in a battle over double taxation, ...essary said he hadn't heard from ...n yet, but planned to talk to him

"I saw he and Charles Jackson (the Fort Pierce city manager) were at our meeting Monday for a while, and I had planned to talk to him by now, but just haven't gotten to it," McChesney said Tuesday evening.

The mayor added that he hoped to have a resolution prepared for the next city council meeting (at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 8) for council consideration. The resolution would ask the county to provide specific information about how county tax money is spent.

When asked if the resolution might be a predicate for a lawsuit, he said "not necessarily, but if we don't like how they reply, we might have to take legal action. This double tax thing has been kicking around for a long time and it's time somebody tried to get it settled, once and for all. And, I'm in the mood to pursue this to the end," he said.

City council members, city staff members, and about a dozen Little league players and parents from Port St. Lucie attended the county commission workshop session Monday and received no firm commitments from the commission for increased financial aid in the future.

McChesney outlined the city's position, saying city residents paid about $875,000 in county taxes this year and have not, in his opinion, received county services equalling that value. He particularly cited sheriff's protection and recreation facilities and programs as services in which the city is being short-changed.

"The natives are getting restless," he told commissioners, pointing out that many county budget expenses, such as the county finance director, attorney, development coordinator, administrator, engineer, building and zoning department and purchasing department do not benefit city residents.

"Basically, it evolves into double taxation, " the mayor charged, later adding, "We hate like heck to see money going out and nothing coming back."

McChesney noted that the city council is debating whether to renew a $171,000 contract with Sheriff Lanie Norvell for a total of nine extra policemen to protect the city. He pointed out that at any given time, only two patrolmen are assigned to cover the area south of Midway Road as the basic level of protection Norvell offers. The mayor said if the city does not contract for the nine extra men, the county ought to fund Norvell's department sufficiently to allow for more than two men assigned to the south county area.

City Attorney Spencer Gilbert said, "To just have two patrolmen from Midway Road south is obviously not enough for adequate protection."

But county commissioners didn't agree with the argument, and a short time after city council members left the meeting, the commission approved Norvell's budget for the coming year. It contained no funds for beefing up patrols in the south county area, and no funds for new personnel.

Commission chairman John Park said if anyone was causing double taxation, it was the city, by having services over and above the basic level of services offered by the county. He said if the city does not sign the contract with Norvell, "It will leave you with the same service the sheriff provides countywide."

Commissioner Ed Enns noted that several years ago there was a study done to determine if there was any double taxation and said, "I'm satisfied there is no double taxation."

As for police protection, Enns said, "If you want what everybody else gets, then you'll have to take your chances -- the same as the guy on Hawley Road or Glades Cutoff Road."

City officials have complained in the past that the study done earlier on double taxation was of little value. When it was conducted, the city and county used different accounting methods, making it difficult to pinpoint areas where city residents pay taxes for a duplication of services. However, due to a new state law, this coming year will be the first year that all city and county governments will use the same accounting methods.

Should the city fail to sign the proposed $171,000 contract for extra protection, Norvell may have to fire nine patrolmen.

In addition to the plea for more county funds for police protection of Port St. Lucie, McChesney noted that parks "are a real sore spot" and said he was disturbed that the county recreation department budget proposed for the coming year included no funds for Port St. Lucie's Sportsman's Park.

County commissioners suggested that the city deed the park to the county, or lease it to the county for 50 years. If that were done, it could come under the county park system and be included in county recreational programs, they said.

That suggestion was made last year, too, and just like last year, city council reaction to the suggestion was less than enthusiastic.

McChesney noted the city park is worth about $250,000 and he said he would be reluctant to give that up to the county, especially since it did not appear the county would be in a position to fund the park at any level above what the city now provides. He asked that the county help out with the costs of capital improvements and the city would operate and maintain the park.

County commissioners took the position, however, that recreation is a countywide service responsibility and that the park ought to be in the county system. To provide funds for it as a city park could get the county in trouble with the state auditor, Chairman Park said.

City officials and Bob Bartz of the Little league in Port St. Lucie noted that at present the park is totally city funded, yet about half the kids using it come from unincorporated areas of the county. A total of 42 teams, including 638 kids, used the two ball fields at the park this year, and when the ball season starts next year, a total of 72 teams, made up of 1,123 players, are projected to sign up for use of those fields. The city hopes to buy a new park site in the Mid Port section of the city, and have it readied for the coming ball season.

County commissioners did indicate that they would have the county recreation committee study recreational needs with an eye toward spending some cash on recreation in the Port St. Lucie area. Park said cash from the county's contingency fund may have to be used, and said the county has been considering purchase of a park in the area.

City officials complained that the county has no recreational facilities south of Midway Road.

MAYOR WILLIAM McCHESNEY asked county commissioners for a fair return of tax dollars city residents pay to the county when he and fellow council members met with the commissioners Monday. After the meeting the mayor said he was not pleased with the commission's reception and hinted a double taxation lawsuit may be brewing. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

$1.4 million budget proposed for PSL

BY BOB FRYER

The first draft of a proposed $1,436,559 budget for the 1978-79 fiscal year will be reviewed at 3:30 p.m. Friday at City Hall by the Port St. Lucie finance committee.

The rough-draft budget is substantially higher than the current operating budget of $787,052. However, it should be noted that revenues to the city are expected to be greater this coming year than in the fiscal year ending on Sept. 30. It should also be noted that without a number of supplemental items that weren't in the 1977-78 budget, and that the council may not include in the new budget, the 1978-79 budget stands at $1,096,857 in the first draft prepared by City Treasurer Gerald Van Patten.

In spite of the increase in the total budget figure, the proposed new budget does not indicate any increase in the 1.5 mill property tax rate charge.

In spite of the increase in the total figure, the proposed budget does not indicate any increase in the 1.5 mill property tax rate charged in 1977-78. That millage rate generated $311,702 this year and for the coming year is expected to generate $554,089. This is apparently due to increased assessments and to the large number of new homes coming onto the tax roll.

During the current year, it was anticipated that building permit fees would generate $175,000 for the city. However, with two months of permit revenues still to be recorded, and with permits hitting triple digit figures for the last three months, some $308,743 has already been received this year. Van Patten, who said last year that it is better to underestimate permit revenues instead of overestimate, in the event of a bust to the housing boom, has projected $300,000 in building permit revenues for the coming fiscal year.

Increases in franchise fee revenues and the city's potion of state revenue sharing are also projected for the new year. Additionally, $200,000 from the city's million-dollar-plus reserve fund is projected to be taken from the fund for use in the coming year.

Though no council decision on the matter has been made yet, the budget projects spending $171,140 to renew a contract with Sheriff Lanie Norvell for extra police protection.

Projected increases in spending include a jump from $299,057 in salaries and social security benefits this year to $363,058 for the coming year.

As for supplemental items that are included in the overall budget figure of $1,436,559, there is $13,394 set aside for an assistant city planner, $120,000 for start-up of a city police force, $83,238 for acquisition of five park sites, $85,542 for a new Sportsman's Park type recreation facility, and $83,030 for creation of a city maintenance department.

100 new homes

The housing boom continues in Port St. Lucie.

It seems every month for the last year city officials have been able to say that, and records for the month of July are no exception.

Last month, the city issued permits for 100 new homes, with a combined estimated value of $2,390,842, and permits for 35 additions to existing. The combined value of the additions is estimated at $101,929.

This is the third month in a row that permits for new homes in the city have been in triple digits. Until May, when an all-time record of 164 permits were issued for new homes, there had never been a month in the city's history of 100 or more permits. However, for about a year up to that time, the monthly total of new home permits steadily rose toward the century mark. In June, there were 141 permits issued, so July's total of 100 could be a sign that the boom has peaked and is on the way down.

Mayor William McChesney noted, however, that July is traditionally a slow month for construction.

Asked how long he though it would be before a new elementary school can be built, Blackmer said, "I don't know...but the prospects for one soon seem dim."

On July 18 county voters rejected a proposed two-mill special school tax that would have raised funds for a new school in Port St. Lucie. Last week, school board members adopted a budget with no funds provided for a new school, and school officials seemed to have no idea when there would be money for one.

Port St. Lucie Elementary will be the only school in the county on double sessions this year.

Applicants reviewed for PSL city manager and engineer

City council members were to have met at 9 a.m. today to review applications for the jobs of city manager and city engineer.

A total of 80 applications have been filed for the city manager's post and 35 persons are competing for the city engineer position.

Mayor William McChesney said he hopes that for each job, the council could agree at the meeting on five or six top candidates. If so, then the top contenders would be called in for personal interviews with the council. It is hoped both positions can be filled by the first of next month.

The position of city manager became open when Elmer Cox resigned from that job effective July 7. Cox suffered chest pains and was hospitalized in May, just hours after two council members called for him to resign or be dismissed. The action to remove him from office followed a report on Cox's involvement in a plan to exchange two controversial shopping center building permits for a reduction in city hall rent. Cox had asked for a public hearing on the matter, but after his attack he decided to resign, on advice of his doctor.

The position of city engineer is a new one, as to date the city has only been employing engineer Cal Montgomery as a consultant. The salary for the job is $19,080 a year. As for the city manager's position, the ad asks applicants to state a salary preference. Cox was working at $19,500 a year.

One of the applicants for the city manager's job is Mike Szuszyo, the city planner. He has held that job for 11 months, having worked for the state Department of Community Affairs for four years before that, the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council for two years, and Reynolds, Smith and Hills, in Jacksonville, for a year. He has a masters degree in urban planning from the University of Illinois.

SUPER BARGAIN in fire trucks is the latest addition to the Jensen Beach Fire Department fleet – an all-original tanker truck built by Tony Rojt, right, on an ancient Army cab-and-chassis. Chief Joe Luciano, left, says the fire truck, which was built for less than $5,000, would have cost more than $25,000 new. And the money came from the annual supportive donations of Jensen area individuals and organizations. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Fire department reincarnates truck; wants west station

BY SALLY LATHAM

Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department Chief Joe Luciano and his men have again proven their prowess in providing maximum service with minimum dollars, by building "from scratch" a fire truck which if purchased new would cost from $25,000 to $30,000.

The shiny, fully equipped red truck and tanker, designed and built by the department's master mechanic Tony Rojt, was made possible through the donations of individuals and organizations, not tax dollars, Chief Luciano said.

"We now have enough trucks so we could put a couple on the other side of the tracks," he said. "We're fighting the county to get another fire station over there, but Frank (Commissioner Wacha) says they're being held up by the ecology people."

Chief Luciano feels it is imperative to get a station on the west side of the tracks, for several reasons.

"Most of my men live over there," the chief told The Mirror, "and that's where the growth is going to be – it's not going out in the ocean."

Wacha, contacted by The Mirror Monday evening, verified that there has been some hold-up because of objections from the Department of Environmental Regulation, but that a sub-station should be built "within a year."

Luciano wants it sooner than that. It will take only one bad fire occurring when the fire fighting equipment is held up on the east side by a freight train, and some family's entire possessions will be destroyed, the chief contends.

The "new" truck, Luciano and Rojt pointed out, is a rather miraculous reincarnation of a 1944 army cab and chassis, bought in Georgia for $3,750. Rojt's prowess as a mechanic had been first proven when he built a truck for the Neversink, N.Y. fire department.

(Neversink did sink," Rojft says. "The City of New York sunk it when they put in their reservoir.")

A resident of this area since 1950, Rojt had a machine shop in Stuart for several years. He's been Chief Luciano's mechanical right hand in the volunteer department for several years.

When he learned that the department was going to have to pay $2,800 for a tank alone, Rojt volunteered to tackle the job of building it himself. He got all the materials and equipment for less than the asking price on the tank.

"We saved $1,400," the chief said, "and we still have the equipment to do the work on other trucks."

The department has already acquired another old truck body, and Rojt is ready and willing to go ahead with another rejuvenation project.

The whole volunteer department contributed their talents to the job, the chief emphasized.

"The men all pitched in and sanded and prepared the truck for painting," he said, "and Lou Stockbower painted it."

The gold trim and lettering was done by Tyrone, who "always gives us a good low price."

The new truck and tanker is Number 7 in the department's fleet of rolling stock, and the other one on the verge of being rejuvenated will be number eight.

Chief Luciano hopes the initiative and money-saving enterprise will spur the county commission into getting the substation built no "in a year," but right now.

"I'll probably get my kiester chewed out," he said. "But it's the people I'm worried about, not my kiester."

25-cent bridge to close daily

The Twenty-five Cent Bridge, the eastern sector which crosses the Indian River, is closed down during the day for a paint job.

According to Department of Transportation spokesmen, the work is beginning at 8 a.m., and continuing through the day until 5 p.m. The work will stop every 20 minutes to let backed-up traffic through.

Mobil Oil, commission agree on fill trade-out

Mobil Oil Estates, developers of Sailfish Point at the south end of Hutchinson Island, may not get the inlet sand when dredging begins for the permanent improvements from funds expected to be okayed by the President and congress in the next few weeks, but it will be getting a substantial amount of fill from outside sources, thanks to an agreement reached last week with the Martin County Commission and the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

The commissioners were told by Mobil Oil General Manager Wolf Tarnuch of Palm Beach that his company would grant quit claim deeds to all rights to the Mobil-owned submerged lands south of the jetty property and for an easement for the existence of the jetty, in return for the 1.6 million cubic yards of fill for the projected development plans.

Last week, the Army Corps of Engineers informed The Mirror that Mobil had been seeking to get the sand which will be dredged out of the inlet channel project. However, Jim Garland, Corps' chief engineer who has been responsible for the inlet's maintenance dredging, said that all the inlet spoil – some 50,000 cubic yards – is going to go to Jupiter Island's north tip, where it is to be used for beach enhancement and park development.

In the letter Thierach presented to the commission, he indicated his company doesn't need the white sand that comes up from the inlet bottom. It says:

"This material (1.6 million cubic yards) could become available from other sources. (I) any unsuitable material available from the Inlet Dredging project; (II) sand from an area immediately to the west and Northwest of Sailfish Point; and (III) sand from maintenance dredging in the Crossroads area. On or before December 31, Sailfish Point Inc. will require that it be granted all necessary permits from all applicable regulatory agencies to dredge 1.6 million cubic yards of offsite fill for the project on Sailfish Point."

The letter asked that all permits be made valid for at least three years, the stated time for the development program. He also asked as part of the deal, that the normal fee of 50 cents per cubic yard for sand removed from a public source be waived.

Little or no opposition is anticipated from the conservationists, because of the long-range benefit of the overall project. Walter Stokes, of the Martin County Conservation Alliance, said last week he sees no reason not to support the commission in its agreement with Mobil Oil.

No one involved in the program, either politicians or engineers, foresee any hitch in the passage of the bill enabling the permanent improvement of the inlet. The House has already passed it, and the Senate was due to act on it this week, according to Sen. Richard Stone, who predicts the president will also okay the overall bill in which the inlet is included.

Action is expected to be taken within the next month, because the Corps of Engineers budget period begins Oct. 1.

Jensenite's suit against school bond issue fails

The attempt of a Jensen woman, Mildred Perry, to quash the recently successful $12.5 million school bond issue in the courts, proved unsuccessful Friday, when Circuit Court Judge Dwight Geiger deliberated in favor of the bond election outcome.

The suit against the Martin County School Board was brought by Mrs. Perry and her mother, Marion Brooks Fell, after the voters okayed the bond issue in the May 16 election. Mrs. Perry, who had been an outspoken foe of the bond issue, is one of the candidates for school board in the fall election.

The women, through their attorneys Patrick Beatty and Robert Saylor, charged the board with five counts of irregularities. Among them were: not considering sufficiently other alternatives to the bond issue plan of School Supt. James Navitsky; holding the election at a time when the majority of voters had gone north; that an election-booth photo had been illegally published; and an alleged irregularity in county absentee ballots.

Judge Geiger shot down four of the charges, and the fifth, concerning the absentee ballots, was not brought before the court during the non-jury trial.

The attorneys for Perry and Fell haven't yet indicated whether they will appeal Judge Geiger's decision. They have 30 days in which to do so.

Lightning hits Jensen home

With all the summer electrical storms that have lashed the Jensen Beach area recently, it seemed only a matter of time until a home would be hit.

It happened Monday evening.

Gertrude Buckle of 13 South Savanna Road – or 3200 N.E. Savanna if you like the fancy new addresses the county's been handing out – says a bolt hit her home.

The lightning struck a huge television antenna on the side of the house, blowing out her television set and phone. Strangely enough, two light bulbs, but not the rest of her lights, were also blown out by the surge of electricity. The television set was completely ruined, she said.

Mrs. Buckle said she could see a haze and smell the burned wires after the lightning hit, and said her first concern was that a fire might start. But it didn't.

"I'm 65 and have lived in a lot of houses, but this is the first time I've ever lived in one where lightning struck," she said.

Mrs. Buckle said she's beginning to wonder if she's living in a safe place, as a wind storm a few months ago hit her home and ripped off an awning, blowing it around in circles a bit before it dropped to the ground. A letter box at her home also fell victim to a high wind not too long ago.

"What's next?" she asked, though she really didn't sound as if she wanted to know the answer.

STORM VICTIM, in the waters off the Florida Institute of Technology shores, is the tiki which has been a landmark for boaters for several years. It went down in the frighteningly sonic electric storm which hit Saturday afternoon, and which produced at least one tornado in Jensen's part of Indian River. The tiki originally was the end of a pier which extended out into the river. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

RUTH HOKE points to the underpinnings of their carport roof, from which the junior tornado so neatly picked off the heavy aluminum top which had weathered many a storm since it was installed ten years ago. Twister shears off carport

BY SALLY LATHAM

A vindictive and highly selective twister, spawned by Saturday afternoon's lashing thunderstorm, zeroed in on Ocean Breeze Mobile Home Park and with fine-line fury picked off the heavy aluminum carport of the unincorporated village's founder and mayor, Gene Hoke.

Miraculously, the tornado caused no damage to the main body of the Hokes' mobile home, which sits on the outer perimeter of the residential area on the river side of the park. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hoke were at home when the twister struck.

"It happened so fast I don't know whether it moved the house or not," Mrs. Hoke told The Mirror on Monday. "All we were aware of was that suddenly it was light – the carport was gone from that side, and it was gone."

A deafening, blinding thunderstorm had begun several minutes earlier, and the lightning had been flashing frighteningly close to the Hoke residence.

"I had laid down to rest," Mrs. Hoke said, "and Gene had decided to eat early. He always has dinner at 5 p.m., and he went out to start it at 4:30 – that's when it happened."

People who live along the river and know its signs and symptoms could predict it was "twister weather," that afternoon. The wind had been blowing briskly from the southeast when the black storm clouds moved in from the northeast. Almost simultaneously, another thunderhead in the western sky moved eastward, engendering strong gusty winds, creating a circular motion on the high-flying spume picked up by the gusts. Conditions, weather forecasters would say, were "ideal" for tornadoes.

The wind sheered the 15 by 32 foot carport roof off from the mobile home eaves to which it was attached with professional precision, throwing it some 25 feet to the north, where it was stopped by the automobile owned by neighbors, the Fred Tylers. The impact demolished the rear window of the Tyler car, tearing a gaping hole in the right rear door, and somersaulting over the vehicle to the road beyond.

"If the car hadn't been there to stop it, who knows what might have happened?" Mrs. Hoke asked. "It probably would have gone right into that home over there," she added, pointing to a mobile home across the street, apparently in the wind-driven roof's path.

The exact dollar extent of the damage hadn't yet been determined, as of Monday.

"The insurance man called and said he couldn't get here today," she said. "He told me he had several other tornadoes to check on."

Tooker qualifies for circuit judge

DEAN TOOKER

Dean Tooker, former Martin County Attorney and a practicing lawyer in the Stuart area for 22 years, has qualified for the circuit court judge seat being vacated by Judge Wallace Sample of Fort Pierce.

Tooker has run previously for public office — at one time for the County Commission and at another for the County judge seat, but was unsuccessful in both races.

In the coming election, he will face candidates Bruce Wilkinson of Stuart and Ken Sharpe of Vero Beach.

In giving his reason for running, Tooker said Tuesday: "I feel the citizens of the 19th judicial circuit should have a qualified individual in the office. My 22 years experience and seasoning in all phases of trial work makes me the best qualified candidate."

A native of Patchogue, Long Island, N.Y., Tooker did his undergraduate work at Valparaiso University in Indiana, and attained his law degree at the University of Miami. After a short period of practice in Miami, he moved here in 1957. He and his family live on Skyline Drive in Jensen.

His wife is the former Rita V.Demers, a native of Canada. They have three sons, Bruce, 21, now attending the University of South Florida; George, 19, a senior at Martin County High School, and Timothy, 15, a sophomore at MCHS.

Tooker was charter president of the Jensen Beach Kiwanis Club; a past president of the Jensen Chamber of Commerce, and Past Exalted Ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Lodge 1870.

Professionally, he is past president of the Martin County Bar Association; past president of the Florida Association of County Attorneys; a member of the Florida Bar Association, and member of the Academy of Florida Trial Lawyers.

He served as Martin County Attorney for 11 years, and as assistant public defender for two years. He is admitted to the U.S.Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals, fifth circuit, the U.S. District Court, Southern District of Florida, and All Florida courts.

He and his family attend All Saints Episcopal Church. He is a golfer, and he and his sons are avid stamp collectors.

Cook and Singer get Crutch Pin awards

At a recent meeting of the Anna Miller Circle No. 1870, Stuart-Jensen Beach, Mary Cook and Vi Singer were recipients of the Crutch Pin awards for their dedicated service to the circle.

Jane Gorman and Josephine Bisp were initiated into membership. Members were urged to make their reservations for the Ladies' Conference to be held October 6-8 in Cocoa Beach and Ivy Chase, chairman of the 365 Club, said she needs all members to turn in their money cans as a report has to be made at the conference.

President Tillie Martinez appointed Margaret Woolard, Lillian Gass and Lillian Eckhardt to the Scholarship Committee.

W.W.I Vets meet Friday

MAJOR IN THRIFT

As we plan to get the youngsters ready to go back to school, The Jensen Beach Bank suggests that a lesson in thrift be included in the program.

Open a savings account for each youngster, and let them begin a regular savings program, designed to teach thrift, to begin the basics of a responsible attitude toward money and its value.

You will be surprised to see the child's interest rise, as the bank interest adds to savings.

..Bring your youngster in to the bank to open a savings account. It will be the beginning of a major in thrift.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

We want to thank all of the many people and organizations in this area who so willingly donated money to the Jensen Beach SDS Boys Softball Team to help send them to the State Tourney in Ft. Walton Beach, Fla. Without their support and financial backing, the trip could never have been made.

Our deepest appreciation for their support goes to: Frank Wacha, Jensen Beach Cubs, Jensen Beach Bank, Optimist Club, Stuart National Bank, Norris Tilton, Robert Coy, Maureen Casey, Clarence Rydell, Bob Wallace Painting, Tom Daniels, Coy & Deggeller Realty, Fun Tours Travel, Jensen Beach Winn-Dixie Store who allowed the boys to collect money;

And, to the team members, themselves: David Bocchino, Billy Rinaldi, Nick Barker, Doug Hughes, Roger Welker, Darryl Delancy, Pop Delancy, Malcolm Delancy, Jack Slimm, Tommy Daniels, Steve Coy, Dean Turkcer, Bob Casey, Henry Harriel and Jerry Bocchino, who worked very hard for the opportunity to play in the tournament.

USE THE MIRROR to wrap garbage, after you read it.

To the Editor:

I read your editorial about credit card charges on tipping in the July 20 edition with interest, if not agreement.

In my humble, albeit oft-voiced, opinion the restaurant owner who will not allow tips to be put on a charge seems to have missed the point. He voluntarily contracted with Master Charge, et al, to accept their cards so that he could increase his business, not as a service to the customer. He was doubtlessly aware of those of us - including our own government - who could not exist without deficit spending. How many times have you asked what cards are accepted before committing youself to a meal in a restaurant?

If the oppressed and victimized restaurateur has the courage of his position, let him refuse to accept the cards and give all of his patrons a discount commensurate with the non-existant service charges. Don't hold your breath for that.

Very truly yours,
s-Bill

OVERCOMING THE FEAR OF EXCHANGING

QUESTION: On several occasions you have advised long-time owners to exchange their apartment properties in order to improve their investment situation. I am in a position where this seems to make sense, but I hesitate for one reason: I know my building well, having owned it for over ten years. If I exchange, I will be giving up a building I know well and getting one I don't know at all. Frankly, I'm a little frightened of coming out on the short end of the deal. I would appreciate your advice. Thank you.

ANSWER: Your fear is not uncommon. Remember the day you acquired your present building. If you were like most investors you were frightened to death.

Any income property broker worth his salt will carefully analyze your present position and provide an accurate analysis of your prospective new acquisition along with a comparative analysis of your position before and after an exchange.

In a carefully planned exchange the benefits are so great that both parties to the exchange are winners. I would be pleased to discuss your situation in depth.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-6747, or stop by:

RUNNING A SUCCESSFUL RESTAURANT-LOUNGE IS WHAT "AL" MILLER DOES BEST

Protecting It Is What We Do Best

Big Al's Restaurant on North U.S. 1 has become justly famous in just five short years for its delicious fish and barbecue entrees. Al Miller likes people and he personally prepares the barbecue as well as supervises the entire operation.

Together Al Miller and his wife, Mary, had a total of 40 years experience in the food and beverage field before they purchased their present location in 1973. At that time they remodeled and enlarged the premises and added a lounge. Today Al Miller is still working 90 hours every week to ensure his goal — "satisfied customers."

Al Miller is more than satisfied with his insurance agency, Hartman, Tilton and Wilson. With our knowledge and experience we were able to design a special insurance program to protect his business against the many hazards inherent in operating a restaurant. We can do the same thing for you.

Because our business is protecting your business.

Colt All-Stars fourth in state

BY DONNIE WILKIE

The Martin County Colt League All-Stars showed last week that they were "up-to-snuff" in the State Championship tournament at Lake Worth's Lake Lytal Field. However, they lost a heart-breaking extra-inning opener, then went on to lose again, finishing fourth in the tournament.

Many observers doubted the All-Stars' talent when compared to that offered by the teams from Lake Worth, Pompano Beach and Hialeah. But the Stars, composed of the best players from the four area Colt League teams, played Lake Worth to a virtual standstill in the tournament opener, before bowing 3-2 in nine innings.

All three of Lake Worth's runs were unearned, as the host team broke a 2-2 deadlock in the ninth. With runners on first and second, Doug Carpenter bunted to Martin County pitcher Carl King. But King's throw to first baseman Don Alley went awry, rolling into right field as the winning run came across for Lake Worth.

Jeff Blair (Hobe Sound-Soldo's Market) pitched exceptional baseball through the regulation seven innings, but the real mound star turned out to be Lake Worth's Richard Rice, who earlier this year led his Lake Worth Trojans to the semi-finals of the state high school playoffs.

Rice entered the contest with Martin Countians at second and third base, and no one out, in the seventh frame, and struck out Jupiter's Gary Remensnyder, and Jensen Beach's Ken Suter (Kermit's) and Bill Chesney (Harmon Electric). Ron Parker was left stranded at third with the go-ahead run as Rice whiffed the side. Parker had reached third when a fly ball was misplayed by the outfield.

Parker had doubled in the MC second inning to start the scoring. He advanced to third as Terry Cripe reached on an error, and scored when Lake Worth starter Carlos Reiter, who did not get a decision, threw a wild pitch. One batter later, Suter grounded to Reiter, but while crossing first base, stepped on the foot of the first baseman. In the ensuing confusion, Cripe scampered home to make it 2-0.

Jorge Hernandez singled to start the Lake Worth third, then raced all the way home when catcher Chris Perkins, attempting to throw out the runner, heaved the ball into center field. Parker also bobbled the ball while Hernandez covered the ground to home plate.

Lake Worth tied the game at 2-2 in the fourth inning when Rice scored as Cripe bobbled a two-out ground ball off the bat of Scott Edwards.

There were no threats until the sixth, when Martin County threw out a runner at the place to save the game, and the seventh, when the locaiers rallied – that is, until Rice was called in to pitch.

The 3-2 setback in the first round was just too much for the District Champions, who played hard in Game Two, but fell short by quite a bit, losing 7-0 to Hialeah. The Miamians scored five times in the second inning, and added another tally in the third when Jesus Vila smashed a lead-off home run over the left field fence off reliever Alley.

Humberto Lopez pitched a brilliant game for Hialeah, whiffing ten and walking not a soul in pinning the eliminating loss on the backs of the Martin Countians.

Lopez limited the Colt Stars to just three hits, with one each from Parker, Perkins and Alley. The locaiers committed two errors, both in the deadly second inning.

However, the fourth place finish in Florida was the best a local Colt team has ever done since the local programs abandoned Little League in 1970 in favor of Boys, Inc., which, sponsors annual All-Star competition in Mustang, Bronco, Pony and Colt Leagues. Pinto League is used as a training ground for young players, and does not have a state championship tournament.

The Mirror sends out its congratulations to those members of the 1978 Colt All-Stars.

Hatcher signs with IRCC

In one of the most significant developments of the 1978 post-season basketball race, Jesse Hatcher, a forward with the Fort Pierce Central Cobras, signed with the Pioneers of Indian River Community College.

Hatcher almost single-handedly brought FP Central back from the doldrums of a poor start last season, to the point of becoming contenders for the District basketball title.

He was one of the few players on the FP Central varsity basketball team not suspended when Coach Roger Wrench discovered members of the squad engaging in illegal activities, and went on to lead a rebuilt squad, which scared both Palm Beach Gardens and Martin County in away games during the second half of the season.

Hatcher is considered by Pioneer Head Coach Mike Leatherwood to be a major find, and could fill the vacancy created by the departure of last season's leading scorer and rebounder, Ed Turner. Turner passed up his sophomore season at IRCC in favor of an extra season at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Wrench, who himself resigned after FP Central's up-and-down 1977-78 season, considers Hatcher the best performer on his last Cobra squad. Hatcher has a deadly outside shot, and when hot, can burn almost anybody. Of course, anyone that's six-feet-five-inches tall can also help you on the boards, something which Hatcher will have to concentrate more on doing.

"Hatcher isn't someone you always notice," said Wrench. "He's not that flashy, but he gets the points. If he's not scoring, it's only because he's not shooting. He's so consistent that you don't realize he's scored 25 or 30 points until you look after the game."

The number of scholarships for junior college basketball was reached last week when two other signings were announced. Kyle Woolum of Elizabethtown, Kentucky, and Steve Cummings of Nashua, New Hampshire, were signed for the upcoming season.

Cummings will become the first seven-foot plus player in the history of IRCC basketball. At 7-feet one inch and 240 pounds, Cummings is said to enjoy throwing his weight around. And anyone who throws that much weight around must have some for the basket. Cumminga averaged 25 points per game for Nashua High School, in 1976-77, then attended Southeast Louisiana during last season. But after one year there, he has decided to transfer to a junior college.

Woolum, the twelfth and final player signed by the local junior college, is 6-feet ½-inch tall and weighs 190 pounds. He was the major factor in Elizabethtown's trip to the Kentucky State basketball tournament last year. And he reminds Leatherwood of another Kentucky basketball player, Kyle Macy of the University of Kentucky, who led the Wildcats to the national championship last year.

Yost, Strasser last to sign

Last week was a busy one for the coaching staffs of baseball and basketball at Indian River Community College, as they garnered two basketball prospects and one baseball player.

Tom Yost, a 6 foot-five, 220-pound pitcher for Delray Beach Atlantic, became the last baseball signee on Tuesday when he inked his name on a grant-in-aid.

Yost had a perfect 4-0 record for the Eagles, always one of the area's best baseball schools, and spun an ERA (Earned Run Average) of 2.75.

Ric Strasser also signed with the Pioneers last week. Strasser came to the IRCC baseball program through the recommendation of a Philadelphia Phillies scout in Cincinnati, Strasser's home the 6-foot-five, 200-pounder comes in with a record of 4-3, but posted an unbelievable ERA of 1.01. That means for every nine innings he pitched, he gave up only a little over one run!

Both prospects are expected to be utilized right away in the IRCC program, and could help the school's chances of winning the District IV championship.

Earlier, the Pioneers signed Ricky Bright, a resident of Jensen Beach and a third baseman with the Martin County Tigers. Bright, a product of all the Jensen Beach youth leagues, will be shifted from third to shortstop. He is currently playing shortstop for the Martin County Americans, the local entry in the Coastal American Legion circuit.

Women Sailfish play in state Saturday

The Martin County Sailfish, a women's softball team, will leave for Pensacola tomorrow (Friday) and begin play in the state championship tournament Saturday.

Ed Howard's "Ramblin' Wreck" advanced through three early round games at the District championships two weeks ago, qualifying for the state tourney with ease before losing two meaningless games to Sunrise of Broward County.

The Sailfish beat the Fort Pierce Spirits 5-4, then rebounded for a 9-8 win over Fort Pierce Jetson. The next victim was the Lake Park Rookies, and they were squeezed, 3-1. But two losses, 2-0 and 5-1, to Sunrise left the Sailfish in second place and now they must play harder opponents in early-round state tournament games.

The locaiers are competing in the A class this year. Last year, they won the state title in the B classification, and were required to move up a class this year.

According to the team, the name "Sailfish" came about when the girls decided to advertise the fact that the City of Stuart is recognized as the Sailfish Capitol of the World.

rates to public hearing

The Martin County Commission Tuesday tabled a request for the right to raise cable television rates made by John H. Perry III, president of Perry Cable. The commissioners decided that, because the company is a monopoly, it must act under Public Service Commission guidelines.

Perry, who attended the meeting with his vice president, Tom Gilchrist, also asked for permission to deregulate his rates. Both requests will be placed before a public hearing, the date for which has not yet been set.

A Bamboo Curtain visit

Editor's note: Jensen Beach's much-traveled Stanley Smith, co-owner of the Jensen Travel Service, has been on the go all summer, in every conceivable direction. He was persuaded by The Mirror to share some of his experiences, particularly the highly educational one which took him behind the Bamboo Curtain in Red China. Here is his capsule diary of the trip.)

CHINA 1978

Left West Palm Beach June 6, Delta to Atlanta, change to Delta to San Francisco. Overnight at Airport Hilton as could not make proper connections to Hong Kong as older folks need a stop-over. Met group of 40 at 11 a.m. June 7 at Pan American. Departed for Hong Kong on 747 -- 10 hour, 3 minute flight of light drinking, heavy eating, and light sleeping.

Hong Kong is a big city. We stayed at Peninsula Hotel in Kaloon. On free day we went to Macao on package deal as it was the weekend. Hydrofoil -- 1 hour, 15 minutes each way. Stopped at border and bought 100 year old Chinese plate for Mary Louise. Went to the casino and lost $50. Had good Chinese (what other was there?) dinner and returned in evening.

Rode the Star Ferry to Hong Kong Island several times. Cost 7 cents first class. Bought two old plates in the Ocean Terminal -- three floors, five hundred shops of everything under the sun. Took the city tour -- went to Victoria Peak and had lunch -- went to Aberdeen to floating restaurant and did the junk ride in the harbour. The last night had dinner at Gaddis, supposed to be one of the best restaurants in the world (???).

Leaving for the People's Republic of China from railroad station in Kaloon for the border; trains are equally as good as European. We had one car reserved for our group, non-air conditioned. A two hour ride -- peddlars through the train with beer, cakes. Tea cups at every seat and girl with thermos with hot water for us tea drinkers.

BORDER

Off the train and pass through Hong Kong customs and walk to China. Clear immigration as a group and met with tour operators of the Chinese International Travel Industry. Had lunch on China side of the border. Large dining room with set menu of Chinese food and plenty of free beer called "snowflake." Boarded another deluxe express train to Canton (2 hours). Checked into large hotel, 1000 rooms, in new section, no air conditioning. All beds have mosquito netting and oscillating fans. I put fan on floor and aimed it under the bed.

We had city tour and up to Mount Yuexiu -- beautiful view of the city. Went to the opera in the evening. We were briefed on story for all singing was in Chinese -- some went to sleep. Back to hotel.

Canton is very tropical, much like South Florida -- palms, orchid trees, citrus, etc. At a park I found a rose apple. Some of the group were surprised to see me eating the fruit. Visited palaces and parks.

Plane to Shenyang, South Manchuria -- 4 hours, 2000 miles north. Cooler weather, temperate zone. Pines, oaks, walnut trees, etc.

The hotel was very unusual -- 18 foot ceilings and 12 foot doors. Bathroom door had a glass window at six feet height. Closet door had screen window at six feet. Visited more palaces and spent most of one day at a commune...17,000 people. Farms of rice, wheat and vegetables. Saw turbine pump, flood irrigating, cucumbers with a woman spooning the chemical fertilizer into a stream for liquid feeding. Also they were growing chickens, rabbits and pigs for food on the commune.

There was also a sewing factory with 100 women sewing seat covers for tractors. Sewing machines on line shaft belt operated by electric motor at end. Very modern chicken processing plant for quick freezing. Commune entirely self-supporting.

Opera again in the evening. One of our buses got lost and we were thirty minutes late. About a block before the opera house, 1000 people waiting for us, all clapping. That is the way they greet strangers. When we entered the opera house with a capacity of four or five thousand, we got a standing ovation with everyone clapping, and we clapped in return. (Amazing.) Opera was one that had been forbidden for years by Chairman Mao. Costumes were fantastic, very colorful, singing great.

Train to Tallen...6 hours. We were the first American group to visit Tallen. City is seaport, most modern that I have ever seen. Electric cranes for unloading rail cars. I saw them unloading raw sugar with a clam shell bucket into rail cars on the dock. Steel everywhere for export, mostly Japanese ships.

We had a briefing on the fourth floor in a beautiful dining room, hot tea again. Also, cigarette smoking is a sign of prestige for only a wealthy few. Everywhere we were entertained, there was a pack of Chinese cigarettes at about every four places. I always replenished my supply, as they are very mild.

Our relatively new hotel was about five miles out of town. No ice in the last three cities. Some requested ice for cocktails and one hot day they sent the bus to a military base a few miles away. They came back with two small pans with 6-inch sheets of ice. One evening the maid brought in four cubes wrapped in foil.

We visited a school for blind and deaf. We were shown acupuncture being used on the deaf. Saw blind children using guides to do Braille and then read back to the teacher. Were entertained in large dining room with tea and cigarettes and musical entertainment by blind and deaf children.

Visited a glass factory with 20 furnaces making all kinds of ornamental glass. 3700 workers, one-half women. Visited a sewing factory, mostly linens.

One of the highlights of the trip was the underground city which was hollowed out of a mountain with tunnels and dining room seating 6000 in the middle of the mountain near the Russian border. Has everything to sustain life for 17,000 people for 30 days.

Tallen to Peking by Russian jet prop, 50 passenger plane -- 48 of us. Two hour flight instead of the 30 hour train we were originally scheduled on. Visited a zoo and saw young pandas, etc. Summer Palace was beautiful. Saw the famous marble boat landlocked. Crossed the lake by two small boats, with beer, tea, cigarettes.

Left by train to go to the Great Wall of China. Absolutely fantastic sight -- 2000 meters long, 40 feet wide. I walked up to the first level. Wall goes over the mountain, up and down, built by hand labor. It is hard to believe without seeing it.

Visited the summer palace of Ming Dynasty. About 20 palaces, some are always under renovation under a 10-year plan. Went to forbidden city and more palaces. Had dinner as guests of some of the group at summer palace, $35.00 per person. Best meal of trip -- jelly fish, suid, duck, etc...tea and beer. One evening went to soccer game between Syrian Army and Chinese Army -- crowd of 40,000.

PEKING to CANTON

Four hour flight on Russian-made four-engine jet, new type plane.

Canton Hotel in the new wing, all AC except me, a single. Had left my roommate at hospital in Peking with pneumonia. Left for border by train, two hours. Checked through immigration and customs, and walked to New Territory for another train to Hong Kong.

We found out we could get air conditioned car for extra 22 cents. Arrived in Hong Kong and again to the Peninsula Hotel. Very deluxe after the hotels in China. One day for last minute shopping and then to San Fransisco, 11 hours, 57 minutes.

No connections until late evening, so the Airport Hilton for shower and same clothes, as bags were checked through to WPB. Custom clearance in San Fran easy, as I only declared under $50 plus antiques and had some proof of 100 year old plate for Mary Louise. In WPB 7:45 a.m., home 8:45, in office 10 a.m.

China is history with me, but I want to go back.

Medicare allowances updated

Updated medicare Part B allowances for medical services to Florida senior citizens served by Florida Blue Shield went into effect on July 24, with certain continuing limitations again being applied to the allowances. The new allowances are expected to be in effect through mid-1979.

The new allowances are based on charges submitted on Medicare Part B claims during calendar year 1977, but the increases are limited by law to no more than 42.6 percent over the allowances computed from 1971 charges, the base year. Regulations for determining the allowances are established by the Medicare Bureau, Health Care Financing Administration, Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Blue Shield of Florida is the Medicare Part B claim processor in all areas of Florida except Dade and Monroe Counties.

Applicable to all Medicare Part B claim processors nationwide, the new allowances are computed as follows:

(1) Two different types of allowances are calculated based on physician charges submitted to Medicare Part B during calendar year 1977 for each medical service. These are known as the "Customary" (individual physician) Allowance and the "Prevailing" (area or community) Allowance. Under Medicare regulation, for each medical service rendered to a Medicare patient the individual physician allowance is compared to the area or community allowance and both are then compared to the doctor's current charge. Payment is then based on the lower of the three.

(2) Further, an additional limitation requires that the new area or community allowance for each medical service not increase over 42.6 percent of the area or community allowance computed from 1971 charges. (Last year, the area or community allowance under Medicare Part B could not increase above 35.7 of the base year's 1971 charges.)

COMMUNITY CENTER COMET

200 S.W. Prima Vista Blvd.
Port St. Lucie, Florida 33452 Phone 878-1388

August, 1978

It bears repeating

BY STRELSA SCHREIBER

Although it was covered in area-wide newspaper releases, this announcement bears repeating in The Comet, the official organ of communication for the Community Center.

Just in case you haven't heard, the new facility now under construction at the Center is to be named Lundin Hall in honor of the Center's current president, Dick Lundin.

The Center's board of directors took this action by resolution at its regular monthly meeting on July 14, in recognition of Dick's outstanding efforts and personal contributions to the Center, to this community, and to the new building. Perhaps one of the strongest indications of the high regard in which he is held by the directors was their response to the motion to pass the resolution – everyone wanted to second it!

It may be a "once in his lifetime experience" and we wish that everyone might have witnessed it, just in order to believe it, but since that wasn't possible, you will just have to take our word for it. Dick was caught completely off-guard, taken totally by surprise, and had to wait several minutes before he could manage an acceptance.

We all may disagree with him from time to time, but on this one point, there is complete unanimity: One person can make a difference and he did.

FOURTH ANNUAL Community Center Golf rnament will be held on Oct. 19. Principals are sponsors Bill Pullen (L), Sandpiper Bay Resort Manager, and GDC General Manager for PSL, Bob Seeley (R), and 1978 Tournament Chairman Don McConnell.

enter plans fourth Tournament

e fourth annual Community er Golf Tournament, again nsored by the General Develop- Corporation, will be held on the and Sinners courses at piper Bay as a shotgun event on nday, October 19.

is announcement was forth- ing from GDC's Port St. Lucie ger Bob Seeley and Center dent Dick Lundin, who also nounced that Don McConnell would is year's tournament chairman.

e entry fee for each contestant e $12.50, the same as last year.

ley will chair the prize mittee, Clem Bramley will be urer and will have the cation blanks printed for early availability, O'Beirne will be poster committee chairman, the luncheon- only fee will remain $10 and there will be door prizes for them, and the general format will remain the same, with individual low net competition for women and men in USGA and Callaway divisions.

GDC will again donate the coffee and danish at tee time, the luncheon after the tournament, prizes from Chuck Johnson's pro shot and one half of the cart fees. It is anticipated that Schulz Chevrolet will again donate golf bags for the closest-to-the-pin on designated holes on the two courses, and that Baslow-Hentschel Motors will again risk a Honda against the possibility of any golfer making a hole in one during the tournament, the first, of course.

Because the primary purpose of the tournament is to raise money for the Community Center's building fund, the objective is to fill all of the 288 spots in the event. On this basis, applications will be limited to Port St. Lucie residents until Sept. 7. On that date it will be thrown open to anyone desiring to participate.

Winners in the Men's and Women's Divisions in the USGA competition will be awarded white jackets emblematic of the annual Community Center Championship, and Prize Chairman Seeley has promised that there will be even more prizes awarded this year than last.

"Come play with us on Oct. 19. Don has promised that this will be a real fun day for everybody and those who have played in it before know what a smooth operation it is with Chuck Johnson's crew behind it.

"Wouldn't it be something if it were to be an all Port St. Lucie party by Sept. 7? Whatever, plan to be there when they award the jackets and start passing out the prizes," Lundin said.

onds, loan is considered
y Center fund committee

e Community Center's Expansion ing Fund stands right at the 6 mark now, but the flow of funds ot great enough to permit truction to proceed much beyond g on the roof and installing the , and even that will likely call for ort term loan, according to ing Fund Chairman George t and President Dick Lundin.

nstruction costs have soared e estimates all along, Lundin and this has limited progress what.

eathering in the building is al and the Board of Directors has rized us to borrow up to $15,000 to the roof and install the doors so he building can be locked. We that we'll still be able to bring in the electrical power, cut through the corridor and install perimeter and temporary overhead lighting. If we can do this, we'll have a limited use facility and that will help a lot.

"The board may decide to go along with the recommendation of the Budget Management Committee and issue non-negotiable bonds in $500 denominations so that we can beat the rising costs and complete the building well ahead of schedule so that it can begin producing revenue. That's one option," he pointed out.

Jacobi explained that Cruise Director June Johnston's Thanksgiving Cruise is expected to bring in over $2,600, that the Oct. 19 golf tournament could raise $4,000, and that with some $1,000 in business commitments due later in 1978, the Center has "receivables" of $8,000 against whatever short term note has to be met. There are many other fund raising events on the schedule too, he pointed out, and, like the Home Show next March, these should be good revenue producers for the building fund.

"Then, next February, we hope to go all out with a community-wide "Buy a Building Block Month.' If we can just half of the 6,000 homes in the area to buy one $25 block each, think what that can mean to us! The community needs that fantastic new, really big Lundin Hall. All we ask is that it help the businesses and organizations and financial institutions in the county pay for it," he said.

olunteers sought for Senior Services of the committees established ebruary at the annual meeting of ommunity Center's board of s was one entitled Senior r Services Committee with the ing descriptive charge:

ponsibility for ministering to the social needs of the community, emphasizing service to senior citizens that will include, but not be limited to, providing transportation services where emergency needs so dictate, arranging for the proper agencies to provide home care where needed, et cetera. This entails a roster of volunteers to participate in the program which is a commitment made to the Division of Aging in Tallahassee when the Center was drawing financial support to implement this as an ongoing program.

ROOM seems to be getting a real kick out of the caricature of himself by Mirror artist Peggy Meissner. The drawing was presented to Mel by ommunity Center Vice President Heine as a memento of his many years on ter's boards of directors and trustees. Broom is now GDC's general er up at Port Malabar, but found time to visit the Center on July 4 for a cken barbecue, as a guest not the chef this time.

The membership of the committee is made up of the following Center trustees: Nickie Porter, chairman; Ethel Krall, Alice Bowen, John Pugh, Cass Moncure, Charles Nergard and Evelyn Norton.

In the months since February, the committee has been working quietly in the background supplying emergency transportation, arranging for Meals on Wheels, taking care of requests, where possible, that have come to the Center office, and arranging for the roster of volunteers referred to in the above Committee Charge, so necessary if the work of the committee is to be carried forward. The AARP and the Gab-N-Eatas Social Club have both cooperated by responding to the call for volunteers.

The committee now plans to be ready by September 1 to go full-speed ahead with the total charge by setting guidelines for expanded services and affiliating with the St. Lucie County Meals on Wheels, which is administered by RSVP (Retired Senior Volunteer Program). Under this program the meals are prepared and delivered by volunteers to those who are in need of this service. Those who receive the service are charged a nominal fee, which covers only the cost of the food, and is based on one's financial ability to pay. This program is almost totally a volunteer one. Other than the nutritionist, whose salary is funded by the CETA program, no federal funds are used.

In this connection Chairman Nickie Porter has issued the following announcement for all volunteers who have already signed up for the Meals on Wheels program, and anyone else who is interested, to come to the Port St. Lucie Community Center on Wednesday, August 16, at 10 a.m. in Room 1 of the Kellstadt part of the building, to register as a volunteer for the program and complete the necessary forms and obtain information regarding available insurance coverage.

Mrs. Porter further requests that if anyone in the Port St. Lucie area is in need of delivered meals before Sept. 1, to call her at 878-3228. She cautions, however, that it takes about four days to set up the procedure on each new delivery.

The committee fervently hopes that many will come forward to volunteer their time and energy

Richardson will head Center Master Plan Committee

With Phase III of the Center's expansion program well under way and scheduled for completion by early 1980 at the latest, Center President Dick Lundin is looking forward to what lies ahead for the growing facility in the face of the unprecedented growth that is taking place in Port St. Lucie.

"We can't rest on our laurels. When we finish the new building we'll have a fine Center that can seat, overall, 900 for meetings simultaneously and 500 at tables. This is just great today, but how about tomorrow when Port St. Lucie will have 15, 20, then 25 thousand people – and still be growing? We have to keep up and that means laying out a long range program that looks as far ahead as the year 2000.

"I have appointed Trustee Clyde Richardson as Master Planning Committee Chairman to produce a master plan for expansion over the next two decades, and we have invited representatives from several area clubs to help Clyde and City Planner Mike Szunyog develop it.

"General Development Corporation, back in the days when the late Chairman of the Board, Charles Kellstadt, President Fred Roach and Port St. Lucie General Manager Jack Sheridan were the paternal guiding forces for the beginning Center, it was understood that GDC had set aside 15 acres (much as it had done for the Port Charlotte Cultural Center) for the Center, to be deeded as needed. They have adhered to that 'gentleman's agreement' and so far have deeded four acres to us. Now, we feel that the time is here to go ahead with a request for more acreage, but realize that a board-approved master plan for its use is a preliminary must," Lundin pointed out.

Richardson promises a meeting of the committee by the first week in August to go over a "talking paper" already drawn up in tentative fashion by Lundin, Heine Demeules, Szunyog and Richardson. "We want to firm this up for at least preliminary showing to the Board of Directors in August," Richardson said.

A few of the "ideas" being considered, according to Richardson, are a Treasure Building, a drama hall, a mechanical arts building, an academic building, a picnic pavillion, a swimming pool, shuffleboard courts, and an area for a Youth Hall to be constructed and operated by a separate, yet to be formed, community organization.

BON VOYAGE, MEL spells it all out for parade watchers at the Independence Day parade in Port St. Lucie. His well wishers were legion up and down Prima Vista Boulevard, remembering the many years he served the community before being transferred to Port Malabar.

Junior Garden Club meets

All boys and girls from the second through sixth grades are invited to join the Junior Garden Club starting Saturday, Sept. 2, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Community Center. You may register at the Community Center or call Mrs. Lawrence C. Hett (Leone), 878-2108. No registration fee required.

The theme for 1978-1979 will be "Learning Can Be Fun." One of the projects will be the distribution of seedling trees to be cared for by the members and then planted in the Port St. Lucie Elementary school yard on Arbor Day.

"We are looking forward to a good turnout. If you cannot attend the first session on Sept. 2, the second meeting will be held on October 7," Mrs. Hett said.

Clambake tickets are limited

All systems are "go" for that Sept. 4 Labor Day Clambake at the Community Center. Tickets are available only at the Center office and there were just 200 printed! They are $15 each and guarantee the holder New England style clam chowder, Maine lobster, Ipswich clams and all the trimmings.

That old New Englander, Jack Sheridan, ably abetted by Dempsey McLain, will be in the pits turning out the lobster, chowder, clams and corn. Sheridan has already put on two highly successful New England clambakes for the Center and those who partook thereof can testify to his skill.

Just remember that there are only 200 tickets and there will be absolutely no walk-in trade on Labor Day. They'll order just as many lobsters and clams as there are tickets sold. So don't come for lobster unless you get a ticket in advance!

For those who don't cotton to a real old fashioned new England clambake, there will be hamburgers and hot dogs, and various kinds of beverages will be available as well.

Keep it in mind and don't wait too long to make it up.

Schedule is given for free meals

The rate schedule for eligibility in the free and reduced price meals for students was mailed out last week to parents by the Martin County Schools, informing them about relative salaries and family sizes constituting eligibility.

Free meals and free milk will be available to children in a household in which there is:

Only one child and the family weekly income is $64;

Two children and income of $84;
Three children and $104 income;
Four children and $124 income;
Five children and $143 income;
Six children and $161 income;
Seven children and $178 income;
Eight children and $195 income;
Nine children and $210 income;
Ten children and $225 income.

For additional children over that number, the allowable income increases by $15 gradients.

The scale for reduced price meals ranges from $125 per week income in families with one child to $430 a week for ten children.

For each child over ten, the gradient is $29

In addition, according to a school spokesman, families not falling into these categories but who are burdened with unusually high medical expenses or shelter costs in excess of 30 percent of the family income may also apply for free or reduced cost meals.

Application forms have been sent into students' homes with the letters, and copies are also available in the principals' offices. Information given on the application is confidential, and will be used only for establishing eligibility, the spokesman said. They may be turned in any time during the year.

Parents are cautioned, however, that false statements and misrepresentations may subject the applicant to prosecution under state and criminal laws.

In case the size of the family changes during the school year, or if the size of the incomes is lowered because of unemployment, parents may file a new application.

Howey opens September 10

Howey-in-the-Hills--Howey Academy announced last week it would open its 23rd annual fall semester Sept. 10, with the addition of 5th and 6th grade classes to round out an eight-year teaching program.

Howey Headmaster Dr. L.L. Jenkins said the coeducational college preparatory school would provide separate study and classroom facilities and a special faculty for day and boarding students in the two lower grades.

Expansion of the Howey curriculum, Dr. Jenkins said, would in effect create a "Junior Academy" for grades five through eight to prepare them to enter the "Senior Academy" of grades nine through 12.

Fall term applications in all grades are being received now by the Director of Admissions. Early application is urged because, while student qualifications are a major factor, class and dormitory space is limited.

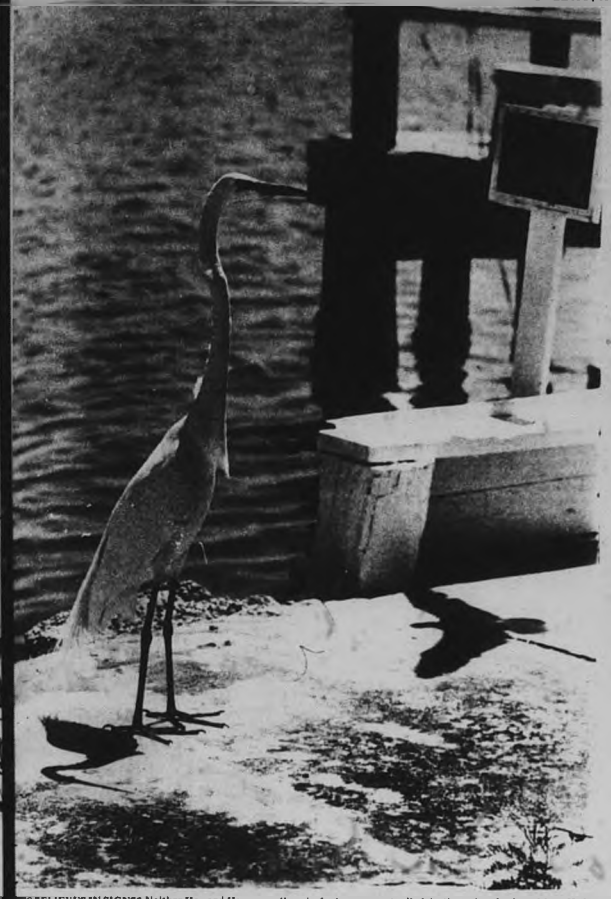
Dr. Jenkins said the decision to provide separath 5th and 6th grade classrooms and faculty was dictated by special needs of the younger children.

"Dormitory facilities and dining hours will also be utilized for maximum association of the younger children with their peers. Our excellent physical education, social and counseling staff will arrange programs of maximum appeal as well, Dr Jenkins said.

Social Security rep at Stuart City Hall

Due to a Public Service Commission meeting, the Social Security representative will not be able to meet with the public in the County Commissioners' meeting room of the Martin County Administrative Center on Monday, August 7.

Instead, the representative will be located in the City Commission Chambers of the Stuart City Hall, 121 S. Flager Avenue, for that one day only.



WHO BELIEVES IN SIGNS? Neither Howard Heron nor the ringed source of the artistic shadow at right on the cement ick appear to have much truck with man's bans. Howard, in fact, appears to disdain the printed admonition. If they really wanted to communicate, they could at least have written it le@birdlandese. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Conserve on cooling in summer, says FPL

Some Florida Power & Light customers may receive sharply higher electric bills during the summer months, "especially if they don't conserve on cooling," the utility's energy conservation director said this week.

"Many homeowners find their electric use doubles or triples when hot weather sets in," said J.C. (Joe) Collier, Jr., head of FPL's Energy Conservation Department.

"And bills go up even faster than usage due to the inverted rate structure that is intended to spur energy conservation.

"Most people don't relize how much they can save on summer cooling costs. Tests show pushing the thermostat up only one degree can cut cooling power use by as much as eight percent if the air conditioning is properly sized, installed and maintained."

A three-ton central air conditioner in a typical single-family home in peninsular Florida uses an estimated, 775 kilwatt hours (KWH) in a hot summer month if set at 72 degrees around the clock, Collier estimated. But it uses an estimated 2,600 KWH if set at 73 degrees, he said, and only about 1,760 KWH if at 78 degrees.

"You can further cut energy use by turning off the air conditioner if you're going out for a few hours, keeping doors and windows shut when the unit is on, changing the filter monthly, having a service check yearly, adding insulation to your home, and using solar film or other means to help keep the sun out."

Without air conditioning, a typical Florida home might consumer 750 KWH a month, Collier indicated. With a three-ton air conditioner set continuously at 72 degrees, the same house's usage during a hot month would be over 3,500 KWH. But if the thermostat is at 78 degrees, the home's consumption may be about [illegible]

Applying current FPL rates, and leaving out city or county taxes, a 750 KWH bill is $31.12; a bill for 2,500 KWH is $105.86, and 3,500 KWH is $148.57.

Room cooling power needs can be only more or less than 750 KWH, Collier said, "depending on appliances, family size, hours at home and other factors."

The Mirror for bargains

He noted that FPL's residential customers "for several decades" have paid lower rates than those of most other electric utilities in the state, "and this remains true today."

Council on Aging

The Martin County Council on Aging will meet today (Thursday, Aug. 3) at 1:30 p.m. at the Martin County Public Library. To be discussed are such matters as meals-on-wheels, Title V and the council's new bus. Members are reminded to attend.

Heart Assn. offers 'Heartsaver' class

The Heartsaver class, a new three-hour class in CardioPulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), is now being offered by the American Heart Association.

More than 650,000 persons die each year of heart attacks. Of these, 350,000 die outside of the hospital, usually within the first two hours. According to the Journal of the American Medical Association, "Sudden death from heart attack is the most important medical emergency today. It is probable that a large number of these deaths can be prevented by prompt, appropriate treatment."

CPR is used as an emergency method on victims who have stopped breathing and whose hearts have stopped, such as in a heart attack or drowning. It is a fairly simple technique, combining artificial ventilation (breathing) and external cardiac compression. It has been used to keep people alive until they revive, or until emergency medical help arrives.

The new class is designed to teach one-person CPR. Dr. Thomas F. Raymond, chairman of the CPR and Emergency Care Committee of the Palm Beach County Chapter of the American Heart Association, is enthusiastic about the new class. "In the past, two sessions were needed to teach CPR to one group. Now, twice as many people can learn the technique in the same amount of time."

During the past year, more than 6,600 persons were certified in CPR by the Palm Beach Chapter. Dr. Raymond attributes the success of the program to "the many volunteers we have who have taken further training to become certified instructors."

The Basic Cardiac Life Support classes are still available. These are six-hour classes taught in two sessions. In addition to one-person CPR, two person and infant CPR are taught.

For information on the next available Heartsaver class, contact the American Heart Association

Indian River Plantation opens fairway model

Indian River Plantation, a 195-acre recreational community and resort on Hutchinson Island, which has already sold nearly $14 million worth of residences, has opened its first Fairway Villa model.

F.I., (Pete) Hebbut, president of Indian River Plantation Company, said Fairway Villas models will be open to the public after July 29 and will remain open daily thereafter.

Priced from $80,000, the Fairway Villas are situated on the Plantation's 18-hole golf course between the Atlantic Ocean and Indian River and overlook either the fairways or man-made lakes, according to Nebhut. He said the villas feature two large bedrooms, living, dining and kitchen areas and wraparound screen porches. Reserved parking space for two cars is included, and enclosed garages are optional.

Fourteen of the 18 Fairway Villa apartments in Phase I have already been sold. They are clustered on a cul-de-sac between fairways, affording privacy.

BIG SNOOK are showing up in local waters and Steven Mayor of Stuart was fortunate enough Friday to land this one. The 20½-pound snook was taken off the Stuart Causeway around 10:30 a.m. Friday. Mayor said he used heavy tackle, which saved his catch when the fish wrapped wire leader around a piling, and he used a pinfish for bait. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

Then they flew to Winnipeg, Canada, took a train to Jasper, where they spent two days at Jasper Park Lodge, visiting the Ice Fields there, boarding an Aerial Tramway to ride to the top of Whistler's Mountain, rather scary but very beautiful. Flew to Vancouver for two days sightseeing, then on to Victoria for one day, visiting the famed Butchart Gardens; next to Lake Louise for two days, then on to Banff for two days. And back to Michigan to spend a few more days before driving home to Quincy, Mass. The weather was perfect, making a glorious trip.

This year the sorority gave $80,000 in grants to be used for cancer research to 16 different doctors throughout the United States, who work on all phases of cancer research. It allows the girls to enjoy lovely luncheons, banquets, and a free evening of fun.

This year it was reported that in addition to the $80,000 mentioned above, they gave $104,000 in equipment and medicine to the American Cancer Society, and more than $100,000 in civic projects.

In October, you will hear them say it is time for the state convention, where once again, they have a weekend of sorority fellowship Statewise, they support cancer research done in Florida, as well as giving scholarships to well-deserving students in low income brackets who wish to study radiation therapy.

"We work many hours and give a lot of our time, but it is all worth it for someday a cure for cancer they will find." Betty Nagy, president of the national sorority, Helen Allison, Gert Long and Gladys Kirkpatrick are the four H.Outers involved in this worthwhile work.

Peacock feathers couldn't feel any better than the breeze we have had these last few days, and especially, under the pine tree near the beach. With a good book, what could be more perfect? Along with that, we have had several good rains. Note the big sunflower blooming alongside the palm tree on the Al Rays' lot.

Tuesday night the Arenas had a good card game going with friends from the Sandpiper.

The Al Rays spent an enjoyable evening at Vista Pines with the Muranis.

Sorry to hear that Hal and Mabel Theimer had to cancel their planned trip north. Mabel is suffering with a pinched nerve in her neck, which is very painful.

Bob Young called the Arenas to say he is working hard, and that Edna is doing fine. He said to be sure to tell his that exciting game played.

Jack and Lil McConnell left, and Lil had a new hairdo that made her look lovely.

Lil Bares writes that George had his hand operated on and it is healing nicely, but it may be a while before he plays the accordian again. He will do well with Lil as his nurse, and a few prayers will help.

Bert and C.J. OLmilette write that they are enjoying the long-awaited warm weather, and C.J. is eating his weight in fresh clams, lobsters, scallops. They celebrated their 48th anniversary dining out with good friends.

Heard from Bob and Erma Barton. They are enjoying swimming in the Maine waters and awaiting a visit from their son and family from Alaska.

The Immichs sure do things fast! After being away for two years and only back a few days, they traded their motor home in on a new travel trailer. So, a house warming is coming up.

Dot Brown wrote that mosquitoes and greenheads are a real plague in New England this summer. She has been visiting her cousin in Cleveland, Ohio, for a few days, and left Brownie home house sitting. They are both looking forward to coming back to H.O. and have set the third week in October as their target date for departure from Massachusetts.

It was a pleasure to see Lee and Maury Foote around the park for a few days. They have never been here in the summer before, but were visiting their daughter in Orlando and just couldn't resist popping down to see how things were going here. They were pleased to find every O.K.

We are sorry to report that Margo Millette's husband Lucian has passed on, rather suddenly. He will be missed by many friends in H.Out.

mith's mall tract gets zoning o.k.

Planning and Zoning Board members voted last to recommend approval of a zoning change request by developer Peter C. Smith, who is seeking the order to build a 200,000 square foot shopping mall ear Port St. Lucie.

Building and Zoning Director Al Thomas said the application will go to the county commission in four weeks — "probably around Sept. 5" — for ular rejection.

mas said he has not seen Smith's plans for the mall but said the board saw them "As I understand, it's to be large building," Thomas said, adding that Smith ed to name tenants for the stores in the mall.

said when he did that last time, he got some of them from him when his center was turned down," Thomas mas was referring to plans Smith had earlier this year a 258,000 square foot shopping center, to be known as rt Shopping Center. That one was to be located on between Lyngate Drive and Port St. Lucie Boulevard. ing request for that tract was recommended by the ing and Zoning Board but rejected by the county mission at a meeting at which Port St. Lucie Mayor es McChesney voiced objection. A short time later, General Development Corporation announced plans for a 250,000 square foot center at the corner of Walton Road and U.S.1. Winn Dixie and Eckerd Drugs were listed as tenants for the center. Both firms had been announced a tenants for Smithport prior to that. The GDC center is still under review.

Thomas said the planning committee had some reservations about traffic flow to and from the proposed mall "similar to the comments about the one he was planning earlier," but said the committee did not recommend against the mall.

The site for the proposed mall is a 23 acre parcel on the west side of U.S.1, angling back behind the newly-opened Village Square Shopping Center. It is about 800 feet deep, and the front 200 feet along U.S.1 are already zoned B-3. That is the zoning category Smith seeks for the balance of the land, which is now zoned for agricultural use.

If the county commission approves the rezoning, the next step would be for Smith to present site plans. Thomas said site plans are usually turned in within four weeks of rezoning approval.

Smith says he is hoping groundbreaking can take place by early next year

PROGRESS is being steadily made on construction of the new St. James Orthodox Mission on Afroso Blvd. in Port St. Lucie. President and elder of the church, Bill Basara, left, joins Al Sirotkin in displaying what the gates to the church entrance will look like. A geodesic dome will soon be erected atop the church walls in the background, says Sirotkin, who is vice president and designer of the church. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

Construction underway at St. James Mission

Approximately six years ago St. James Orothodox Mission was founded by the Very Rev. George A. Gladky, dean of Florida, with a handful of worshippers holding service once a month. On May 20, 1978, ground-breaking for a permanent church was held at the site on Afroso Blvd. in Port St. Lucie, and it is considered "A Miracle of South Florida" with a few faithful families from Okeechobee, Stuart, Port Salerno, Port St. Lucie and Vero Beach, plus surrounding areas, working endlessly on this project.

It all started with thought of a temporary building in which to hold services, but after much talk, it was decided to have a church big enough to hold a sizable congregation. Tentative completion date is planned for late fall.

At present, services are held at St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Stuart, on Saturday. Father Myron Hill of St. Herman's, ake Worth, has been acting Rector of St. James for the past two years For further information, call 287 3887.

nly four local races contested

BY BOB FRYER

oks like it should be a relatively election season this year on the ront as only four political posts being contested in St. Lucie bedeau, a Democrat, is seeking District 4 county commission seat held by Republican Ed Enns.

Thibedeau, Jr., former St. County Civil Defense Director, the last man to become a locally when he filed papers at the Supervisor of ons office just 10 minutes before deadline on July 28.

m 1976 to 1978, Thibedeau was of the county Civil Defense and, during that time, ed to get the 911 emergency system going and to get ency Medical Technicians in e Department. He is 48 years d has been a resident of the since 1965.

n, who operates an insurance y in Fort Pierce, is the only ficial to ever serve on the county ission. He is seeking his third as commissioner and last year served as commission chairman. He will be running on his record and will face Thibedeau in the Nov. 7 general election.

Another contested race is the one for the District 3 commission seat. In that race, Everett Green, a Democrat, is seeking his fourth term, and is opposed by Democrat Ed Jenkins, owner of the Black Pearl Fresh Seafood Market on Fisherman's Wharf in Fort Pierce. He and Green will face each other in the Sept. 12 primary. No Republican filed for the post. Jenkins ran unsuccessfully against Green in 1974.

Incumbent Democrat Dale Cassens, who holds the District 76 state House of Representatives seat, is seeking his second term for that post and will face Republican Charles Nergard in the Nov. 7 general election. Nergard held the District 78 seat for five terms before declining to run in 1976.

The only other contested race is for a Circuit Court judge's seat being vacated by retiring Judge Wallace Sample. Voters in Martin, St. Lucie, Indian River and Okeechobee Counties, which form the 19th Judicial Circuit, will select a new judge on Nov. 7 from a field of three candidates. Assistant public defender Bruce Wilkinson, who lives in Stuart and heads the Fort Pierce public defender's office, will face Dean Tooker of Jensen Beach and Kenneth Sharpe of Vero Beach. Tooker, an attorney in Martin County for 20 years, was county attorney for 11 years and assistant public defender for two years. Sharpe brings his experience as Indian River County School Board attorney into the three-way race.

The race for the Circuit Court bench is on a non-partisan basis.

The list of uncontested races is slightly longer than the contested ones. There were three St. Lucie County School Board seats up for grabs this year, but nobody filed to run against incumbents Jeffery Furst, Samuel Gaines and Thomas Bruhn.

Likewise, nobody filed to run against St. Lucie County Judge William G. Tye, nor against Circuit Judges C. Pfeiffer Trowbridge and Charles Smith.

THIS IS WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT. Listening to the numbers being called out, stamping them out on the specials or blanking them out on the cards seem to take concentration, but some can play as many as 16 cards, and many play 12. All are just waiting to cry "Bingo!" and hoping each time that someone else doesn't do it first.

BINGO!!!!!JACKPOT!!!!!

BY STRELSA SCHREIBER

For the past five and one-half years these are the familiar cries that could be heard emanating from the Community Center one or two days each week, depending upon the scheduling.

Bingo is only one of the many needs which the Center attempts to provide and it was one of the first. The games originally started back in October, 1972, and were operated with borrowed equipment. Then, there was a cessation in the weekly games for several months until July, 1974, when the Center spent some $1250 to purchase its own equipment for this popular activity. In four months' time, the investment was paid back!

The players experimented with both Tuesday afternoon and Saturday night games until a dance group preempted Saturday night. Then, the demands for the use of the Center rooms on weekends became so great that the Saturday night time had to be abandoned. In January, 1975, Tuesday and Friday afternoon sessions were initiated and this schedule has continued to date.

The Bingo Committee includes some who have been active since the games' inception. Larry Hett chairs and Florence Dabney is vice chairman of the committee, with Larry doing the calling on Tuesday afternoons. Bill Lenz and Tom Hillegas serve as floor managers on Tuesdays and Fridays, respectively, and Herb Tschudy calls on Friday afternoon. The number of players participating fluctuates according to season and competitive games offered elsewhere, but there are always from 30 to 70 bingo enthusiasts in attendance. The jack pot is always $40; other prizes are determined by the number playing.

The committee feels that the games should not be competitive beyond what can be afforded, that is, a certain percentage of the total income. In their opinion, bingo is a very important activity for those who play in a social way, that their gathering together in this manner is quite meaningful to them. The committee feels that, while it is nice to win a prize, the prize should not be the predominant factor, that the fun aspect is far more important, and that if larger prizes were offered, some of the congeniality might be lost.

The players are predominantly female and they are fiercely loyal. They indignantly fuss and fume when the games have to be canceled for any reason. Many women players feel that if Saturday night games were reinstated, their husbands would join them at that time. While Saturday night games would require larger prizes, the increased crowd might bring in additional money to support the higher amounts. On the other hand, they would compete with those who want to reserve the building for Saturday night affairs. It's a "sticky wicket," according to Center President Dick Lundin.

ELLEN MATTHEWS, 202 Dabney St., is 84 years old, and walks through the woods to get to the Center. She came to Port St. Lucie from New Jersey five years ago, and has been coming to bingo at the Center ever since she arrived. She is a widow and says if it weren't for bingo and other activities at the Center, she would just have to sit in the house all day. She hopes the Snack Bar will return to the hot meals formerly offered at noon.

Another widow, RUTH BORSODI, 191 Solaz, arrived in Port St. Lucie ten years ago from East Paterson, New Jersey, and has been attending Center bingo since the first day it started. She also comes to every other activity scheduled at the Center that she can possibly manage, including classes She likes the friendly atmosphere and the people she has met here.

ANN BOMAN, 208 E. Arbor, is widowed and has been a resident of Port St. Lucie for 18 years, having come here originally from St. Louis, Mo. She is an avid bingo fan and regularly attends both sessions. For two years she worked at the coffee table; now, she concentrates on her game. She, too, attends many of the other activities at the Center.

MRS. HENRY PESSINI, 352 SW Lucero Dr., has resided here for the past six years, coming from Manchester, Conn., when her husband retired. (He is not a bingo fan.) She comes faithfully to the Tuesday afternoon games, likes the friendly atmosphere and the smaller games. She regrets the financial inability of Indian River Community College to continue sponsorship of classes here at the Center.

All of these women were high in their praise of how the Bingo games are managed and operated, and are very appreciate of the efforts of the committee members to make possible the continuation of this type of activity. They all are hopeful that with the completion of the new Lundin Hall some consideration can be given to a return of Saturday Night Bingo once again. This is entirely possible.

Although bingo was instituted to supply one of the community's needs, it was also intended to be a source of revenue for the operation of the Center. In the four years of its operation for which was have specific figures, bingo has been consistent in its financial support of the Community Center's operations as the following table indicates:

1974-75	$5,716.02	28.1
1975-76	$7,538.56	18.2
1976-77	$7,722.16	17.7
1977-78	$6,102.95	12.3

These figures are based on the Center's fiscal year July 1 through June 30. While the dollar figures are fairly consistent, the Center, as it has grown has had to find additional sources of revenue to continue its expanded operation, and consequently the percentage figure of the bingo contribution has dropped.

The Bingo Committee extends a cordial invitation to others within this area to join with them on Tuesday and Friday afternoons at 1 p.m., for a few hours of fun and friendly diversion.

CALLING BINGO requirs mellifluous tones, urbanity, charm and a thick skin, too, at times. Caller Larry Hett gets the job done at the Community Center every Tuesday afternoon, so he must have the necessary attributes.

THAT CARD SELECTION before bingo must be a real science because many bingo aficionados arrive as much as an hour early just to screen cards and choose those most likely to win. Snack bar operator Carolina Mola watches in the background as these ladies really give the cards a going over.

BINGO is more than just calling numbers, though, and Bingo Vice Chairman Florence Dabney and worker Bill Lenz, seated, take in and pay out the money. Virginia Watkins is buying her cards after carefully selecting them with an eye for potential winners.

Double sessions create host of problems for parents, kids

BY BOB FRYER

"The kids will be the ones to suffer the most," commented Bea Lewis, when asked what the effects of double sessions at Port St. Lucie Elementary School will be this coming school year.

Mrs. Lewis, owner of the Port St. Lucie Child Care Center, says the double sessions will be good for her business. Already, she says, there have been numerous inquiries from parents about care for their children while they're out of school and the parents are at work.

"It will be good for us, but I think it will be hard on the younger kids in the afternoon session to stay awake. Normally, after being here in the morning, we'd put them down for a nap in the afternoon. But now, about nap time, they'll be going from here to school. It seems like it's always the kids that suffer most with double sessions," she said.

Mrs. Lewis said she started getting inquiries from parents about the care of their children as soon as the school board decision to put Port St. Lucie Elementary School on double sessions was announced. She said her center, located on U.S.1 near the east end of Prima Vista Boulevard, handles all age children through the fifth grade. The center will care for afternoon session students in the morning and deliver them to the school at noon. After dropping off the afternoon session children, kids who attend the morning session will be picked up and kept at the child care center until their parents get off work.

"Our license permits us to have 40 kids at the center, and we'll be at our peak at all times, for the morning and afternoon sessions," she said. In fact, she noted, there is a waiting list for children to attend her center and said only parents with real hardship cases are getting their children admitted at present.

She is also the owner of the South PSL Child Care Center, but said, "Right now, things are up in the air with that center, because the property it's located on is being sold."

At the Punkin Patch Child Care Center, located on U.S.1 a little south of Midway Road, Ingrid Milsson said her center is also offering pick-up and delivery service to the school. She noted that, so far, a dozen children are signed up for that service, and said she has no age limit for children at her center.

"Most of the children we'll be caring for and taking to or from the school are the younger ones, but we do have one fifth grade girl whose parents were in a bind and didn't want their daughter staying at their home in the boondocks while they are at work," she said.

In discussing the coming school year and some of the problems double sessions are presenting to Port St. Lucie students and parents, Mrs. Barry Guccione, a worker at the PSL Child Care Center, said, "I think they should have let the younger children go to the morning session." She said that children who come to the center in the mornings won't have much time for resting, "though we'll try to get them to rest as much as possible," before going to school for the afternoon.

"Getting up early with their parents to be driven to the center, then staying all day and having to ride the bus home will make an awfully long day for the younger children. I don't know how they'll be able to learn much," she said.

Mrs. Guccione added, "I don't know what I would have done with my child without the center here... I'm very displeased with the idea of double sessions." She said in order to be fair, the school board ought to reverse the morning and afternoon schedule halfway through the year "so everybody gets a taste of what it's like."

Roseann LaFache, another center worker, said she knows of several mothers who would normally have sent their children to kindergarten at the Port St. Lucie Elementary School, but who are now keeping their children out of the school until next year or taking them to the center for lessons. She noted that in the spring, when softball practice starts, the practices will have to be held later in the evening.

"Lots of mothers have applied for jobs here since the double sessions were announced, figuring they could care for their child and earn money, too," Mrs. Lewis said, adding she has had to turn them down.

Mrs. LaFache notes that "Everywhere I go -- at the bank and in the grocery store lines -- I hear people complaining about double sessions. It's a real problem for a lot of people," she said.

One problem will be that during the winter, it will be dark when school children are waiting for buses in the morning and when the afternoon session kids are returning home from school in the evening. City Public Safety Director Douglas Stout reminds drivers of this and urges them to be on the lookout for children. He also said drivers "should remember that with double sessions, it means we'll have kids out of school at all times of the day. So, I urge them to watch for kids whenever they drive."

$171,000 police contract approved

BY BOB FRYER

By a three to two vote at a special ting Monday night, the Port St. ie council approved renewal of a ,000 contract with Sheriff Lanie rvell for extra police protection in city during the coming fiscal year. The contract must now be approved the St. Lucie County Commission Norvell before becoming effec- , but no opposition from those ion is expected. It provides for rell to supply two road patrol ies in the city at all times and a deputy and car during a daytime r the last several years, the city contracted with the Sheriff's tment for extra protection, but of this year's renewal came up, on the contract was delayed after city council members could et with county commissioners to e double taxation complaints. st meeting occurred last week.

t the joint meeting council bers argued that since state law ires the sheriff to protect all parts county, Norvell ought to offer ate protection without extra cost city. They complained that if it et for the extra protection contract, the basic level of service to the city would not be adequate.

County commissioners were asked to fund a higher basic level of protection for the city, but did not indicate any willingness to do so. A short time after the city council members left the meeting, commissioners approved Norvell's budget for the coming year, cutting out funds for Norvell to hire 17 more employees.

Before the meeting with the county commission, city officials had threatened to not renew the contract and to rely on the sheriff to protect the city as best he could. The sheriff noted that if this happened he would have to fire nine deputies, as that is the number of men he employs to provide extra protection to the city.

At the council meeting Monday night, Councilman Merle Anderson voted "emphatically no" when the contract came up, and was joined in opposition to the contract by Councilwoman Lolita Kernohan. But Mayor William McChesney, Vice Mayor Mike Reeb and Councilman Schuyler Sharpe favored the contract.

Anderson called spending city money on the contract "stupid" and called for the city to immediately start forming its own police department.

"Why should we, down here, think we're so much better than the rest of the people in the county by having extra protection. There is no reason to get into this when we need the money for other things," he said.

Vice Mayor Reeb said he felt it was understood the city was not going to get any help from the county, and because of this, he felt the city should renew the contract to insure proper protection. He said, without the contract or extra help from the county, there would not be adequate protection. He predicted that word would spread that the city was poorly protected and the crime rate would triple.

Councilman Sharpe said there was no guarantee that without signing the contract the county would be pressured into supplying more basic protection in the city, and wondered whether the city should gamble that the level of protection without a contract would be sufficient. He noted that, for the section of the county south of Midway Road and west of Indian River, only one road patrol deputy per shift is on duty.

Mayor McChesney noted that the city attorney is looking into avenues the city might pursue over the alleged double taxation of city residents by the county and indicated this would be pursued regardless of the decision on the police protection contract.

SMILING FACES--The group of kids at the Port St. Lucie Child Care Center seem to be a happy lot. But for many parents and kids in this city, the start of double sessions at PSL Elementary School this year is expected to create problems. Some young working couples have enrolled their children in day care centers during the hours the kids won't be in school and the parents will be at work. Other who can't afford that, or who can't get their children in a center, will have to work out another solution. Parks, police cut from city budget

BY BOB FRYER

Plans for a new recreational park and for starting up a city police department were eliminated Tuesday when Port St. Lucie city council members reviewed the first draft of a proposed $1.4 million budget and trimmed it by $356,000.

The council worked most of the day Tuesday on the budget and will meet again on Friday, Aug. 11, to further review the budget and tentatively set the coming fiscal year's tax rate.

Acting city manager Gerald Van Patten, who said the original $1.4 million budget proposal would have required a 2.3 mill tax levy, commented Wednesday morning that he felt the council would probably set the new millage rate at or very near last year's rate of 1.5 mills.

The most costly item to be stricken from the budget was the start up of a city police department. That was projected to cost $120,000. The council decided to wait until a new city manager is hired and has about six months "to get his feet wet" before getting the manager's recommendation about forming a police force.

In spite of recently voiced demands from a large group of Little League parents and coaches for a new Sportsman's Park type facility, the council eliminated plans for a new park. The $1.4 million first draft included spending $27,000 as a first payment on an $83,000 price tag for five parks. That $27,000 figure was eliminated, as was a proposal to spend $85,542.50 to develop a new park in the Midport area of the city.

The only major new proposal for the coming fiscal year which won council favor is a plan to start up a city maintenance department at a cost of $93,000.

The Sportsman's Park budget, proposed at $127,665, was slashed to $69,790 by the elimination of plans for handball courts, fencing, two tennis courts, a sprinkler system, bleachers, mowers, car stops, a kiddie park and office equipment. On Wednesday, Mayor William McChesney said, "We will maintain Sportsman's Park as is, without capital improvements." As for the new ball park in Midport, the mayor said the council plans to take no action until the issue of double taxation with the county is solved. He noted city attorneys are still researching the issue.

As for salaries, Van Patten and

P&Z Board recommends plat okay for Lookout

City Planning and Zoning Board members voted unanimously Monday afternoon to recommend plat approval for phase one of Viking's Lookout in Port St. Lucie.

Viking's Lookout is a proposed project by developer Victor Georgeff, who built the Viking's Landing project along the North Fork of the St. Lucie River, just north of Canal C-24. His new project is to be located on a 144-acre tract on the south side of C-24 Canal and on the west side of what is technically known as C-23A, although it's commonly known as the North Fork. He plans to go in on a joint venture with General Development Corporation to build a bridge across C-24 to get access to the Viking's Lookout project.

Phase one of the project includes 65 lots, each about one acre in size, and also includes tennis courts, a small shopping center and roadways. A total of 31 additional lots of similar size are planned for phase two.

The tract is currently in the county, but on Tuesday, Aug. 15, the council is expected to vote on a petition to have the land annexed into the city and an ordinance to zone the land for multifamily use. Georgeff plans to sell the lots and have the individual buyers build on them. He is seeking approval to allow up to six units per acre in the project.

City Planner Mike Szunyog said the plat approval only means approval to record the legal dimensions of the land, and said site plans would still have to be reviewed by the city before they will be approved or rejected.

Hurchalla, front-running candidate, gets blast from Realtor Tilton

BY SALLY LATHAM

Maggy Hurchalla, incumbent Martin County Commissioner whose only opponent in the Sept. 12 primaries is another Democrat, is getting some pre-election flak from Ransom Tilton, Jensen Beach Realtor, who is seeking to put her out of office.

Tilton is backing Dr. Ed Geary, Hurchalla's opposition and also a Democrat. Tilton is trying to talk Republican voters into going over to the supervisor of elections office and switching their registration from Republican to Democrat.

Geary, a Stuart dentist, served as commissioner several years ago. He was defeated by Hurchalla in 1972.

On Aug. 3, Tilton sent out a letter to the residents of Pinelake Village, mobile home community owned by the Tilton family, seeking their backing in his political endeavor. He wrote:

"One of our County Commissioners, Maggy Hurchalla, has voted against all our projects including Pinelake Village. We think that Pinelake Village is as fine a Mobile Home Park as there is.

"My friend, Dr. Ed Geary, is running against her. They are both Democrats.

"If you or any of your friends are registered Republican, please re-register Democrat so you can vote for Ed. This must be done before the end of next week."

Deadline for voter registration is this Saturday, Aug. 12, at 5 p.m.

Contacted by The Mirror on Tuesday, Tilton said his reasons for trying to get Hurchalla out of office was "in the best interests of the county."

"She has a negative attitude," Tilton told The Mirror. "She votes against projects that are good for Martin County and that meet all the criteria set down by the county, for her own reasons."

Despite the opposition of the Geary-backers, Hurchall still is front-runner in contributor popularity, among the roster of candidates in all the races. According to the financial statements turned in Monday at the elections office, she is high dollar-getter in campaign contributions, with nearly $4,000 coming in from approximately 200 of her supporters. Interestingly, most of them are small donations, ranging upward from $1 to $100. Thus far, her expenditures totalling $1,770 have been largely on postage, letters and campaign buttons.

Geary, according to his first financial statement, has received donations of $1,245, most of it from real estate brokers. He has spent $538, including his filing fee.

Rex Andrews, county commission candidate for District 3, has collected $1,020, and has spent $538 (also filing fee) to date.

Lavon (Bud) Bagwell, another candidate for county commission has collected $600, and has spent $12.17 for photographs.

Charles Covington, incumbent school board candidate, collected $808 as of Monday, and has spent $650.

Peggy Robbins, supervisor of elections who is running to succeed herself, reports total contributions of $1,104.88, and expenditures of $949. Her opponent, Elsie Higgins, has received $1,672.

Moira Moore and Mildred, both running for school board, had nothing to report.

The financial statements are required of all contested candidates on the first and third Mondays throughout the campaign, and on the Monday just before elections. Those who are running uncontested are not required to file.

Chicago group buys Sheraton

The Sheraton Resort Inn on Hutchinson Island is on the verge of getting a quartet of new owners and a new look, in advance of the approaching tourist season.

Announcement of the sale was made at a luncheon Thursday at the Inn, attended by members of the news media and representatives of the Chambers of Commerce of Jensen Beach, Stuart and Fort Pierce.

The group purchasing the Inn, allying themselves as "The Island Partners," includes Lawrence C. Gabriele, Edward A. Villadonga, Terry F. Harrigan and Louis P. Pitzaferro, four Chicago business and professional men who had been seeking a Florida investment.

"We've been looking for something away from the hustle and bustle," Gabriele told the guests. "We think we've found everything we wanted right here."

"Island Partners" signed the contract to purchase the Sheraton for $2 million, from First Federal Savings and Loan of Martin County on Aug. 1. The transfer of ownership is expected to be completed at the end of September, Gabriele said.

The Sheraton has been in receivership for several years, with the bank as owner. It has been beset by financial problems, and in recent months, trouble cropped up between a group of owners in Outdoor Resorts of America across the street, over the swimming pool.

Gabriele, a lawyer, said he is confident the litigation over the pool can be settled amicably out of court.

"They are our neighbors," the Chicagoan said, "and I'm sure the problem can be solved on a friendly basis. As a lawyer, I know that nobody ever wins in court."

The first target for improvement, the guests were told, will be the kitchen, and one of the partners, Pitzaferro, has the necessary expertise. Owner of a large Chicago restaurant, Pitzaferro will become the resident manager of the restaurant and lounge areas. Now a resident of Coral Springs, he will be here to give the upgrading of the cuisine his personal supervision.

Renovation of the premises, Gabriele said, will be a gradual program.

"It's not going to happen overnight," the partner said, "but plans call for upgrading of the premises from the front lobby to the ocean."

Gabriele stressed that Island Partners want to become part of the area, and asked the help and suggestions of everyone present.

Among those attending was Bill Wallace, president of First Federal Savings and Loan, also at the head table, as one guest noted, "smiling."

BREAKING THE GOOD NEWS about the purchase of the Sheraton Resort Inn is Lawrence C. Gabriele, Chicago attorney who is one of the four "Island Partners" buying the Inn for $2 million. At his right, seated, is another partner, Edward A. Villadonga, also an attorney, and at Gabriele's left, seated, is Bill Wallace, president of First Federal Savings and Loan of Martin County, which is handling the financing for the sale. Upgrading the dining room is first on the partners' agenda. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Voter deadline this Saturday

Martin County residents who haven't yet taken advantage of the big voter registration campaign which has been staged by Supervisor of Elections Peggy Robbins and her team during the past two months are reminded that this Saturday, Aug. 12, at 5 p.m. is the deadline for registering, if they want to vote in the approaching elections.

Miss Robbins, in a drive to "take the courthouse to the people," has had mobile units on the road for weeks, in all parts of the county. She has also been keeping the office in the courthouse open on Saturdays, to give working people a chance to get on the voter rolls.

The books must close, according to law, 30 days before an election. The primaries will be held Sept. 12.

... of the problems, according to ... lawyer Harold Shear, is that it ...ver been exactly established as ... is responsible for maintaining ...epairing the walls. One of the ...es of bringing suit, he said ..., is "to establish the ...sibility and to get it done."

...uit was filed last week by a ... of 16 property-owners, against ...ondominium association "Ven-...at Indian River Inc.," seeking ... order to get the seawalls repaired.

"We want to know why the directors have been sitting on their hands," Shear told The Mirror. "The walls are cracking, and we're worried that a major storm in the fall could be a serious problem."

The land the mobile home and trailer community sits on is nearly all fill, Shear noted, and would be the most vulnerable in a hurricane, if the walls are not properly fortified.

The question of just who and which organization has the responsibility of maintaining the walls is a hard one to answer, Shear explained, because there are at least two and perhaps three associations within the park. Some of the lots are rented to owners of travel trailers who are there only a portion of the year. In another section are permanently established mobile homes. In the suit, Shear said, the litigants hope to pin down the group which is legally required to make the repairs.

Shear feels that the seawalls are the shell, the common container of the condominium land, just as the walls of an apartment building are the common exterior, hence the responsibility of the condo association.

"If one owner wanted to go ahead and repair his own part of the wall, it wouldn't be practical," the lawyer said. "How do you repair part of a wall?"

AARP not happy with med-society

BY SALLY LATHAM

The Martin County chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons, which has been attempting to set up a meeting of minds with the Martin County Medical Society on hospital cost-containment, is far from happy about a "too little too late" response it received this month.

Ernest Curwen, president of the AARP, called the reply from MCMS president, Dr. Marshall Evans, a "brush-off."

Curwen, in behalf of the AARP, wrote a letter to the society early in the year, asking for the organization of a joint committee made up of doctors and senior citizens, to explore the cost saving experiments, which have been successful in other states.

The AARP leader said he got one further letter of reply from the society, which he called unsatisfactory and non-committal.

The second letter, written July 26 by Dr. Marshall Evans and John D. Eckersley, contends that all possible efforts are already being made to keep down the rising costs of medical care, and that the society sees no benefit to forming a joint committee.

In this, in part:

"Dr. Nesbitt, President, American Medical Society, has urged all doctors to restrain their rate of fee increase by not increased each year for the next two years. The latest information we have is that American fees is that they rose 0.7 percent in May, while the increase for all items was 1.0 percent, according to the government's Consumer Price Index. By April, physicians' fees rose 0.6 percent, again less than the 0.8 percent increase for all items. I am sure you are aware that in general, physician fees have kept pace with inflation but have not exceeded the rate of inflation which is now averaging approximately 7 percent per year.

"Martin County Hospital has long standing committees that take an active role in cost containment – these will include the Utilization Review Committee, Patient Care Committee and Joint Conference Committee (between staff and administration).

"I am sure that you are also well aware that the increased medical charges have been the result of the present inflation for the last several years. The physicians of Martin County are constantly trying to cope with this and are making sincere efforts to keep their charges reasonable. We do not feel that the creation of another local committee to study the problem will help...."

Dr. Eckersley, secretary-treasurer of the medical society, was busy with patients and could not be reached for comment, and Dr. Evans' office is closed until Aug. 14. Dr. Richard Penick, however, when contacted by The Mirror, said he feels the reply was in no way a brush-off to the AARP.

All the committees mentioned, he contended, function in varying ways as cost-containment bodies. The Utilization committee, for example, checks the charts of each patient to see that he or she has received the proper care, and whether or not he or she has stayed in the hospital too long.

"If we feel he has stayed too long," Dr. Penick said, "we notify his physicians. If the doctor still doesn't discharge the patient, we take his Medicare away."

The medical society committees also monitor the needs of the hospital on purchase of equipment after determining the extent of need.

The answers failed to satisfy Curwen, who feels strongly that the doctors should be willing to work with the senior groups to help establish a program like that now in effect in New York and California, where a pre-paid medical service has been functioning satisfactorily. He contends that the doctors here are unwilling to introduce such a plan.

Although the AARP has been zeroing in primarily on the medical organization and not the administration at Martin Memorial Hospital, Guy Cromwell, administrator, says that several programs have been introduced to hold the line on costs to the patient.

One of them is a computerized monitoring system throughout the building which plays detective on energy consumption.

"It has made a significant difference in utility bills," Cromwell said.

Cromwell and his staff are also saving dollars through competitive bidding in the purchasing department, and periodic deliveries which allow them to get the best price and quality for all regular hospital needs.

Similar savings are effected in the personnel, by monitoring the work and production loads in all departments, Cromwell said.

"If the volume of work goes down, the size of the staff goes down," he said. And by using the services of a technical auditing firm to handle the bookkeeping, "we get the greatest reimbursement in terms of federal programs."

WASHINGTON—Residents of Florida's 10th Congressional District are concerned about detente with the Soviet Union, particularly since they fear the U.S. is the weaker militarily, U.S. Rep. L.A. "Skip Bafalis' annual questionnaire shows.

Almost 31 per cent of the 31,601 responses tabulated in the sixth annual districtwide questionnaire called for a hardening of our policy toward the Soviet Union. Another 17.8 per cent said our present policy should be maintained, while 1.7 said our policy should be eased.

At the same time, 53.8 per cent of the responses viewed our defense capability as less than that of the Soviet Union, while 27 per cent said both countries were about equal militarily. Only 9.1 per cent said we were stronger than the U.S.S.R.

On a related issue, 72.5 per cent of those responding said they would favor restoration of the draft as a means of manning our armed forces, while 27.5 per cent opposed the idea.

Bafalis noted that the 10th district's opposition to a soft line toward the Soviet Union is about the same as its opposition to detente with Red China at the expense of Taiwan. More than 78 per cent of the responses opposed recognition of Red China at the expense of Nationalist China; only 21.5 per cent favored such a course.

On economic issues, Bafalis said, the 10th District favors a substantial tax cut and higher tariffs on foreign-made products. Asked if they would favor a substantial tax reduction as a means of stimulating the economy, 76.9 per cent said yes. At the same time, 53.8 per cent said they would support higher tariffs as a means of reducing the volume of imported goods, even though it would mean higher prices.

On another economic question, the voters of the 10th District overwhelmingly blamed the Congress for the inflation now plaguing our economy. Almost 63 per cent of the responses blamed the Congress; only 19.6 blamed big business, 8.5 per cent the President, and 9 per cent the public.

Bafalis said the voters are also overwhelmingly opposed to "cradle to grave" federal health insurance. More than 72 per cent of the responses favored catastrophic insurance from private carriers as the solution to the nation's health crisis; only 27.9 per cent favored a government program.

The people were equally adamant in their opposition to any extension of the time given for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, Bafalis noted. Almost 72 per cent of those responding said they were opposed to granting an extension to the seven-year limit; while 28.3 per cent said they would endorse an extension.

The district is even more opposed to legislation allowing government employees -- on any level -- to strike. More than 92 per cent of the responses were in opposition to government strikes, only 7.4 per cent approved.

The voters of the 15-county district are also opposed to government regulation of business, Bafalis said. Asked if they felt the government should regulate business to protect consumers and workers, only 37.8 per cent said yes, 62.2 said no.

Tenth District residents showed their concern with foreign policy and economic matters when asked to rank those issues considered most important.

The issue selected as the single most important was maintaining a strong national defense, which was No. 1 on 31.4 per cent of the responses. It was followed closely by reducing inflation which was No. 1 on 29.4 per cent of the returns.

Looking at the issues selected most often as either first or second, economics moved to the forefront. Nearly 46 per cent of the returns chose reducing inflation as either No. 1 or No. 2, while 41.7 per cent picked national defense as either first or second.

The third-ranked issue was reducing the size of government, selected No. 1 on 9.6 per cent of the returns, followed closely by solving the energy problem, which placed No. 1 on 8.5 per cent. Fifth came balancing the budget, which showed up NB. 1 on 8.3 per cent, although it showed even better among the issues chosen for first or second, appearing then on 20.8 per cent of the ballots.

Sixth on the list was restoring confidence in government, while welfare reform came next. Reducing crime placed eighth, coming in first on 4 per cent, with reducing unemployment close behind n 3.8 per cent of the returns.

Cleaning up the environment was tenth among the 10 choices listed, showing up first on 3 per cent of the returns. Another 1.3 per cent offered their own suggestions for the issue deserving of top priority.

In announcing returns from the sixth annual questionnaire, Bafalis thanked those 31,000 residents who took the time to respond to the opinion sampling.

"I'm delighted so many residents of the district took the time to respond to this questionnaire," Bafalis said. "Believe me, it will be most helpful as these issues come to the floor for decisions."

"I only wish everyone would have taken the time to respond," he added.

Some 345,000 questionnaires were mailed out, addressed to every home in the district.

Finalists picked for city engineer and manager

Port St. Lucie city council members last night Thursday, Aug. 3, to narrow the field of candidates for city manager from 81 to five, and to interview all but four of 37 applicants for the job of city engineer.

In the process, the council drew a reprimand from local state attorney Robert Stone for violation of the state's Sunshine Law.

When the council met to consider the applications for the two positions, they referred to them by number while announcing how many votes the various applicants received. Once it had determined which applicants were most preferred by council members, the names and addresses of the applicants were announced. It should also be noted that applications were available for public inspection prior to and after the meeting. However, the fact that applicants were mentioned by number during the meeting drew a complaint to Stone and resulted in the reprimand.

In a letter to Mayor William McChesney, Stone said it is his opinion that the Sunshine Law was violated, but he said, since the violation did not appear to have been made in bad faith, he did not intend to take civil or criminal action over the matter.

From the field of 81 candidates, the council selected five finalists for city manager. They are: Kenneth Hennons, West Palm Beach; Vane McCormick, North Miami Beach; Allen Rushlow, St. Cloud; Leonard Silvia, Lake Mills, Wisc.; and Richard Clark, Maple Shade, N.J.

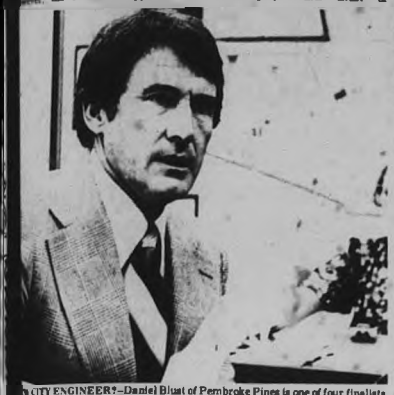
The finalists will be interviewed by the council, at a public meeting at 1 p.m. Friday, Aug. 18. Travel expenses for the finalists will be paid by the city.

One of the four finalists for the city engineer job, Daniel Blust of Pembroke Pines, was interviewed Monday night by the council. He interview was held at that time because he is going on vacation and could not attend a meeting at 1 p.m. Friday, Aug. 11.

At that Aug. 11 meeting, the other three finalists will be interviewed by the council. They are William Miley of Ocala, Asghar Ali Kazi of Miami, and Dennis Finch of Gainesville.

When Blust met with the council, he told them he is "a farmboy from Illinois" who wanted to get back to a small city after living in the Hollywood, Fla. area. He listed his experience working in private practice and for municipalities.

Mayor McChesney said he hopes the council may be able to pick a new city engineer as soon as its next regular meeting on Tuesday, Aug. 15.



CITY ENGINEER?—Daniel Blust of Pembroke Pines is one of four finalists in a field of 37 applicants for the position of city engineer for Port St. Lucie. Council members interviewed Blust Monday and night and plan to interview the other three finalists Friday. Selection of an engineer could come as early as next Friday. On Friday, Aug. 18, five finalists for the job of city manager will be interviewed. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer) other item studied at last week's bishop meeting is the bicycle path, which the commissioners have $10,800. The path, which is for the strip from East Ocean ved to the north town limits the Outrigger, is expected to cost Sewall's Point engineer Dick ryson told the commission that he checked the location of utilities along Sewall's Point Road. He that both Southern Bell and television lines are buried along st side of the road, and Southern pipes are sunk along the west

However, Hellstrom indicated he feels the bike path is still feasible, as the commission is retaining the project in the budget.

The commissioners are also hoping to work out some method of control of the fishermen using the Ten Cent Bridge. Mayor Ed Gluckler said he'd checked on license plates of the cars parked at the Sewall's Point end, and that more than half of them were from out of county. The cars being parked there, he noted, have torn up the sodding recently put down by the Department of Transportation on the south side, and the Benihana lawns on the north.

A short special meeting was called early in the evening, to appoint G.Douglas Reed of Mandalay subdivision to the Board of Zoning Adjustment. Reed will fill the seat left vacant when the three-year term of Herman Murray expired in July.

MR. and MRS. BILL LOBRUTTO of Allo Realty, at ERA headquarters in Kansas City, receive congratulations on becoming members from Jim Jackson, ERA president.

Allo Realty, Inc. joins ERA

Allo Realty, Inc., 8021 South U.S.1, Port St. Lucie, has joined ERA (Electronic Realty Associates, Inc.), a nationwide home marketing service, it was announced last week by William LoBrutto, Registered Real Estate Broker and president.

As an ERA Broker, LoBrutto said he will be able to offer such consumer aids as ERA's two home warranties – the Home Buyers Protection Plan and Home Sellers Protection, as well as photo-by-wire listings.

ERA, the fastest-growing national home marketing service, will have more than 3,500 brokers with nearly 35,000 sales associates in more than 3,750 offices nationwide by the end of 1978, according to LoBrutto.

"With ERA's three exclusive consumer aids we offer, we can help people buy and sell their homes and alleviate the trauma of moving," LoBrutto said.

"The Home Buyers Protection Plan," he continued, "protects the homeowner against the operational failure of major home components, including the central heating, electric air conditioning, plumbing and electrical systems, built-in appliances, water heaters and softeners and accessivle sheet metal ducts."

"Home Sellers Protection coverage begins 15 days after the home is listed for sale with an ERA Broker, for up to six months, or until the home is sold. The coverage is identical to the buyer's plan," LoBrutto said.

"A person moving long distances has always had to travel back and forth to find the right home. There was no way to make the search easier. ERA's 'Moving Machines' has changed all that. The Moving Machine transmits six photos at a time of homes and descriptive data to prospective buyers practically anywhere in the country. The transmission takes only six minutes from the time the request is made to the central bank of homes on file at ERA's headquarters in Overland Park, Kansas. The buyer could be looking at these photos as they come off the maching sitting in his living room or in my office," LoBrutto said.

According to LoBrutto, more than 600,000 photos have been sent in five years and there are more than 20,000 active listings on file.

Allo Realty, Inc., has been doing business in the Port St. Lucie area for the past five years.

But according to Langford Park officials, it is wiser to sign up your kids on Saturday, then have everything squared away in time for the first practice, which is Monday night at 6 p.m.

An insurance fee will be required, as will the presentation of a birth certificate. There is one exception for the birth certificate – if a youth has already played football, he need only pay the insurance fee.

According to Herb Seal, the coach of last year's lower division Barracudas, only five starters will be lost – if the other 17 sign up. And since this crew finished tied for second place last year, lower division fans are in for a treat.

Bowlers' workshop session is planned

A special combined workshop meeting of the Martin County Women's and Men's Bowling Associations will be held Wednesday, August 16, 7:30 p.m. at Jensen Lanes.

All officers of leagues sanctioned through the Martin County associations are urged to attend, a spokesman said.

There will be a special slide presentation, changes in league rules will be discussed, and supplies for the coming season will be given out.

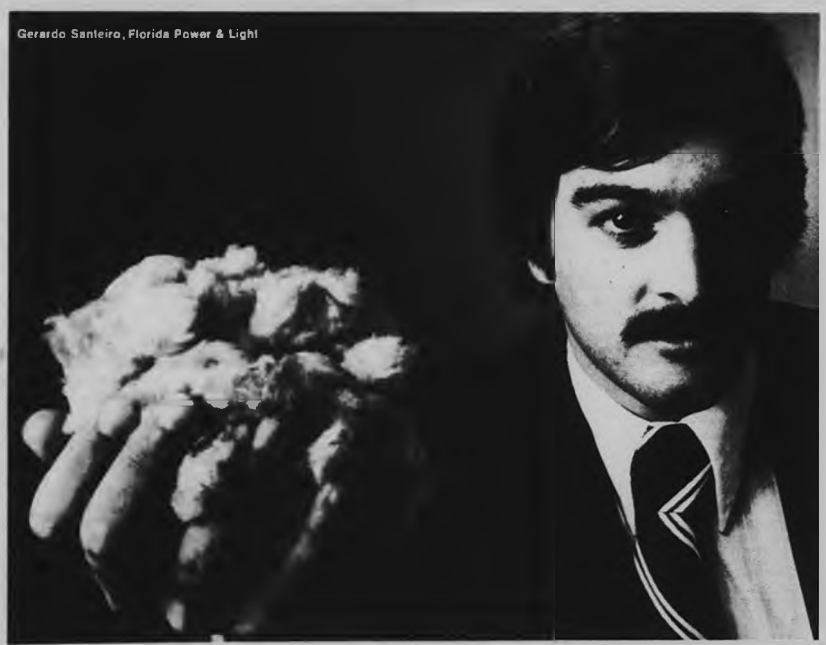
Put this in your attic.
And cut your cooling costs up to 30%.



It's insulation material. And it is the most effective barrier you can put between you and high electric bills.

FPL's Watt-Wise Living™ program recommends the R-19 level of insulation. Properly installed above your ceilings it can save you up to 30% on cooling costs, if your house is fully air conditioned. Such insulation can be blown in or installed in strips. And you'll benefit from it both summer and winter.

To save still more money, set your thermostat at 78°, weatherstrip your windows and doors, shade your windows and air conditioning units, and use light colors on the roof and exterior walls.

For more information on insulation and other ways to save electricity, pick up the free folders at your local FPL office.

Massive Mid-Port project is outlined for city council

BY BOB FRYER

Plans for massive development of the Mid Port section of Port St. Lucie, which is projected to house 5,503 persons by 1987, were previewed by the Treasure Coast Regional Planning Council last Thursday.

Since the project, to be built by General Development Corporation, is considered large enough to have a regional impact, the planning council and the Port St. Lucie city council must review it before construction can start. It was expected that on Thursday, the regional planning council staff would have a recommendation on the Mid Port project. However, staff members said GDC had been requested to provide additional information and that it would likely be November before the staff has time to receive the information, study it, and come up with a recommendation to the council. So, on Thursday, planning council members got just a preview of the Mid Port plans.

The project is to cover a total of 1,250 acres, all on the east side of U.S.1, and will straddle Walton Road, with most of the development to be on the south side of that road.

In phase one of the Mid Port development, GDC plans to build 657 single family homes and 80 medium density multi-family units. This, plus construction of all stormwater management facilities (which will consist of 490 acres of ponds and greenway swales), should occur between 1978 and 1981, generating a population of 1843 persons.

In conjunction with the above development, GDC hopes to break ground early next year, and complete by next fall, a 196,000 square foot shopping center, to be known as Village Green, at the corner of U.S.1 and Walton Road. Later, depending on success of the first phase of the center, 53,600 more square feet of shopping area is to be added to the center.

In phase two, from 1982 to 1984, development of 456 medium density (eight units per acre) dwellings and 412 multi-family (12 units per acre) units are anticipated, adding 2,170 more persons to the area. Also in phase two, a 29-acre office center will be started, a nine-acre office center will be built, and a church site and seven acre commercial tract along Walton Road are expected.

In phase three, from 1985-1987, 598 multi-family units are projected, adding 1,490 more residents.

By completion of the project, a 16-acre recreation park is to be donated by GDC to the city and developed. GDC also plans to give the school board a 14-acre site for an elementary school, and a 70-acre site for a middle school and high school.

After hearing the presentation, regional planning staff member David Maltby said the roadway systems for the project will get a very careful examination. He also was asked by Martin County Commission Chairman Tom Higgins to study the impact on traffic to and from the beach.

Business regulation draws fire, tabled

Regulations to control the opening and closing hours of business in Port St. Lucie drew fire in the second reading of the proposed city council ordinance Tuesday.

While the council agreed that some regulation was needed, exceptions to the regulations led to a four to one split vote on tabling the proposed ordinance after a motion to pass it failed by three to two.

Henry Baker, liaison of the Port St. Lucie Homeowners Association, objected to the ordinance on behalf of his group. He called it "an unwarranted intrusion on the right to operate business in an efficient manner."

The proposed ordinance sets three classes of business and three different sets of hours. Residential area shops would be under the seven a.m. to seven p.m. hours. The other two classes set openings for business and industry at 6 a.m. to 11 p.m., and 6 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Councilman Merle Anderson asked for a delay for more consideration as debate ranged from the audience to the councilmembers. Definition of exception ran the gamut from soft drink machines and automatic bank teller installations to whether or not Sandpiper Bay Resort would have to close between the hours of two a.m. and six in the morning.

Mayor Bill McChesney thought the ordinance should be left in general terms, restrictive to the point that persons wanting a variance would have to apply to the council in each case.

Councilwoman Lolita Kernohan thought the same and moved to pass the ordinance on second reading. When no one would second the motion, McChesney passed the gavel to Vice Mayor Mike Reeb to do it. (He continued, however, to run the meeting.)

After more debate, the motion was voted down, with Councilman Schuyler Sharpe demanding that the major exceptions be listed. Only McChesney and Kernohan voted for the ordinance.

Reeb said, "With three or four exceptions, like hotels, motels, banking, office buildings and such, we could clean this thing up." He said that while it was restrictive to a point, "we must plan our city."

Anderson then moved to send the ordinance back to the city attorney for rewrite, listing exceptions, and the motion passed, with only Kernohan objecting.

In other action, the council:

WITHHELD payment of a $380.78 travel repayment to former city manager Elmer Cox until an itemized statement is presented.

HEARD Herb Tschudy, president of the Port St. Lucie Civic League, explain that the $8,818 in attorney's fees to process the suit by Sandpiper Bay, Inc. over commercial zoning, should be made public so that the "people know that litigation is expensive." Tschudy added, "You pay the price. We need to weigh the merits of action against the cost."

PASSED on second reading the rezoning of an area from E-1 to PUD at the request of Hasco Realty.

Budget meeting is Friday morn

The Port St. Lucie city council will see the revised budget for the 1978-79 fiscal year on Wednesday, and will discuss it Friday morning at 9 a.m.

Councilmembers agreed to meet in the morning, and then adjourn to return for the city manager interviews in the afternoon, beginning at 1 p.m.

Council wrestles with budget, cuts

BY BOB FRYER

Efforts to come up with a millage rate figure for city taxes during the coming fiscal year were fruitless when Port St. Lucie council members met last Friday for their second review of the proposed 1978-79 budget.

"This is the worst budget meeting we've ever had," commented an obviously exasperated Mayor William McChesney on Friday, after several of his fellow council members changed their minds on budget items they had agreed upon three days earlier.

As of last Tuesday, when the council first examined the proposed budget, the budget was trimmed from $1.4 million to $1,079,000. On Friday, several more items were cut from the budget. Early this week Gerald Van Patten, city treasurer, noted that he has not yet computed an exact budget figure to reflect the changes made Friday, but said the new budget will likely be around $1 million. And, he is predicting that the tax rated charged residents this coming year will likely be at or close to last year's 1.5 mills.

One of the changes made on Friday were to salaries for several top city staff members.

In preparing the budget, Van Patten had proposed salaries for himself and Building Department head Ralph LaChance that would have amounted to a 21 per cent raise over what they were making at the start of the 1977-78 budget year. For LaChance, it represented a raise from $15,170 (including social security) to $18,361. And Van Patten, who started the fiscal year at $15,100 and was raised to $15,923 in February, asked for a salary of $18,363.

Also proposed in the first draft was a 15 per cent hike in the amount the city pays Spencer Gilbert for legal services. Gilbert said the requested increase from $22,500 to $24,150 would represent no increase in his compensation, but would represent a compensation in his overhead expenses.

At the first budget review session, all of the above increases were tentatively agreed upon by council members. But on Friday, Vice Mayor Mike Reeb said in digesting the budget he felt the salary increases were too high and made a motion to limit those salary hikes to 10 per cent. After lengthy discussion, the motion carried by a three to two margin, with Reeb, Merle Anderson and Lolita Kernohan for the measure, and Mayor McChesney and Schuyler Sharpe against it. A short time later, the council voted unanimously to keep city planner Mike Szunyog's raise for the coming year at five per cent, but added a provision for him to get a five per cent merit increase in six months.

Council members agreed on little during salary discussion, but did agree that once a new city manager is hired, he will be given the task of reviewing the city's salary grades and classifications.

In the first budget review, funds proposed for buying and developing new parks, including a 16-acre Midport park to resemble Sportsman's Park, were cut from the budget. Also cut then were funds for a number of improvements to Sportsman's Park. On Friday, Reeb suggested adding $50,000 to the budget for parks. A debate ensued then as to whether this would undermine the position of city officials who are soon to seek donation of city park lands from General Development Corporation.

Mayor McChesney criticized the suggestion as "loose budgeting" because there was no specific plan on how to spend the $50,000. Finally, the measure was defeated in a three to two vote, with McChesney, Sharpe and Kernohan against it, and Reeb and Anderson for it.

One item which seemed to generate agreement from all council members was a suggestion to take $50,000 from the city's reserve fund and add it to the $150,000 the council had saved last year for building a new city hall. By using that $300,000 as a down payment on the new city hall, it would leave about $350,000 to be financed. Council members agreed to this plan, with mortgage payments to be spread out over the next 10 years at about $47,000 a year.

There was talk of cutting $93,000 from the budget which had been earmarked for starting a city maintenance department. However, council members agreed to leave that item in the budget and wait until a new city manager is hired to give them an opinion about how fast such a department should be set up.

WATER SKIING is a popular summer sport in these parts, and it seems each weekend the rivers are more and more crowded with skiing enthusiasts. But like all things, there is a time and place for them. Narrow rivers, such as the North Fork in Port St. Lucie, aren't really designed for skiing, or for any boat traffic creating big wakes. So, if you've got a big or fast boat, take it easy along the narrow stretches so those in smaller craft don't get swamped and so waterfront lot owners don't lose land to wake erosion. mong the expenditures, other than normal ones necessary for running city, maintenance and repairs, are $18,000 for a bike path from the intersection to just below the igger, $2,000 for clearing land for rk, and $61,853 for land acquisition River Road. The city has been ting on the River Road project for several years, to establish an exit route in the event of hurricane or other disaster.

The status of Sewall's Point Road is still up in the air. The commissioners learned at last week's meeting. The document implementing the turnover of the road, from A-1-A to the north town limits, was supposed to have been sent to the state for formal approval. Attorney Tom Thurlow, however, said when he checked, he discovered it was still in the drawer of the county attorney.

The turnover would include the empowerment of the city fathers to control speed limits, rights of way and other policing powers. The document, however, doesn't relegate the responsibility of maintenance either to the town or the county, Thurlow said.

The issue of nuisance parking by fishermen on the east end of the Ten Cent Bridge was again brought up by Commissioner Earl (Scrappy) Crawford.

He said he had discussed the situation with officials of the Department of Transportation, and that he was told there are three alternatives: Paving the area and marking it out for parking spaces; closing it to the public and blocking it off, or posting no parking signs and ticketing violators.

"Personally," the commissioner said, "I'm against denying the parking to people who want to fish."

He said he plans to follow up on the matter, and try to come up with a solution satisfactory to all concerned.

JB Chamber will organize complaint bureau

The Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce Monday evening decided to establish a complaint bureau, to serve as a clearing house for people with complaints and questions about area businessmen.

The committee to be responsible for the service, president Fred Meeker explained, will have no policing or punitive powers, but will make information available to customers or other business people. Since Jensen Beach is not incorporated and has no Better Business Bureau, it is a service hitherto unavailable from any source.

The issue arose some months ago, when a letter of complaint was received about a business from an unhappy customer, by Chamber Executive Director Helen Richardson. At first, the board decided to ignore it, but later reconsidered. The complaint bureau will keep a file of such letters, and the file will be open on request.

Another big concern of the chamber, discussed at the Monday night meeting, is the sand-mining operation on Commercial Street, just west of the Florida East Coast Railroad tracks.

"We are not so much concerned about the removal of the sand," Chamber President Fred Meeker said, "but we are coming into a dry season. We are trying to find out from the county if there is an ordinance on the books that would control it."

Jon Chicky and John Heyburn were asked to check with the county on the issue.

The maps which the chamber ordered, with the financial help of the Jensen Beach Bank, are expected to be available in the next two weeks. Prepared especially for residents and tourists in this area, they contain insets of downtown Jensen Beach, parts of Hutchinson Island, and Port St. Lucie. Businesses may purchase them wholesale, and they will be on sale at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Plans were begun for Halloween and Christmas decorations, and the Chamber board voted to again try the "Try Jensen First" promotion which was initiated last year.

Meeker, who was one of the guests at the recent announcement luncheon revealing the purchase of the Sheraton Resort Inn by four Chicago businessmen, this week lauded the transaction.

"With the Sheraton under the dynamic leadership of these four (Lawrence C. Gabriele, Edward Villadonga, Terry F. Harrigan and Louis Pitzaferro) it is bound to become a more valuable part of our community, offering excellence in dining and other facilities," the Chamber president said. "We will appreciate their cooperation in looking at the possibility of expanded convention facilities, which along with other existing facilities would enhance the Jensen Beach area."

Teachers getting ready for Friday

Despite the heat and the fact that summer is still very much here, the teachers at Jensen Beach Elementary School are in a fall-like dither, getting ready for the first day of school on Friday.

On Monday, the faculty reported to school for a marathon series of workshops with Principal Dale Clark and assistant Principal Lou Rizzolo. Tuesday was occupied with a county-wide workshop for Martin County teachers from kindergarten through fifth grades, and Wednesday included a teachers' meeting led by Rizzolo and Mrs. Lyn Gladwin, on comprehensive skills for elementary students.

Today (Thursday) is "Panic Stations," wrapping up all the last minute details getting ready for the influx of students on Friday.

On the basis of pre-registrations, school will open with a total of 680 children, which school authorities feel presages a much larger full complement than last year. The peak enrollment in the 1977-'78 school year was 708 in the seventh month. And tradition has proven that the greatest number of students show up when winter residents arrive back from the north -- the first major influx in September and the second in November.

This is the earliest that school has begun for the fall term. Schools Superintendent James Navitsky explained that the school schedule was planned that way in order to get in the required number of school days before Christmas vacation, and to allow the students to get out earlier in the summer. The state requires 180 teaching days.

And why start on Friday?

"We felt it would give a day of necessary orientation, so that they could come in on Monday fresh and settled," the superintendent said.

At the high school, students have been registering Aug. 15 through today, Aug. 17. Children in the elementary schools don't have to register, according to a spokesman for the superintendent's office. If they've attended school in the county before, all they have to do is report for classes on the first day of school.

Those coming into the county school system for the first time, however, must be prepared with a birth certificate, a record of immunization, and they must have had a recent health examination. This is also required of children entering kindergarten or first grade, the spokesman emphasized.

NEW TEACHERS, Margaret Kopp, left, and Terry Brush, right, get acquainted with their new principal, Dale Clark, at Jensen Beach Elementary School, in advance of school's opening. Both are second grade teachers. Mrs. Kopp, who taught at Port St. Lucie Elementary School for seven years, is a native of England, and was brought up in Venezuela. Mrs. Brush is a native of Connecticut, and came to Jensen after teaching for several years in Jacksonville. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Editor is renamed to council

Richard E. Campbell, editor of The Mirror, has been named to a second term on the advisory council of the U.S. Small Business Administration's Miami District.

The appointment was announced by A. Vernon Weaver, administrator of the SBA in Washington, D.C., with the term lasting until May 31, 1980.

The volunteer advisory council is made up of businessmen and women throughout the southern half of Florida who work with the SBA to assist small businesses. Members make recommendations on SBA services to help small businessmen achieve goals and contracts in trying to improve the economic viability in the marketplace.

Campbell received his appointment at a meeting of the district council last Friday in Cypress Gardens.

Jane Hills has 4.0 for masters

Jane A. Hills, 1744 N.W. Spruce Ridge Drive, has completed the requirements for a Master of Science in modern educational systems degree from Nova University with a perfect 4.0 grade point average.

Mrs. Hills, who teaches reading at Indiantown Middle School, graduated from Robert L. Simpson High School in New York and received her Bachelor of Science in elementary education from Cortland College of Education, also in New York.

She has been listed in Who's Who in Elementary Education three times as a result of recommendations from her principal.

As part of the requirements for the degree, Mrs. Hills attended classes all day Saturdays for the past year.

'S SOME FANCY bird of a feather, but where's the rest of him? Howard seems to be more than a little taken aback by the lack of front to the ge waving around his favorite Indian River-front dock. Actually, Howard have trouble getting his feathers together. Those peacock plumes were y a couple of the haughty fowl up the road a couple of miles. (Staff photo by Latham)

Senate okays Inlet bill

The public works appropriations bill containing the funds for the permanent improvement to St. Lucie Inlet passed the Senate Thursday, and now has only to go to the Conference Committee before adoption, according to a spokesman for Sen. Richard Stone's office.

The bill, which contains the funding of waterways programs all over the country, contains $1.5 million for work on the inlet in the fiscal year Oct. '78-'79. It is the first phase of a $6 million program.

"I am pleased that both houses of congress have approved this project," Stone said in a prepared statement Friday.

"This important project will save lives and money, in the long run. This has already been endorsed by President Carter, and I am confident the money will be appropriated for 1979."

STILL NEEDS POLISHING, but the new Church of St. Martin de Porres, home for the Catholic parish, is already being used for services. The members may have to climb over cement sacks and around trucks, but the house of worship on Savanna Road is a triumph for the whole congregation. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Enough news to report!

This week we did receive some news...enough to report on. Cards and letters from our absent friends were received by various ones, and called in to your reporters.

Jack and Shirley Brittain, Bruce and Kathy Parmenter left Thursday afternoon for West Palm to meet friends with another boat to accompany them to the Bahamas. Friday morning, after travelling 14 miles, they had to turn back for the mainland because the other boat broke a window due to the rough seas. They stayed overnight in Fort Lauderdale and once more, early Saturday morning, continued on to the Bahamas by themselves.

"The sea was not quite as rough, but we did go through two or more squalls that were scary. (Let's have another cigarette.) Finally arrived at Freeport where, while waiting for customs, we saw schools of beautiful tropical fish around the boat. Had beautiful weather and a restful visit, as all stores and many hotels are closed due to off season. Went looking for shells - found none.

"Left for home Monday morning in a rough following sea, exciting and tiring. Took eleven hours to get to W. Palm customs office. Arrived in Venture Harbor approximately 6:30 p.m. (There is no place like home!!!!)"

While all this was going on, Ernesto and Unabelle Ravinet "babysat" with Parmenters' Mam'selle, which helped to ease their loneliness without Funny Face.

Fran Tener has returned from her visiting from here to Washington, D.C., and she reported on news that she found in her mail when she got home:

The Wienekes were in Banff ational Park and they said it was the most wonderful time of the year to be there and enjoy the profusion of such beautiful flowers.

Betty and Edsel Pfabe are making quite a trip in their new motor home.

Dorothy and Jim De Haseth also have a new motor home and they joined up with the Pfabes for a trip out west.

Joe and Amy wrote from the Holy City on July 22. They spent two days there, took the tour of the city and, although it was very, very hot, they saw all the sacred and biblical places.

Jack and Shirley Brittain are the proud grandparents of a lovely baby girl.

Several cards received from Lou and Bud Prew gave highlights of their stop-over in Nova Scotia where they visited Digby, the place of the highest and lowest tides in the world. They made our mouth water by telling of the wonderful lobster and fresh scallops they were enjoying.

They had an enjoyable week with Ruth and Bill Hennessey in Connecticut on their way to Nova Scotia, and they saw Vince and Ginny Stratford of Holiday Out when they were in Maine.

A call from Pat and Larry Belt said they are very, very busy, but are looking forward to the end of the season on Labor Day when they can relax and enjoy. Pat's mother, Katie, had not been very well, but was improving.

Betty and Al Jones were in Gainsville area for a few days, visiting a friend of many years whom they had not seen since they had moved to this part of Florida.

Jean and Gil Van Willigan wrote an interesting letter pertaining to their son John, who had a very interesting trip, along with his colleagues from several universities, as guests of the Soviet Academy of Science.

John brought back a huge piece of amber from Kiev, a piece of Russia from the Baltic coast. He also brought back five 1980 Olympic pins for Gil, which were found in a Moscow department store. Gil, having served on the Olympic Committee, was very happy over them. Upon John's return, the whole family took off for a three week visit in England and a brief stay in France. Jean and Gil send their regards to all in V.O.

Cost containment....

The health cost containment article in last week's Mirror sure had some everyone talking this week, and here's part of what they were saying:

Many mentioned how timely it was, as the National) AARP Newsl had a couple of pages on the same subject, stating that Claude Pepper's HR 13713 bill would allow home-bound patients to receive Medicare aid without hospitalization; Paul Roger's HR 8575 would permit hospitals to set up cost containment programs; Ed Kennedy's S 1301 bill would mandate cost control, and Herman Talmadge's S 1470 encourages doctors and hospitals to be satisfied with the amounts allowed by Medicare.

AARPers were urged to write their congressmen as there must be cost containment before national health insurance (That's just what local seniors have been saying all along.)

Then, other seniors pointed out that further reading of the article disclosed that regardless of claims by the Martin County Medical Society, health service costs are still rising twice as fast as the cost-of-living index. One way this might be alleviated, some said, would be to have more preventive treatment, which costs far less than treating an illness. Low cost physicals could be a start.

The National item said, even though many Americans and most seniors are being priced out of health care services, the proponents of national insurance are not in favor of cost containment. These two efforts should go hands in hand.

The USA is no longer the healthiest country does it have the best longevity record, so there's no reason to believe we have the best health service methods. Let's see how all these other countries do it....that's what the seniors are saying.

Another timely article appeared in a current weekly magazine. It pointed out that with so much health insurance money around, both public and private, it's no wonder that any and all increases in cost can be taken in stride by those fortunate enough to have many of fringe benefits. But that includes most of the elderly.

The article goes on to state that with it is easier to obtain hospital stays, and being in the hospital makes it easier for the doctor to see the patient, it is often, "You might go to the hospital for a few days, until this clears up." Such a system gives no incentive to reduce costs. The medical profession knows this and is opposed to any change, the article goes on to say, also noting that the average income for US doctors is 864,000 per year.

However, even though national publications are pointing out that the rocketing health costs is the number one problem of the elderly, the Martin County Medical Society seems us they are doing everything possible and a further study would be no help, as, "It is totally unrealistic to expect physicians' fees or hospital costs to remain fixed in the face of ever increasing inflation." However, is it also totally unrealistic for the elderly with incomes "spiked" at 1980 levels to pay ever increasing medical costs? They just don't have it.

If seniors want to do something more than talk, they'd better get going on letters to congressmen and the local medical society.

There are some early returnees from the northlands...they can hardly be called "snowbirds" at this time of the year, and they are still in time to easily get back on the Treasure Island congregate meal program, as there are still a few leaving. Here's what to do, as soon as you get settled: Call Betty Martin (334-8894) or Ernie Curwen (334-0756) for an application to be on a waiting list, then it'll be first come first served. Still serving 70, five days a week with two take-home dinners for the weekend meals.

CHAPTER EVENTS

The August picnic is still being discussed, as the 35 attending had such a pleasant time. Not mentioned last week, Dale Cassens also dropped by to say "hello" and enjoy the free watermelon and he told the group that funds for expanding home health care service wouldn't be easy to come by, but he'd push it for us. The picnic ended with the drawing of the Buy-A-Block raffle. First, No. 635, won a $20 gift certificate for Dorothy Brown of ORA, and second, No. 586 won a year's subscription to the Mirror for Barbara Capen of Sewall's Point.

Another attempt to hold a board meeting was made last week, and again it was "no quorum." Haven't been able to get nine good and faithful directors together since May 11. This has made it quite a problem to conduct some of the chapter business, such as pay bills that have to be approved by the board before checks can be drawn. Another attempt will be made at a special meeting called for 10:30 a.m. Thursday, Aug. 17, at the home of Director Lyle Burder, No. 37 Natalie Estates.

Previously, the chapter had been operated by the executive committee, composed of directors, officers and committee chairmen. But, to be strictly legal, the excom was discontinued and the board assumed direct operation of the chapter. It looks as though the standing rules will have to be changed to give control back to the excom as there has been no chapter business done since the board took over, whereas in other years, many projects were worked out during the summer and made ready for presentation to the members at the October meeting. Now, the board will have to start from scratch with projects, when it should be mostly concerned with nominations, elections, installations and triennial review.

This is a controversial issue that the members will be asked to vote on, so from now on until the October meeting, AARPers should be thinking about it and discussing it.

Our chapter has been considering changing the annual meeting from Nov. to May, for a lot of good reasons (see Golden Eagle bulletin). Now we have a precedent, for the latest Modern Maturity shows that National has selected the month of May for their installation of officers. So, maybe this matter will come up again for consideration. Members should think about it.

Also noted in Modern Maturity, there are now over 44 million Americans 58 and older, or over 20 percent of the population. They are urging members to each recruit one new person and very soon there would be 20 million AARPers. It might be better to strengthen the organization first so it can adequately take care of the present 13 million members without so many "snafus."

LETTERS FROM AARPers

Boyd Smith writes from New Jersey: "...weather atrocious, but have visited around and have some new ideas for the chapter."

Julia Aumiller writes from Port Royal, Pa.: "....too darn hot, even for congregate meals, but did take senior bus trip to Kennebec Grove."

Dot Beck writes from Beverly, Mass., enclosing a clipping showing 23 sites for congregate meals around Hartford, Conn.

Dot Snyder writes from Sewell, N.J., saying meals are about like those at Langford's, but they have bus service and have a "ball" on the bus.

Monday, Aug. 21: congregate meals (Mon.-Fri.) 4:15 at Langford Park, with recreation program at 3:30.

Wednesday, Aug. 23: Seniors Activities Club, 1 p.m. at Stuart Youth Center for cards and refreshments. (Every Wed.)

A graduate of the University of Kentucky, Jim studied fine arts at Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh.

"But it didn't take me long to find out that commercial art is where the money is made," he said.

Jim and his wife Miriam (Mim to all their friends) came to Stuart after living for several years in Great Abaco, the Bahamas, where he painted like crazy, selling everything as fast as he could paint.

"I still have more commissions than I can do," he told The Mirror.

Mim, whose talent is in the writing field, has done a manuscript on life in the islands, and it will probably be published "as soon as she gets around to editing it."

At Southeastern, Jim is creative director, designing books, brochures and annual reports for major firms all over the country. But in his spare time, when he has any, he is deep in historical research, seeking authenticity for his historical art.

"I get a lot of my material from Bessie DeBois, on area history," he said. Miss DeBois has authored articles to be found at Elliott Museum, on the pirate days of local waters.

Jim is full of ideas about historical subject material for his future work.

"One area in the colorful history of Jensen and Stuart has been overlooked," he said. "I'm going to do one on rum-running..."

HISTORIC ART gracing the walls of the Jensen Branch, First National Bank, brings back memories for old-timers. The painting, by artist Jim Baker, is of the old Al Fresco Hotel, which was a landmark between Commercial Boulevard and the Causeway in Jensen Beach, before it burned down. The painting, hanging behind bank manager Richard Grant, standing, and assistant manager Burton Blodgett, is one of several Baker paintings in the current exhibit. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

TIGIOUS SONGS were a favorite of youngsters ending an ecumenical church school in Port St. Lucie last k. Local Methodist, Lutheran and Episcopal members bined forces to have the school. TWELVE EVENTS in the life of Jesus Christ were drawn by Lee Ann Sams, second from left, during a church school in Port St. Lucie last week. Shown with the drawing are, from the left, school organizer Beth Ottesen, Lee Ann, and instructors Sally Turnbull, Diane Wiant and Linda Soo Hoo. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

BONNIE REDSTONE, at the end of the table, found keeping the attention of Port St. Lucie children hard to do when a photographer from The Mirror interrupted a lesson she was teaching at a church school. Although she is a Methodist, she's teaching Lutheran literature to the children as part of an ecumenical church school project. Sorry for the interruption, Bonnie. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

Church school sets ecumenical example

BY BOB FRYER

A recently completed church school in Port St. Lucie is an excellent example of ecumenical cooperation, according to the organizer of the school, Beth Ottesen.

"Last year was the first year the school was ecumenical, and we were overwhelmed by the response. This year, it's even better," Mrs. Ottesen said.

Teaming up this year for the school were Port St. Lucie United Methodist Church, the St. Andrew Lutheran Church, and Holy Faith Episcopal Church. Most of the classes were held at the Methodist church, with some at the Lutheran church, but teachers for the classes were provided by all three churches.

Mrs. Ottesen said a total of 30 teachers and teenage assistants participated in giving lessons and overseeing the youngsters, and she said the turnout was so good that her church, United Methodist, is now talking of a building program.

She said one experienced teacher and one inexperienced teacher were usually teamed up to work with the various classes of students.

"Last year, we used Methodist literature and this year it is Luthern," she said as she touted the ecumenical spirit of cooperation in making the school a success.

"We try to teach the beliefs we have in common and to emphasize our alikenesses. And we try to be a witness to the children and teach the children to be more accepting of their differences," she said.

YES of this little girl seem to say it all: she's fascinated by a lesson being during a church school in Port St. Lucie last week. Classes emphasizing ories, religious songs and religious art projects were all part of the ical school. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

FIT recompression chamber is a blessing to community

BY SALLY LATHAM

Everyone takes it for granted that Florida Institute of Technology is a center for education and research, and because of its location most specifically in the marine sciences.

Most people are also aware of the diving program, and the recompression chamber used as part of the divers' education. But few realize that the triple-control chamber, the largest of three owned by the college, is a community project, and as such is a life-saving medical arm of Martin Memorial Hospital.

"It has saved the lives of people suffering with osteomyelitis, gas gangrene and smoke inhalation, as well as those who have been rescued at sea," said Jim Woodberry, head of the FIT diving department.

It is so oriented to saving lives of anyone in need of the hyperbaric treatment, in fact, that the first four pages in the Recompression Chamber Operations Manual for Triple Lock and Single Lock Chambers, written by Woodberry, are an authorization blank to administer treatment, a patient record blank, and a Martin Memorial Hospital off-site treatment authorization.

The triple-lock recompresser was obtained in 1973, Woodberry said, through gifts from individuals and organizations in the area, the Association of Diving Contractors, J.Ray McDermott Divion of Maule Industries, Drs. J.Hart, E.Kinwall, J.Nellon and W.Spaur; NASA, a seagrant from NOAA, and the U.S. Navy. It represents an investment of $50,000 on today's market.

The purposes of acquiring the three chambers are spelled out in the foreward of Woodberry's manual: "the training of students, a medical treatment facility for the community, an emergency facility for treatment of diving accidents, and for limited research."

The units have been fulfilling those purposes well, Woodberry pointed out this week. The big triple and the single unit are kept in their own center atop the hill beside the college swimming pool, and the third, a two-chamber unit, is aboard the 58-foot FIT ship, LCMC, used for deep-sea diving missions.

The hyperbaric oxygen treatment and manipulation of pressure gauges is an exact science, as one learns in reading the manual. The guidelines range from the patient's or victim's present total physical and mental condition to what he was doing two, three, five and ten years ago.

The length of treatment in hyperbaric (having a specific gravity greater than that of the cerebrospinal fluid) oxygen depends on the acuteness of the disease, or in the case of a diver with the "bends," how long he or she was down, and at what depth. The pressure within the lock is controlled by experts on the outside.

Woodberry would like to correct a commonly erroneous public concept about the chambers on hand at FIT.

Many people call them decompression chambers, he observed. Decompression is the release from pressure. Recompression is a return to the pressure from which a diver has been brought up too quickly, and allowing a gradual return to the lower pressures of the surface at a rate the body can tolerate.

JIM WOODBERRY, at left, head of the FIT diving department, explains the interior function of the triple-lock recompression chamber which has saved numerous lives since it was installed at the college in 1973. Its healing potential is great, ranging from smoke inhalation treatment to cure of burns, and even speeding the replacement of severed limbs. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Of them all, the most immortal for Stann was Grantland Rice, the greatest of them all.

"Grantland Rice was like a father to me," Stann commented. "Bob Considine and I grew up together – we covered high school sports together, and when Grantland Rice was in our

Francis Stann didn't need "drawing in" for long. His name gained national respect as he accumulated an increasing number of honors – four times as National Sportscasters and Sportswriters winner, four times as winner of the Washington-Baltimore Newspaper Guild award, and as author of articles in Life, Look, Colliers, True, Sports Magazine and Sporting News, among others. He's also published one book, "Everybody's Football."

One of Francis Stann's major reasons for returning again and again to the Stuart area is his old friend Ernie Lyons, outdoor writer of national reputation.

"I was with Ernie when he named it (Stuart) the Sailfish Capitol of the World," Stann recalls with a grin.

Some of his experiences with Ernie, in area waters, would make yet another book for both of them.

"I was out with Ernie when the first American ship was sunk by the Germans, off the Inlet," he remembers. "The ship broke in two, and the men were brought ashore at Hobe Sound. Took 'em to a fabulous mansion down there, and the people brought them clothing and food. The men were giving their $600 coats, and the food included caviar..."

Shortly after that, World War II broke out, and Stann went into the U.S.Navy, serving for three and a half years in just about every theatre of operations engaged in the world conflagration – the North Atlantic, the west coast of South America and the Pacific. He later became military officer at Georgia Pre-Flight School, Welfare and Recreation officer and editor of the North Carolina Pre-Flight paper, and ultimately Administrative Assistant to head the Navy's Pre-Flight program in Washington.

Stann fulfilled his dream of retiring to Stuart in 1973, and has been combining his favorite sport of fishing with free lance writing.

They say that inside every sportswriter hides a frustrated poet. Francis Stann disclaims this, but if you look around his tidy and tasteful apartment, you'll meet that poetic alter-ego. Stann is an artist – his forte, ceramic animals.

As the philosopher might say: Old fishing writers never die – they just cast away.

Football practice begins

When the schools open in August, it means that football is about to begin. And in the wake of this week's opening of the schools, football has begun for 1978.

This past Monday night marked the first practice for youngsters aged 10-15, as the Martin County Junior Football League readies for the upcoming season.

Registration for football will continue through this week. If you want to register to play, report to practice tonight (Thursday) or tomorrow night at Langford Park.

New football players will need to present proof of age (birth certificate) and pay an insurance fee.

The U.S.A., Canada and Europe have H.Outers! News from Vince and Ginny Crawford say they visited the Alexander Graham Bell Museum in Baddeck, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, and Bell's great grandchildren still live at the old homestead there. They plan to visit Burt Reynolds' ranch on Monday, then on to West Palm to shop for gifts to take back with her, and possibly to the St. Lucie Locks. Christine already loves Florida, and she is only eight.

ARNOLD SILVIA of Lake Mills, Wisconsin, was selected Tuesday to become the new city manager of Port St. Lucie. Wisconsin man picked as city manager

BY BOB FRYER

Leonard Silvia, 35, of Lake Mills, Wisconsin, was selected from four finalists Tuesday to become the new city manager of Port St. Lucie.

Silvia is tentatively scheduled to report for duty on Sept. 15, thus filling the vacancy that has existed for that job since May, when former City Manager Elmer Cox was stricken with a heart ailment. Cox's attack came just hours after two council members had called for his removal from office. In the interim, City Treasurer Gerald Van Patten has been acting as city manager.

Silvia was the first choice of two council members (Mayor William McChesney and Mike Reeb) and third choice of three council members when an initial vote was taken on the council members' preferences for the four finalists for the job Tuesday. However, only one other candidate for the job, Kenneth Hammons, assistant city manager of West Palm Beach, got as many first place votes on the first tally. And, as council members discussed their reasons for favoring one man over another, Silvia came out ahead of Hammons. So, when Councilwoman Lolita Kernohan said she would change her vote to Silvia, Councilmen Merle Anderson and Schuyler Sharpe agreed to make the vote unanimous.

Silvia has served as city manager of Lake Mills, Wisc., from December 1976 to now, and prior to that was town manager of Ipswich, Mass., municipal management officer of the Massachusetts Department of Community Affairs, executive secretary of Norton, Mass., and campaign staff assistant for Hubert Humphrey during the latter part of 1968 and early part of 1969. Included in the latter job were duties as a speech writer.

Also, during 1965-1967, Silvia and his wife were Peace Corps volunteers in Brazil.

he was born in Attleboro, Mass.

Silvia told the council during an interview last Friday that if selected as city manager, he would want $34,000 to $35,000 for the job and that he would pay his own expenses to move his wife and two children to Port St. Lucie. He indicated he would live within the city limits.

The new city manager has a master's degree in public administration from American University and a B.A. in business management from Northeastern. He also took graduate courses at Marquette and Georgetown Universities.

"I feel I have a record that indicates I can get things done," he told the council last week, and added that he "grew up in politics, with my father a mayor and city councilman for 25 years."

He said he is anxious to move to the sunbelt and would seek other jobs in warm climes if not selected here.

Mayor McChesney said in evaluating the four finalists for the job, he felt "it was a tossup between Hammons and Silvia, but in looking at their backgrounds and education, I felt Silvia was stronger."

Double sessions

St. Lucie County schools will open for the new school year on Monday, Aug. 28, and in Port St. Lucie, where elementary school students will be on double sessions for the first time, teachers are bracing for the onslaught.

Last year some 980 kindergarten through fifth grade students were enrolled at Port St. Lucie Elementary, and on Monday, at least 200 more are expected to be there.

The rapid population growth has resulted in a decision to put the school on double sessions. As such, it will be the only school in the county on double sessions. And, since a special tax issue, designed to raise funds for a new elementary school, was resoundingly defeated in July, it looks like the double sessions will continue for several years. With the defeat of the tax proposal, no alternative funding for a new PSL school has been found and no money for building a new school was included in the school board's 1978-79 budget. Some school officials have said it may be several years before a new school is built and PSL Elementary goes off double sessions.

Teachers reported for duty on Monday, Aug. 21, and spent the day in faculty meetings and working to prepare their classrooms. For the balance of this week, many of them are attending workshops.

Mary Lou Willcoxon, a fifth grade teacher who has been teaching in the county for 15 years and at Port St. Lucie Elementary since it opened five years ago, says teachers at the local school are being divided into two shifts. However, unlike the children, who will either attend school from 7 a.m. to noon or from 12:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m., the teacher shifts are from 8:45 to 2:15 p.m. and from 10:15 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. She said with the growth in population, she doesn't expect classroom sizes will be much smaller than last year, even with the split sessions.

Students living within two miles of the school are assigned to the morning session and those living farther away are in the afternoon session. Motorists are asked by law and school officials to be especially careful at all times of the day in Port St. Lucie, since at all times some children will be out of school.

$756,900 bid on city hall okayed

Although the bid was slightly more than $100,000 higher than anticipated, the Port St. Lucie City Council agreed Tuesday to accept a bid of $756,900 from a Fort Lauderdale firm for construction of a new city hall.

It was expected that five or more bids would bid on the project. In fact, a one week delay in opening bids was approved last week in order to allow late bidders. But on Tuesday morning, when the deadline passed, only two bids were in. The first was from Ackerman, Inc., of Lake Worth for $756,100, and the $756,900 bid was from Gerraud and LaRoche, Inc., of Fort Lauderdale. The latter firm was awarded unanimously for the job.

Last year, before plans for the new city hall were drawn or an architect was selected, then City Manager Elmer Cox predicted the total cost of the building, including landscaping, fixtures and parking lots, would be about $750,000. However, after Fort Pierce Architect Hank Riegler was hired to design the facility, he estimated that the building could be built for $500,000 to $550,000. Then, a few months ago, after original plans for police department space were removed from the drawings, a new estimate of $650,000 was made by the architect.

Most local newspapers carried stories about Riegler's $650,000 estimate being $100,000 higher than his earlier estimate, Riegler noted Cox's original prediction of $750,000 and said his estimate was $100,000 lower than the original estimate. At that time, he said he was very confident the cost of the city hall would not go higher than his $650,000 estimate.

Now that the bids came in Tuesday, Riegler blamed the press for being at least partially responsible for the higher than expected bids.

"The general contractors have had a hard time getting subcontractor bids. The press has led people to believe we had a hard time and thought they'd be harassed by the city council. This has had a disastrous effect," Riegler said, adding that the subcontractors had been misled by the press and stating that he did not feel he had had undue problems with the city council in working on the city hall design.

However, Ronald LaRoche of the firm that won the bid approval, said the reason for the higher than expected bid was "really not because of the non-competitive situation (with subcontractors) at all," and added, "If you rebid, you wouldn't do any better."

LaRoche said his firm had not encountered any exceptional difficulty in getting subcontractors to bid on parts of the city hall job, and that the response from subs for city hall was similar to the response when his firm bid on a Southern Bell exchange office on Hutchinson Island. His company won that bid, he noted, and pointed out he completed his contract on time.

The contract for the city hall building, which is to contain about 13,000 square feet of office space, provides for completion of the job within nine months of starting it, and provides a $250 a day penalty for not meeting that schedule.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the new city hall, which is to be located on a 14-acre tract at the corner of Airoso and Port St. Lucie Blvds., is set for noon on Tuesday, Sept. 29.

LaRoche said his bid is for a lump sum contract and he expects no cost overruns.

Two items that are part of the bid that were exceptionally higher than expected are the air conditioning and electrical work, which are bid in excess of $200,000.

It was decided that the general contractor and Riegler will try to see if the air conditioning and electrical subcontractors can do their jobs for less.

In addition to blaming the press for a lack of subcontractors interested in the job, Riegler blamed the high bid on the city hall for a rapid recent rate of inflation in building materials for upping the price.

Windmill Point rec center is open in PSL Ceremonies marking the official opening of the Windmill Point Recreation Center in Port St. Lucie were held last week.

Windmill Point is a new self-contained neighborhood west of the Turnpike and 1½ miles south of the interchange, which will have 305 single family homes built around a central recreation facility which serves only residents. Nearly all the home and homesite packages have been sold, according to Tore DeBella, assistant vice president-national housing sales.

The 3,711 sq. ft. clubhouse consists of a 25x50 swimming pool, four shuffleboard courts, two tennis courts, a full kitchen, manager's office, banquet room and meeting room. It is located on Kentwood Road and Tulip Boulevard.

Windmill Point construction was begun in mid-April and January, 1979, is the anticipated completion date.

Adoption of the self-contained neighborhood concept represents "a new way of doing things" for General Development, DeBella said.

"Too often urban sprawl leads to a loss of neighborhood identity. We're using 20 years of experience as a community developer to encourage a closeknit feeling among residents that today's suburbs often lack," he explained.

A property owners association will assume responsibility for upkeep of clubhouse facilities and the surrounding greenbelt when all homes are deeded. Members will be assessed $120 annually.

A half-mile from the project, GDC has sold land where a convenience store is to be built.

Windmill Point is offering the full spectrum of General Development homes priced from $39,000 to $55,000, including homesite. Lot sizes vary depending upon location, with 80 by 125 feet the minimum.

Founded in 1958, Port St. Lucie today has nearly 12,000 residents.

RIBBON CUTTING--The new Windmill Point recreation center in Port St. Lucie was officially opened last week as General Development Corporation President William R. Avella cut the ceremonial ribbon, as County Commissioner E.E. Green and Port St. Lucie Mayor Bill McChesney looked on. Many local dignitaries attended the opening reception.

Zoning approved for Smithport Mall

Developer Peter Smith of Fort Pierce moved one step closer to his goal of building a 168,000 square foot shopping mall on U.S. 1 near Port St. Lucie Tuesday when county commissioners voted four to one to approve a zoning change for a 22-acre tract.

The change is in zoning is from agricultural use to B-3, which permits shopping centers.

The mall, to be known as Smithport Mall, is to be completley enclosed and is to contain 62 shops. A major supermarket and a large department store are planned, but Smith's representatives would not disclose the names of prospective tenants, saying Smith has had tenants stolen away from him before by announcing them prematurely. The estimated cost of the project is $8.6 million, according to a statement Smith made last month.

The tract has some frontage on U.S.1, then "wraps around behind the Village Square Shopping Center," Smith said.

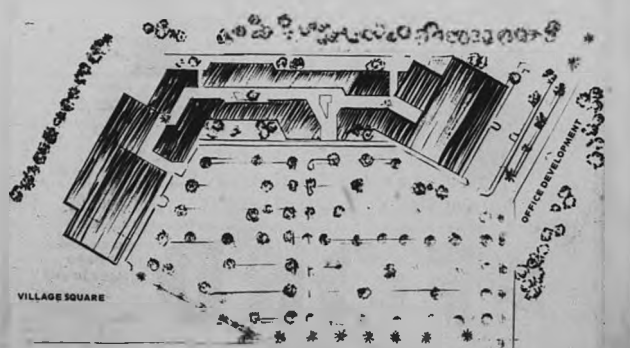
County Building and Zoning Director Al Thomas said the next step is for the developer to submit a site development plan.

"The site plan review committee will look at it to see that it meets county specifications and will make recommendations or comments about the plan. Then it will be about four weeks after the committee review before it would go to the county commission for approval or rejection," Thomas said. He and county engineer Mark Baggett and county area development coordinator Gary Ament are on the site plan committee.

Speaking for Smith Tuesday were his attorney, Gerald James, and the project architect, Hank Riegler.

Riegler noted that he has spoken with state department of transportation officials and that they indicated when 8,000 cars a day were generated by the mall, a traffic light on U.S.1 would be needed. Attorney James assured the commission that when that happens, Smith will pay the expense of installing the light.

Nobody spoke against the mall during the meeting and County Commissioner Ed Enns, who voted against the zoning change, did not state the reason for his vote.



The Jensen Beach Mirror

VOL. 19 NO. 32 AUGUST 24, 1978 24 PAGES - 15¢

LOOK OUT HEAVY-WEIGHTS entering the Jensen Beach Causeway. Both the Highway Patrol and the Sheriff's office are on the watch for sand trucks using the causeway to transport the blowy stuff to the island. Hal Murphy, representing the Highway Patrol on left, and Ron Cucchiara of the Martin County Sheriff's Department are alert to the traffic of trucks carrying sand. They stand next to the easily-read weight limit sign which Commissioner Frank Wacha had replace (after the first one had been removed) on Tuesday. The Highway Department is equipped with portable scales to check load weights, and the Sheriff's Department has been issuing citations to truckers who have failed to cover their sand loads to keep it from flying. The street at the intersection is already half-filled with sand spilled from the vehicles, as can be noted in foreground. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

CONTROVERSIAL SANDPILE on Commercial Street, west of the railroad tracks, is brewing a sandstorm from irate downtown businessmen. The tract, being used as a source of sand for development and beach enrichment, is not only an eyesore but the cause of the unsightly drifts escaping into the streets and sidewalks in surrounding areas. The Chamber of Commerce wants it fenced. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Chamber raising a sandstorm

BY SALLY LATHAM

The Chamber of Commerce is raising sand about too much of same, and as a result, County Commissioner Frank Wacha took steps to do something about it.

Sand, the Chamber members say, is alright in its place, but that place is not in the streets and eyes of people occupying the heart of town.

The source of irritation is the sand-mining operation immediately west of the railroad tracks on Commercial Street. Trucks have been hauling it through town and across the Jensen Beach Causeway, which, Wacha contends, is and has been in violation of the allowable load limits.

"The commission adopted a resolution setting the load limits," Wacha said. "We've asked the sheriff's department to enforce the load limit on the causeway. We should license these people to use the causeway, and use the money to repair the damages caused by their traffic."

The trucking concern removing the sand is the Glen Blackburn Trucking Company of Fort Pierce, according to the records of County Engineer James Winn. The owner is listed as the "Erskine Florida Properties," with an Outdoor Resorts of America address. For the past several months, however, people trying to reach Erskine by telephone have been told the number "has been temporarily disconnected at the customer's request."

Wacha said the contractor had been granted permission to transport the sand to his property, after presenting a plan for improvement.

"But it seems he has gone far beyond that plan," Wacha said.

Meanwhile, the Chamber is chafing about the sand that has blown and drifted into the streets and sidewalks, from the unprotected mining area.

"They say they won't sweep the streets until after the next hard rain," Chamber Executive Director Helen Richardson said Monday. "It's too bad that as nice an area as Jensen Beach should have to be so sorry looking."

S-P now under fed flood program

The Town of Sewall's Point is now officially in the National Flood Program, and residents are eligible for the low-cost, government-subsidized flood insurance, Mayor Ed Gluckler reminds homeowners.

The insurance eligibility became effective Aug. 15, a major triumph for the little incorporated community. Gen Don Graham, a Sewall's Point resident, has been working for nearly five years on behalf of the Commission to get the town qualified for the federal program, initiated by Congress in 1968. The program is the only one through which homeowners may get insurance against flooding, since private insurance companies won't cover flood damages.

Under the new program, Mayor Ed Gluckler points out, the maximum coverage is greatly extended. As first written, the maximum allowable coverage was $35,000 for a single family dwelling. It is now $185,000. Additional coverage for personal property is also available.

Rates for new construction and additional coverage for those holding insurance under the emergency phase of the program will be based on risk, as established by the rate map which was derived from federal studies of flood risks for the town. A copy of the map is on display at the Town Hall.

The extent of risk is determined by combining the first-floor elevation and the possible flood elevation for a one-in-a-hundred year flood as shown on the insurance rate map.

Two years ago, while the necessary groundwork for getting accepted in the federal program was going on, the Town of Sewall's Point began requiring that all new construction must have first-floor elevations sufficiently high that the owners are now eligible for reduced rates on all their coverage, both for the amount now held under the emergency program and on that which has just become available.

Owners of older homes which are lower than the 100-year flood elevation may continue with the first maximum increment with no change in rates.

Gen Graham, as insurance coordinator, urges residents to take advantage of the newly-available coverage through their insurance agents. People seeking further information about the program may call the Federal Insurance Administration toll-free at 800-424-8872.

Bank, insurance, CPA keynote center

The first phase of a new, major shopping center, located on the northeast corner of U.S.1 and SR 707A (Commercial Street), was announced this week. The 35-acre shopping center's first tenants will be the Stuart National Bank's fourth branch facility, the home offices of Hartman-Tilton-Wilson Insurance and Hartman-Tilton-Winters Insurance, and the offices of CPA Chris Bentley.

The first phase will be all in one, colonial design building that will contain 13,000 square feet of space on two acres.

The design of the building will have a facing Jack Williams Way, a road that bisects the 35 acres and ties in with Main Avenue at the rear of the property. The road is now under construction by Dickerson, Inc.

The bank branch will have approximately 3,300 square feet of lobby space, safe-deposit boxes, a night depository and five drive-in windows.

Stuart National now has two branch offices in operation, one at Indian River Plantation and the other at Monterey Plaza. A third is planned to open at 1500 East Ocean Blvd. in December. Its main office is located at 301 East Ocean Blvd. in Stuart.

The insurance companies, who now have their general offices in the Bessemer Building, will have 3,000 square feet of space in another wing of the building. The branch office in Port St. Lucie also is moving to a new building that is being constructed across U.S.1 from Spanish Lakes.

The certified public accountant's office will contain about 1,000 square feet of space.

The new location was selected for the Stuart National branch, according to Jack Williams, president, to serve the residents of Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie, and will be the first banking facility located on the federal highway north of the Roosevelt Bridge.

The development group is a partnership made up of Ransom Tilton, Ralph Hartman, Jr., Norm Wilson, Jr., Al Winters, Chris Bentley and Dr. Ralph Baker.

Tilton told The Mirror that he was planning the remainder of the 32 acres for a super market, drug store and shops.

"The location of U.S.1 and Commercial Street will some day be the center meeting place of Port St. Lucie and Jensen Beach development. We feel the time is right to be the first major shopping center at the site," Tilton said.

Maggy yells uncle on donations

Maggy Hurchalla, Democratic incumbent for the Martin County Commission, has pulled a switch not often seen in politics. She's asking "angels" to stop sending money.

Mrs. Hurchalla, who is opposed by Ed Geary, Stuart dentist whom she bested in 1972 for the seat, is a strong conservationist, to the point that she has drawn strong opposition from area builders and developers.

Her most recent attack came from Jensen Beach Realtor Ransom Tilton, a Geary supporter. Tilton claimed that Mrs. Hurchall is "against projects that are good for Martin County."

Most of the projects the only woman commissioner has opposed have had to do with land use and ecology. Now, she apparently has included money in her crusade against waste.

"I am a practical politician," she said in her statement last week. "I realize the importance of spending money in an election to put my message before the people. At the same time, I have a horror of wasting money, and there is a limit to what can be usefully and effectively spent in a primary campaign.

"I have been overwhelmed by the financial support I've received. Over 1,000 Martin Countians have given to my campaign, as this point, it is time to say PLEASE STOP SENDING MONEY! I have enough to run a strong campaign, and I will."

In Mrs. Hurchalla's bi-monthly financial statements, which law requires from all contested candidates up to the time of the election, her long lists of contributors have been made up mostly of private citizens, whose donations have run the gamut from $1 to $100. To date, few have exceeded the ceiling of $100.

Mrs. Hurchalla, in her Monday financial report turned in at the Supervisor of Elections office, listed a total of $6,443 in donations. The largest one, of $200, came from D.J.W. McCarthy of Lake Park.

Her only competition in the commission race, Dr. Ed Geary, reported $4,974 in contributions from 75 backers. Gifts of $200 each came from Fred Taylor, vice president of Indian River Plantation, Dr. Larry Holder, and real estate man John Mann. The largest number of donors on Gear's list represent real estate interests.

Peggy Robbins, who is running to succeed herself as supervisor of elections, reported $1,729 in contributions. Largest contributors were Clarence Whipky, $80, and George Caswell, $85. Most of the gifts were in the $20-$40 range.

Elsie Hutton, who is running against Miss Robbins, reported $1,907 in donations, the largest being $100 from Richard Dungey.

Rex Andrews, one of two candidates running for the county commission seat which will be left vacant by Dr. William Myers, received $1,230, with the largest donations of $100 each coming from Raymond Hunton of West Palm Beach and Julian Andrews. His opponent, Bud Bagwell, reported $775, $600 of which was his own contribution. Joe Sandor gave $100; Henry Burrben, $25, and Francis Gibbons, $25.

Pete Marovich, candidate for the school board, reported $710, with $200 coming from Indiantown Dairy Farms, Inc., owned by Norman Hails.

Norma Miller, another school board candidate, listed $715, the largest fits of $100 each from Stew Hersey and Ann MacMillan. Mildred Perry, who is running against Miller, had one contribution of $100, and another of $50 from Charles F. Kehoe. Moira Moore of Jensen Beach received a total of $360, including $100 each from Lon Tyson and Aymar Johnson.

Owens, Hendry fn Gunter campaign

William Owens of Stuart and Al Hendry of Jensen Beach have been named Martin County co-chairmen for the reelection campaign of State Treasurer-Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter.

Rose Washburn, a veteran newspaper advertising salesman, has been named classified advertising manager of The Mirror Newspapers, it was announced this week by Richard E. Campbell, publisher.

Mrs. Washburn and her husband Al have lived in the Jensen Beach area since 1969, and reside at 13301 Indian River Drive. They have three children.

She was active in real estate sales until joining The Mirror classified staff in May. Her newspaper experience includes years of sales with the Mount Kisco (N.Y.) Jensen arch still stymied

The Jensen Beach Arch, which has been a political bone of contention for the past year, is getting no nearer to completion, despite pressures exerted to get fresh contractual blood into the operation.

The structure was damaged in November of 1976, when a woman was killed as her automobile struck the town's most famous landmark on 707, downing the arch and demolishing one of the towers.

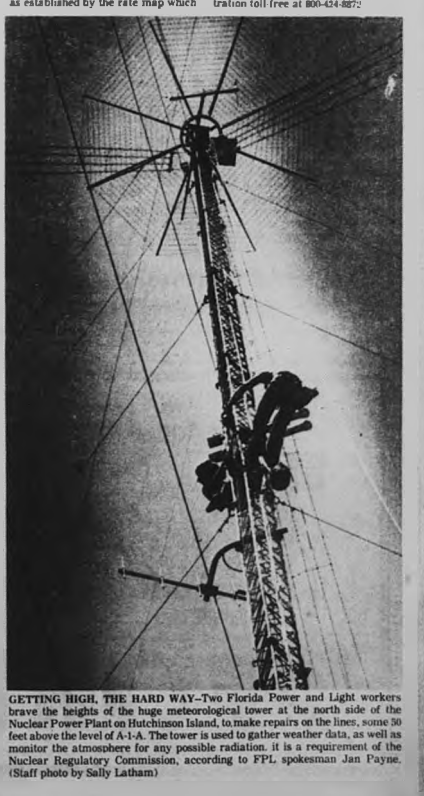
The woman's insurance company, American Reserve Insurance, hired a contractor, Diversified Construction Systems of Dade, Inc., to do the work. But apparently the bid was too low, and the firm walked off the job when it was half-finished.

In June, on pressure from Commissioner Frank Wacha, the county commission voted to fire the contractor, sue him for non-performance, and re-let the bids. The bid deadline is Sept. 13.

The contractor, however, disclaims any basis for suit. He contends his firm has every intention of completing the job.

The commission, however, contends the firm has had more than enough time to finish and comply with the terms of the contract. The contract was awarded in August of 1977, and, says Wacha, a year is far too long to take for a comparatively simple rebuilding and repair job.

Wacha is all for suing the insurance company, the contractor and the insurance adjuster, Carle Bentley. The suit will be filed as soon as the new bids are in.



GETTING HIGH, THE HARD WAY--Two Florida Power and Light workers brave the heights of the huge meteorological tower at the north side of the Nuclear Power Plant on Hutchinson Island, to make repairs on the lines, some 50 feet above the level of A-1-A. The tower is used to gather weather data, as well as monitor the atmosphere for any possible radiation. it is a requirement of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, according to FPL spokesman Jan Payne. STUDENTS of the Tri-County Rehabilitation Center look on as assistant to biologist Ross Witham digs deep in search of green sea turtle eggs at Stuart Beach last week. Witham collects the eggs and takes them to more protected grounds at the Blake of Refuge. When the hatchlings emerge, they're kept in pools until they're about nine months old and stand a better chance of survival. Then, they're released into the ocean. Witham is shown above pointing, and in the foreground in Dan Smith, a worker at the rehabilitation center. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

UFO ON INDIAN RIVER—This Unidentified Floating Object, a barge laden with pilings, mysteriously appeared Monday afternoon mid-river, opposite Ocean Breeze Park, and nobody wants to claim it. The Department of Transportation doesn't know where it came from; the county highways department doesn't know and neither does the Coast Guard. It was still sitting there just outside the channel as late as Tuesday evening, giving boaters reason for extra caution as they pass that section of the river. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Millers are feted on 50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Miller of Skyline Drive were honored by some 50 friends and neighbors Saturday, Aug. 19, at a 50th anniversary party in their honor, at the Women's Association clubhouse, which Mrs. Miller was largely instrumental in getting constructed.

A theme of yellow and white was used in the decorations. Mrs. Miller wore a flowing yellow chiffon gown, with yellow corsage.

The couple said their vows fifty years ago at the Concourse Plaza in New York City. She is the former Marie Coulter. The Millers lived in New York, where he was a Certified Public Accountant and an officer with the Continental Insurance Company. They have one son, Edwin Jr., of Cranford, N.J., a mechanical engineer, and a granddaughter Christine (Mrs. Tom) Willoughby of San Francisco, Calif.

Their son Ed Jr. and his wife flew down to attend the anniversary party.

Since coming to Jensen Beach 17 years ago, both Mr. and Mrs. Miller have been active in community life. She was one of the founders of the Women's Association, and served as its president for six years. She also served on the board of trustees. For a time, she also acted as secretary for the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Miller is a past president of the Jensen Beach Lions Club, and a director of the Chamber.

Out of town guests at the Golden Wedding party were Mrs. Katherine Kingston, William and Joseph Kingston, all of Palm Beach.

Schuler art to be featured

The paintings of Klaus K.Schuler, an industrial designer at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, will be featured by the Art Associates of Martin County at First National Bank and Trust Co. of Stuart, during the month of September.

A native of Greifswald, Germany, Schuler came to this country as a child when his parents moved to Huntsville, Ala. His father was one of the German scientists employed in the U.S. space program. Schuler graduated from the University of Alabama, where he majored in commercial design.

In 1967, the artist transferred to Cape Kennedy to work on the Apollo Saturn program. Seven years ago, he took up watercolors and acrylics as a hobby, and since that time he has won several awards in shows throughout the state.

Schuler, his wife and three children live in Stuart.

AL ESTATE RULES OF THUMB

STION: A while back in your um, you used the phrase "seven the annual gross income." I also seen brokers' statements g a price of "five, six, seven, or times the gross" and have heard and say, "I wouldn't pay over times the gross for any erty." What's this "seven times ross" all about?

WER: The phrase refers to a of thumb commonly used in ating income properties. If a erty has a total annual income income) of $10,000, for ple, then by using seven times the user estimates the erty a value to be $70,000. For five times gross, the estimate would be 0 and so forth.

gross multiplier is a useful and ple rule of thumb but also a very ful one, since it does not for many variables such as ion, financing, location, and tial for growth. It can vary ically from area to area. ding on the circumstances, one erty could be a bargain at nine les gross and another ld at two times the gross.

ne would like to discuss income erty values, please contact me. In meantime, don't rely too heavily ome-grown gross multiplier. Use ology and only as a quick guide discuss your investment s. Call me at 334-0747, or stop

EVERYONE'S A KID AT HEART, when it comes to flying balloons, especially jack Snyder, vice president and resort manager at Indian River Plantation. Jack was right in the thick of it when the Pineapple Gang put up 100 or so helium-filled flyers to rise, like the arrow shot in the air, and landing they knew not where. The fun will come when the cards attached to the balloons start returning from their trips. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

...ocal Red Sox miracle shattered

...t nobody ever heard of the First ...ptist Red Sox – at least not until the ...st 10 weeks, as they finished fourth ...the County Church League softball ...dings, then took the field by ...prise in the post-season tourna-...t. The Red Sox (9-3) headed into ...Monday night's clash with St. ...rtin's Church undefeated in ...ular play, but St. Martin's put a ...per on the Baptists' night, ...shing the Stuart squad 19-5 and moving to within one game of the championship.

St. Martin's, which will be referred to in this article as "St. Martin's Two," as there are two teams from that church, was to have attempted a comeback from the loser's bracket Tuesday night, in a game played after press time.

But if Monday's two games were any indication, the Red Sox had better count their blessings (no pun intended). St. Martin's Two beat their churchmates, St. Martin's One, 11-1 in the semi-final, before going on to hand the Red Sox their first loss of the tournament, in convincing style.

Robbie Phillips went 5-for-5 in the Red Sox game, as his teammates scored their most impressive victory of the season. St. Martin's built a quick 9-0 lead in the second inning and cruised on from there, getting revenge for an earlier loss to the Red Sox. That one, a 12-11 decision, was the only loss for St. Martin's up to Tuesday's final.

St. Martin's (10-3) finished third in the regular season standings, but knocked off the pennant-winners, St. Martin's One, in the tourney not once, but twice, while they in turn took care of the number two team, the First Baptist Cubs.

Perry breaks ground for satellite facility

Perry Cable Television, located on Britt Road, marked a milestone of progress Tuesday morning, with the groundbreaking for an earth satellite facility which will bring television programs direct to this area.

Wielding the golden shovels in the symbolic ceremony were John Perry III, president of the company; James Taglia, regional manager for Hughes Aircraft, and Robert Miller, vice mayor of Stuart. Also in the host group were Chuck Locke, Perry vice president, and Ted Huf, chief engineer for the cable concern.

The big "saucer," 30 feet in diameter, is being purchased from Hughes Aircraft, at a cost of approximately $40,000. Installation should be complete in mid-September, according to Locke. It will pick up television programs beamed in from the satellite 22,000 miles in space, and bring them direct to local viewers.

It will primarily benefit Home Box Office subscribers, Locke said, but it will also bring in major sports events from New York, later in the season.

Perry Cable's Channel 11, less than two years old, now televises the local news nightly from 6 to 6:30 p.m., and only recently began a new "Hot Seat" program from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. each Wednesday, involving live interviews with local people on local issues.

Plans are in the air for expanding the television programming in the early evening "in the near future," Locke said.

THE BIG SAUCER, a model of the earth station which will be built at Perry Cable Television, on Britt Road, to receive the satellite signals from out in space to improve and refine television reception in this area. The system, which will mainly benefit Home Box Office subscribers, will cost approximately $40,000. Hughes Aircraft is the contractor.

Mirror exclusive:

Summer Wind log a best seller? ?

BY SALLY LATHAM

Back in March, The Mirror ran a story that created quite a stir among lovers of the briny deep – about the planning of high adventure on the high seas for the family of Bob Rodman, for five years general manager of the Ocean Village on Hutchinson Island.

For the benefit of those who might have missed it, the article told of the dream-become-reality for Rodman, his wife Gale and their sundry children, and for Rodman's old friend, Gerry Hood. Six years ago, Rodman and Hood, while in their cups aboard Hood's former's live-aboard yacht docked in Dinner Key, Miami, made a pact. They'd long since been sharing dreams about sailing around the world, but the dreams kept winding up in the limbo where most good dreams fade and die.

This time, the two decided, they meant it. From that point on, the separate but equal paths of both were definitely aimed toward the same end – getting together the right craft, the vast store of information and gear now necessary for navigation, and the proper crew.

That Mirror story told of how Rodman had acquired the dream-boat, the 77-foot sailing yacht Hammer, renamed Summer Wind for the Rodmans' petite five-year-old daughter Summer, of how the Rodmans' children, ranging from 21-year-old Karen down to little Summer, went in training as crew members, and finally, of the triumphal sailing out of the Linkport harbor, stocked to the gunwales with provisions and prepared for at least two years of island-and-continent-hopping around the globe.

Last week, we got the first installment sequel, and another exclusive. During luncheon with Rodman's successor at Ocean Village, amiable Joe Krschnak, this reporter was handed a folder marked to my attention. It was the complete first installment of the Summer Wind's diary – covering nearly six months of first-person description of the trip, written in colorful and exciting prose that bodes fair to becoming a best-seller as sure-fire as Thor Hyerdahl's Kon Tiki.

It would be unfair as well as unwieldy to reprint it all here. That must await the completion of the trip, and publication of the book which can't fail to be a winner. Bob Rodman, a renaissance man of high calibre, writes as he does everything else he tries – excellently. The account thus far is a thriller.

It reached my hands, incidentally, via the liveliest courier of all time – Gale's mother, Rene Jacoby of Miami. Rene, a petite executive of a manufacturing company, has been kept busy during the past months flying back and forth between Miami and "her kids'" points of touchdown, air-lifting needed materials and occasional parts as needed. Rene is as much of the whole adventure as her daughter, son-in-law, grandkids and others crewing with them, and Capt. Gerry Hood.

As observed previously the saga-to-date can't be shared in entirety, but here are some teasers, to get you ready for the book when it is published. You can say you read it in The Mirror first.

"Sometimes I think I'm lucky – and then I don't," said our daughter Summer, 5, on the console perched by the set, four days out of Marsh Harbor, Abaco, bound for St. Thomas."

This sage statement, Bob goes on to explain, was made after the Summer Wind had been chased by the mean cold front that plagued the entire south in that un-tropical winter period, and both Summer and Gale had been suffering constant attacks of mal de mer.

"For over a year," Bob continues, "Gale and I had been telling her how 'lucky' she was to be able to sail around the world with us. At that moment she no doubt verbalized the unspoken thoughts of several others in our crew."

Life aboard a boat for anything longer than a weekend engenders an intimacy that either leads to love or bloodshed. In the case of the Rodman venture, it has obviously bloomed into a time-toughened love. Take his "cast of characters," for example:

Captain – Gerry Hood, alias Gerry Hood;

Mate – Dexter Baun, alias Dex, or Decky;

Owner – Bob Rodman, alias Twinkle Toes, or Action Bob;

Social Director – Voluptuous;

Art Director – Karen Rodman, ditto

Chief Biologist – Greg Rodman, alias Horizontal;

Token Teenager – Kim Rodman, alias Bermuda Schwartz, or Bionic Worrier;

Cheerleader – Summer Rodman, alias Motor Mouth;

Engineer – David Rodman, alias Diesel Dave or Bat Guano.

Gerry's father-in-law, a wonderful guy by the improbable name of Jack Hammer, isn't listed in the "cast" because he left the boat at Panama. Jack, however is credited with providing an "incredible" repertoire of menus for long-distance sailing, and educated Gale on provisioning.

All kinds of little snags and irritations initially accompanied the voyagers, but once out and emotionally geared to their new way of life, the vast remoteness brought out the best in the whole "cast," most of whom were weaned on a diet of ideas. One enlightening sample:

"Relaxing one evening in the cockpit under a sky full of stars, I suggested that conditions seemed ideal for a philosophical discussion which would transcend the banalities of our everyday intercourse. Dave and Greg (Diesel and Horizontal) argued over the origin of the universe for a while, but for some reason seemed unable to resolve the ultimate mystery. Greg said that he knew the answer but it was too hard to explain. Maybe tomorrow."

The journey, thus far, has not been without its harrowing moments – like the approach to Panama, when the top of the mast went to pieces in one fell swoop – stalling their trip in Colon while new parts were flown in – thanks to Rene – but Bob and Gerry have lived aboard boats since their teens, and little in the way of emergencies afloat can faze them. The thesis: if it breaks, fix it or do without.

Fast friends are made, by those who choose the big waters as their way of life. The Rodmans found their first kindred souls in the crew of the Tzigane, whom they ran into on Isla de Coco, off the Costa Rican coast. Turned out Bob and the Tzigane's owner, Joe Ensegnsparger, had known each other years ago, when Rodman was living in California. It's a small ocean, even if it is the Pacific.

The Summer Wind is now wending its way through the Marquesas, Society Islands, and thereabouts in that neighborhood of the vast blue "peaceful water." With luck, they'll hit New Zealand in late November, and find Australia in December or January.

Meantime, Bob promises, he'll keep in touch. Who knows: The Mirror might just fly out with Rene for a rendezvous or two to bring home a first-hand exclusive, before it's all over.

RODMAN, seated with tongue in cheek, studies the seaways of the Pacific ocean and his family crew are now plying, on the 77-foot yacht Summer Wind. Instructor is C.J. McIntosh, a South Beach man who knows. He and his wife sailed the Pacific around New Zealand. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

IRCC searches for housing

Because of the increasing enrollment of out-of-town and out-of-state students at Indian River Community College, a "housing search" is now underway. IRCC's Dean of Students, Leroy C. Floyd, Sr., requests that area residents and businessmen cooperate with the college's housing facilities efforts.

Persons having houses, apartments, trailers or rooms to rent or lease should phone or send pertinent information to the Dean of Students Office, IRCC, 3209 Virginia Avenue.

IRCC offers creative senior citizens' course

It's not too late to sign up for the Creation Expressions for Senior Citizens course being offered through the Continuing Education Department at Indian River Community College.

The class is designed for senior citizens, both men and women, who have an interest in the Fine Arts of Theatre. The student will gain expertise in as many theatrical fields as possible, including speech, costuming, dance, specialty makeups and emphasis toward individual creating, comig timing, acting, cohesiveness of the entire show.

The class will produce a show utilizing all the talents and techniques and become a part of the Nostalgia Follies of Indian River Community College.

Instructor for the course is Lenny Laden, a professional and talented entertainer. He has been with the college for five years and was instrumental in forming the original Nostalgia Follies group for the school. Laden is one of seven persons across the country who has been singled out by the U.S.News and World Report for outstanding contributions to society in areas which might otherwise be overlooked or ignored.

The Follies group has gained fame through the country, and articles have been written about the performers in U.S. News and World Report, National Observer, Indian River Life, Southern Living, among others, citing the group's entertainment to persons less agile than themselves. In addition to entertaining for a variety of clubs, the main thrust is given to entertaining the aged in convalescent homes.

Recently the students in the Nostalgia Follies set up a scholarship fund with the college's Foundation so that a highly qualified senior citizen, at least sixty years of age, may continue his or her education.

Prior experience in the fine arts of theatre is not required. Interested persons may register for the course by attending the class which begins Friday, Sept. 8, 2 to 5 p.m. in R-118 on the main campus. For additional information, contact the school at 464-3000, ext. 212.

FOLLIES--Hilda Laden and Lenny Laden, IRCC instructors, rehearse a number with class members for their next Nostalgia Follies performance.

$1,384,439 budget at 1.5 millsgets preliminary okay

BY BOB FRYER

A $1,384,439 city budget, which includes a 1.5 mill tax levy, was approved on first reading by the Port St. Lucie city council Tuesday night in a four to one vote.

A public hearing on the budget and tax rate will be conducted in City Hall at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 7.

Only Councilman Merle Anderson opposed the budget. He said he had no objection to any parts of the budget except the inclusion of $171,000 for a police protection contract with Sheriff Lamar Worrell. Anderson has long been a proponent of the city starting its own police department and favored a proposal to spend $120,000 for starting such a department. However, other council members voted against that item. The sum in earlier budget sessions included in the new budget figure is $50,000 earmarked for the new city hall. Of the $138,000 of that was raised last summer and placed in a special city hall account and $150,000 of the city's $1.3 million cash reserve fund will be used this year. The combined total of the two sums, $270,000, will be used as a down payment on the city hall.

A groundbreaking for the new city hall is planned for Tuesday, Sept. 26, and the structure is to cost about $750,000.

The general fund portion of the city budget for the coming fiscal year is $1,111,538, which represents a $274,526, or 24.8 per cent increase over the current general fund figure of $787,052. The total budget for the current year is $1,384,082. There is no change in the property tax levy, as last year's rate was 1.5 mills.

Although city council members voted at an earlier budget session to grant pay raises to 20 per cent, it appears some employees will be receiving slightly more than that amount. For instance, if the overtime figure is added to the salary and social security figures decided upon for City Clerk Sandra Krause, an 18.8 per cent increase in pay is indicated. The overtime figure in question is to cover hours when Ms. Krause works between 35 and 40 hours, as the normal city work week is 35 hours. Also, for council persons who work a straight salary without overtime compensation, computations indicate they're to receive a little more than 10 per cent. City Building Department head Ralph Chance is down for a 10.19 per cent raise; City Treasurer Gerald Van Horn is down for a 10.17 per cent raise and landclearing and refuse collector Gerry Melville is down for a 9.81 per cent raise.

Only one of five items proposed as budget additions to the city budget was given council approval. That is a maintenance department. A total of $7,000 is budgeted for creation for such a department. The four items rejected by the council are $13,394 for an assistant city planner, $130,000 for start-up of a city police force, $27,746 as a down payment on the purchase of two park sites from General Development Corporation, and $85,542 for development of a new Sportsman's Club-type facility in the Midport area. In rejecting funds for recreation and parks, council members pointed out that they hope to convince the county to chip in money for recreation and noted the city planner and attorney were slated to seek a donation of the park sites from GDC. City Planner Mike Szunyog said Monday, Aug. 21, that ameeting on the parks had been held but GDC officials made no agreement to give the city the parks.

Earlier in the summer, a large group of parents and coaches of Little League players attended a council meeting, complaining of dangerous and overcrowded conditions at the park and projected an even greater demand for recreation facilities in the coming year. The council seemed receptive to them then. However, last Friday, council members heard a complaint that Sportsman's Park workers were not getting help from Little League officials in field preparation or in moving bleachers. It was decided that, in the future, recreation department employees will not prepare fields on Saturdays.

Planning and Zoning Board member Ken Beckman suggested charging a user fee for recreation facilities and said, "Consider the great number of other people in the city who have no recreation facilities unless they pay handsomely for it at Sandpiper Bay Resort."

The council is also considering reinstituting a charge to the Little League for the Sportsman's Park light bill.

Though the general fund budget figure represents a 34.8 per cent increase over the current budget, the tax rate is to remain the same, due primarily to the fact that the city is anticipating a big jump in revenues from building permits and several smaller increases in other sources. For the 1977-78 budget, only $175,000 was anticipated from building permits. However, due to the boom, the city had received $308,000 in permit fees by the end of June. So, for the coming year, with the boom expected to continue, the council is figuring that permit fees should at least bring in $300,000.

Another area where revenues will increase is the FPL electric franchise, which is to jump from $85,000 to $120,000. Also, due to increased assessment values and the addition of new property on the tax rolls, the 1.5 mill tax levy is expected to produce $360,610 in the coming year, as opposed to $309,702 this year.

Lewis to speak at Chamber

Senator Phil D. Lewis of West Palm Beach, incoming president of the State Senate, will be the principal speaker at the 22nd annual meeting of the Fort Pierce-Port St. Lucie Chamber of Commerce at Sandpiper Bay, Friday, Sept. 15 at 7 p.m.

Lewis, who represents this area, will discuss his views on fiscal responsibility and upcoming legislation with county business leaders. He is a lawyer and served as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee during the recent legislative session.

New officers will be installed by the chamber for 1978-79 and outgoing president Louis I. Haynes III will present his annual report.

...ll to meet ...eak ground

The Port St. Lucie City Council will hold its next regular meeting at 8 a.m. Monday, Aug. 29.

Immediately following the meeting, a groundbreaking ceremonies for the new city hall, to be built at Port St. Lucie and Airoso Blvds., will be conducted.

Ground is broken for new city hall

BY BOB FRYER

After numerous delays, groundbreaking ceremonies were held Tuesday for the new Port St. Lucie City Hall

About 100 persons turned out for the occasion as city council members and several other officials lined up with shovels to ceremoniously toss a bit of dirt

The site for the new City Hall is a 14-acre tract at the northwest corner of Port St. Lucie and Airoso Boulevards

Though the price of the new building was at one time predicted as low as $500,000, the city council received only two bids on the building and last week voted to award the bid to Gerrard and LaRoche, Inc., a construction firm from Fort Lauderdale, for $756,900 Fort Pierce architect Hank Riegler is designer of the building, which will be a one-story concrete block structure that features movable interior wall panels and a council chamber that will seat 100 persons The facility will contain more than 13,000 square feet of space

During the groundbreaking ceremony, Mayor William McChesney pointed out that it was a committee of Vaughn Lewis and Clyde Blunt, who were members of the Port St Lucie Homeowners' Association, that recommended the city hall site. The 14-acre tract was purchased by the city in 1976 for $80,000

The mayor noted that the land is just about in the geographic center of the city, so it should be easily accessible to all citizens

During a council meeting Tuesday morning, the council formally voted to take $270,000 from reserve funds to be used, in part, as a down payment on the new city hall $120,000 of that sum was accumulated last year and placed in a special account for the city hall and $150,000 is coming out of the city's $1.3 million cash reserve fund this year

In addition to approving the $270,000 expenditure for the city hall, the council also decided to name First National Bank of Fort Pierce as the lead bank for securing a loan on the balance of the city hall expense It was stipulated that the Fort Pierce bank will have to let other area banks participate in lending the city some of the money. About $500,000 will have to be borrowed

It is expected to take about nine months to complete the building.

Avella dashes city hopes for free parks

BY BOB FRYER

Hopes of city council members that ural Development Corporation ld give several park sites to the t of Port St. Lucie were dashed sday when GDC president William ella addressed the council.

recent months city officials have n seeking donations of five park s from GDC, and have been icularly interested in acquiring a cre area at the corner of Midport d and Lyngate Drive for a rtsman's Park-type facility. City staff members met recently to see if GDC would donate the park lands Prior to the meeting, GDC officials said they would sell the lands to the city for the amount it has cost GDC to own the lands, without tacking on a profit. After the meeting, city planner Mike Szunyog said hopes of free parks were dim, but said GDC officials are still considering city staff proposals

Apparently, though, a final decision was reached, because Avella said Tuesday that the city is going to have to pay for at least four of five park sites the city is interested in.

He noted that park sites have been designated as such for years on GDC maps, and admitted that they have helped sell homes. But he noted that future commercial sites are also listed on GDC maps and that nobody would expect his firm to give away commercial lands

Therefore, he said, GDC will stick to its position that it will charge the city for all but one of the five prospective parks on the city's list. He further addeed that the firm won't reduce its asking price on a 5.6-acre tract which is part of the proposed 15-acre recreational park in the Midport area. All other potential park sites, including 10 acres of the proposed 15-acre Midport park, carried a comparatively low dollar per acre price tag. But the 5.6-acre piece has been designated as a commercial tract, and was valued as such when GDC officials computed an asking price for it. Avella stuck to that asking price, $48,732, when he met with the council Tuesday.

City officials have said in the past that without the 5.6-acre area, the remaining 10 acres adjacent to it, priced at $10,023, would not be sufficient for a Sportsman's Park-type facility

Other park sites the city and GDC have been negotiating on include a 9.5-acre tract at the west end of Prima Vista Blvd. for $5,852; a 6.2-acre tract on Swan Avenue a little south of Prima Vista and east of Bayshore Drive, priced at $3,852; a 6.4-acre piece at Bayshore and Exmore Street, priced at $3,957; and a 20.85-acre tract on Floresta Drive at Thornhill Lake, originally priced at $12,832

In the case of the last tract, Avella noted that several years ago GDC had offered to give the Thornhill Lake tract to the city with conditions it be developed within a certain time period. The city declined the offer at the time. Avella said since his company had made a commitment to give that land to the city in the past, he would stick to that commitment and let the offer of free land for Thornhill Lake park stand "Our offer is still open, whenever you're ready," he said.

Mayor William McChesney noted that homeowners around the lake are talking of forming a propertyowners association and have asked GDC to deed the land to them. The mayor asked Avella if he was considering giving the land to the homeowners group The GDC president replied, "I'd look to the city council for guidance in that matter."

Avella said the company policy on donating park and school sites is changing, but he emphasized that the change will be implemented in the future and that for older lands, it would be a cost precedent to begin donating them. He pointed out that in the proposed Midport development east of U.S.1, which is to occur over the next 10 years and result in a population of more than 5,000 persons, GDC has already pledged to give the school boards sites for an elementary, middle and high school

In addition to speaking about parks, Avella outlined GDC's development plans for the city during the next 10 years and cited numerous figures on the recent building boom in the city He predicted 1979 will be a very good year for development in the city

Although Avella didn't give the city any land Tuesday, he did deed 11 acres to the Port St Lucie Community Center later that afternoon, as a measure to fulfill an earlier company commitment to do so. (See related story.)

C PRESIDENT William Avella met with the city council Tuesday and said his n is not going to give the city several park sites which council members were ng would be donated. However, he said for the future Midport development f of U.S.1, school and park sites will be donated. Also, later on Tuesday, he ded 11 acres to the Port St. Lucie Community Center, for free, to fulfill an ier GDC promise. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

FIRST GRADE TEACHER Mrs. Nancy Crandall welcomed new students to her class with a blackboard message and a warm smile Port St Lucie Elementary School opened for the new school year on Monday, and is the only school in the county on double sessions. Although enrollment for the first day was only 855, compared to 960 at the end of the last school year, school officials say the new figure could change significantly over the next few days as more and more families return from summer vacations. ighting bills could become city headache recent notice from St. Lucie r) Property Appraiser James that street lighting tax districts s Port St Lucie will be deleted county tax bills this year and the billing will become a city onsibility has caused concern ng council members.

Tuesday, Councilwoman Lolita nohan asked about the letter to the from Bass.

ass' letter points out, "This office has in the past cooperated with the City of Port St. Lucie in handling the street lighting districts for you. As you established the respective districts, we coded the parcels within the district and the assessment per lot was incorporated into the individual property owner's bill. Mrs. Knowles, the Tax Collector, collected and distributed to you the monies generated from the districts."

The letter further states that recently a question over the propriety of including the special assessments on the tax roll arose, and Bass' attorney advised him against continuing to do so. It also included an opinion from State Attorney Robert Shevin's office to the City of Punta Gorda, stating that the city could not create special taxing districts.

Assistant City Attorney Charles Dorfman told the council that the opinion from Shevin's office concerned a special tax district that was not approved by a vote of the people in the district. He pointed out that in Port St Lucie, lighting districts are voted on by citizens in the district, so the opinion may not apply

Dorfman said he has been checking into state laws on special tax districts and has made the Bass matter a high priority He said Bass is in Tallahassee, trying to get state officials to change their minds on the tax district problem. Council members said if Dorfman thought it would help for him to go to Tallahassee, that he should do it.

"If we don't get this resolved soon, before the tax bills come out, it could be very costly for the city," Mayor William McChesney said.

In other action Tuesday, the council again postponed action on an ordinance to regulate business hours in residential areas. The ordinance will be considered again at a special meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 5.

An ordinance prohibiting the hunting of wildlife within the city limits got a first reading approval, but a request for a zoning variance for Harry Gordon to build on a narrower than standard waterfront lot was delayed for at least two weeks so Gordon could try resolving the problem with General Development Corporation.

Second reading of an ordinance to establish an engineering department was approved, and council members voted not to place liens on property in connecton with the city's old grass ordinance that was declared unconstitutional

After a protest from Kernohan that the state auditor general ought to give an okay first, council members overrode her objection and approved an after-the-fact payment of $360 to former City Manager Elmer Cox for four out-of-town trips he made as city manager

ST DAY FEARS of going to school were quickly ve in the case of Dustin Sides, center, and her rteen classmate Christina Guccione, right, as Carolyn Patton, left, takes a moment to get to know and elicit a smile from Dustin There were 960 students enrolled at PSL Elementary at the close of the last school year, and 200 more were expected to sign up for the start of this school year. On Tuesday, school officials said only 855 children were enrolled, but added that this figure could change significantly over the next few days as more and more students are signed up. Water and sewer rates haven't gone up -yet

Water and sewer rates in Port St. Lucie haven't gone up – yet

Last December, General Development Utilities filed a request with the state Public Service Commission to raise water and sewer rates for Port St. Lucie GDU customers Phase one of the rate request was to have taken effect in August of this year, upping the water rate for the typical residential customer from $6.15 a month to $10.80, then phase two would up the rates again next August to $12.70. The phase one sewer rate hike would have brought bills up from $5.65 to $9.90, and the phase two rate taking effect next August would raise the rate to $13 a month for the typical residential customer (An interim hike from $5.60 to $8.57 was granted by the state PSC earlier and is now in effect.)

A series of public hearings on the rate hike requests wee held in April, and the PSC was to have made a decision by August on the GDU rate hike application. However, so far, the PSC has not decided the case and does not even have it scheduled on a commission agenda for discussion. At least a two-week extension of the eight month time period for the PSC to make up its mind has been made, and it may be longer than that before the commission hands down a ruling.

The rate hike requests were fought by a local organization known as the Florida Coalition of Consumers Some coalition members feel the PSC will grant rates very close to what GDU asked for

'Parcour' at Langford Park will be an exercise mecca

BY SALLY LATHAM

Langford Park's fitness course, which was made possible some months back by a gift of $4,000 worth of equipment from the Palm Beach County Heart Association, is coming down the homestretch toward completion.

It should be ready for use within six weeks, according to Dr. Richard Penick of Jensen Beach, who promoted the idea for the county. It was Penick, an active member of the American Heart Association and a proponent of regular exercise for health, who persuaded the P-B association to finance the equipment.

In addition to a jogging track, the fitness course will have exercise stations for people of all ages.

"It will have a fence to walk, for the youngsters, and other exercise stations where they'll be told what to do," Dr. Penick said Tuesday.

All the equipment is here, but still "in the bar," the doctor said. Installation will be underway in the next week or two.

The county commission, through the efforts of Commissioner Frank Wacha, made the land available, and is preparing the paths. Florida Power and Light has already brought in a few loads of cuttings from trees along their lines for use as soft footing on the jogging paths, thanks to FPL manager Gene van Curren, and several more loads are due in a short time.

"The faculty at Jensen Beach Elementary School called, when they heard about the project," Dr. Penick said. "They want to use it in their program, and asked what they could do to help. The kids will come over and help spread the cuttings along the path."

Ann Melton, Dr. Penick's secretary, is county secretary for the Heart Association. She explained that the 20-exercise station Fit-Trail "par cour" (for the heart) is an international concept developed in Switzerland, and has spread to the United States. Dr. Penick went down to Fort Lauderdale to examine the one already completed at Holiday Park.

"They've used a stone base for the paths there," he said. "That's a little hard on the feet. That's why we decided on the wood-chip base."

The course at Langford Park will make maximum use of the space available. It will begin at the parking lot west of the playground area, and will make several switchbacks, the southernmost switching across the road leading into the park from 707. Along the way, exercise stations will be placed, where participants will be informed on the type of exercise advised at that particular point.

The county is enthusiastic about the program, Penick said.

"The sheriff's department has indicated that they may make it a requirement for deputies to work out here regularly, and the same may hold true for the fire department."

It will also have the virtue of getting joggers off the main thoroughfares where the "healthful" hobby is not healthy for the motorists' peace of mind.

HELLO MR. CHIPS--Dr. Richard Penick, father of the "Fit-Trail Parcour" being built at Langford Park, inspects the wood chips donated for the jogging path covering by Florida Power and Light. ...dian River may reopen to clamming

...fter being closed to the public for ...ost, areas of the Indian River in ...artin and St. Lucie Counties may ...on be reopened for shellfishing.

...bout eight years ago, state officials ...alled a halt to the taking of clams and ...ther shellfish in most areas of the ...ver in the two counties. The ban was ...f due to pollution, as tests at the ...e showed the water was safe ...ough for taking shellfish. However, ...ccording to Martin County Health ...epartment head Dr. Archie McCal...er, the ban was imposed in ...nticipation of possible pollution from ...xpected developments along the ...er.

"From time to time people have ...en interested in reopening the ...aters to shellfishing. Students at FIT conducted studies that showed there was no evidence of contamination of the waters. It was an unofficial study, but there was enough interest that a meeting was held (about a year ago) between the county commission and state Department of Natural Resources (DNR)," Dr. McCallister said.

In order to open an area for shellfishing, tests have to be made on a regular basis to insure the water isn't contaminated, and when there are heavy rains, areas may be closed at times.

"It's an expensive process to monitor the water conditions," the doctor said, adding that when county officials looked into it, it was decided it would have to be an expense borne by the state.

But the state has not had the manpower available to monitor many areas for shellfishing. That may be changing, however. In the last session of the legislature, funds were appropriated to hire more inspectors. As a result, Bob Chauncey of the DNR office in Tituville has recently visited Martin and St. Lucie Counties. Dr. McCallister said the DNR plans to test waters around the north part of the St. Lucie Inlet and along the eastern bank of the Indian River from the inlet to the Ernest E. Lyons (25 cent) bridge. The doctor said no portion of the western side of the river, nor any portion of the St. Lucie River is under consideration for opening to shellfishing.

Numerous attempts were made to contact Chauncey, but all were unsuccessful.

Bill Richards, head of the St. Lucie County Health Department, said there is presently one area of the Indian River in that county, about 100 acres large, that was never closed to shellfishing. That is around Starvation Cove near the north county line. Richards said in St. Lucie County the reasons for closing other portions of the river were due to anticipated riverfront development and potential pollution from the City of Fort Pierce sewer plant outfall into the river by the Peter Cobb (south) bridge. Richards said Chauncey came by his office recently and informed him new studies will be conducted along the river in St. Lucie County to see if any areas can be reopened.

...olphin's Bay picture looking up

...Progress on Dolphin's Bay, long-...oiled condominium complex re-...ently purchased by Fairwinds Inc. of ...aryland, appears to be looking up, ...ccording to Martin County Commis...ioner Frank Wacha.

...At Tuesday's meeting, the commis...ioners approved construction of a ...oop dock on the waterfront along ...Jensen Beach Causeway, fronting ...condominiums.

..."It will be built parallel to the shore, ...ot sticking out in the water like the ...ther one did," Wacha said.

The commission also approved ...cceptance of a completion bond for improvements which will enable certificates of occupancy in the second phase of the building, which has been standing empty. The new owners, who paid $4 million for the second section, have indicated they are going to make extensive improvements on the buildings and grounds.

Approval was also given to county engineer James B. Winn to pay for the permit processing fee for the Army Corps of Engineers erosion control project on Jensen Beach Causeway. The work, which has been on the books for several years, will include measures to prevent or minimize erosion along the west end of the man-made thoroughfare, Wacha said.

Two projects benefitting senior citizens got the commission's blessing at the Tuesday meeting -- the daily meals at Langford Park, Stuart and Hobe Sound, for which $6,000 was okayed, and $5,700 for the visiting nurse program and meals on wheels.

The free or reduced-cost meal program at Langford Park, Wacha said, is a government-sharing project, with the county paying 10 percent and the federal government 90 percent.

"We also provide $8,000 'in kind' for the rent of the building."

Salzler quits as postmaster

Harold Salzler, postmaster of the Jensen Beach U.S. Post Office, has resigned from the position, it was learned this week. According to an associate at the local post office, Salzler turned in his resignation earlier this month "for personal reasons." He is expected to return to the job of carrier.

It isn't known who will succeed him, but a replacement is expected next week, the spokesman said. Salzler couldn't be reached for comment. He is vacationing in Georgia and won't be back until the weekend.

Nuke plant disaster exercise is Thursday

All the emergency service units and Civil Defense crews in the Martin County-St. Lucie area will be taking part in a radiation disaster exercise focusing on the Florida Power and Light nuclear plant on Hutchinson Island Thursday.

"We are notifying all emergency departments to stand by their stations," Steve Wells, Martin County CD Deputy Director told The Mirror Monday.

The mock disaster will be conducted similarly to others held in the past to check the evacuation plan efficiency, according to FPL executive Gene van Curren.

"We're studying the efficiency of the evacuation plan and the back-up agencies," van Curren said.

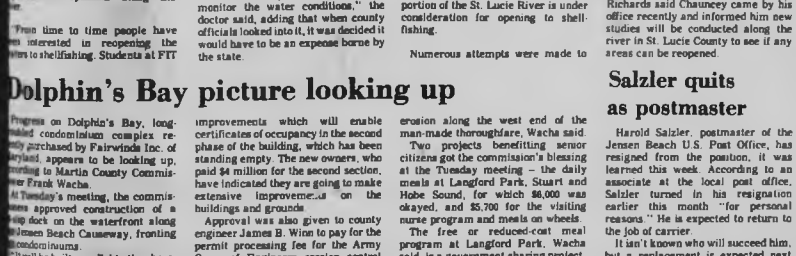
The ambulances and fire departments won't know where to be stationed or what route the evacuees will take until the day of the exercise, van Curren explained, because the route will determined by the wind direction, which will affect the path of the hypothetical "plume."

In the last test, during the winter, the "plume" was charted as passing across the Fort Pierce evacuation route over North Bridge, which changed the pattern of the mass exodus from the island.

The weather conditions and wind direction are carefully monitored at the weather tower just north of the nuclear plant. The tower also is a radiation monitor, on guard for the presence of nuclear particles around the clock.

The state health department, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the state civil defense will all be involved in the Thursday test.

"We also expect the mobile laboratory out of Orlando," Wells said.



Rio-Jensen fire boundaries changed

...The district lines for the area served ...the Rio Volunteer Fire Department ...ve been expanded and changed to ...lude a wider segment on the east ...e, Chief Joe Luciano, president of ...e Martin County Fire Chiefs' ...sociation announced this week.

..."Rio's district used to stop at ...rtheast Sottong Avenue," Chief ...ciano said Monday. "It will now ...end to the Arch (between Northeast ...rium and Myrtle streets). Rio will ...ver everything south of the arch."

The change is being made, Chief Luciano said, to give more efficient coverage. Also chief of the Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department, Luciano came to the agreement on the change with Rio Chief Bill Gass.

"We decided to extend the Rio line because the Arch is closer to the Rio department than to Jensen," Luciano explained. "It will help us to give all the people better service."

The Rio department until recently extended its service to North River Shores. That area, however, was removed to another district. Now the department's service to the west includes everything east of the U.S.1 scuff of Britt Road. The Jensen department takes over the responsibility for everything north of Britt Road and to the east, up to the north Martin County line.

Luciano emphasized that, although Rio's new area comprises all of that section around State Road 707 south to the St. Lucie River, the Jensen Volunteer Fire Department will still be responsible for the territory along Indian River Drive, including Florida Institute of Technology, the Evinrude properties and the Outrigger.

"District 1 is also taking over all of Hutchinson Island, to the south," the Jensen chief said.

The Rio department previously gave coverage to the south end of the island, while the Jensen department answered all calls on the east end of the causeway and to the north.

"Of course," Luciano said, "we will continue to give mutual aid, and back each other up on all major calls."

I-95 map on view

A map and report on the recommendation of a consulting engineer as to the possible alternatives for I-95 through Martin County were turned over to the County Commission this week, after receiving official approval in Tallahassee on Friday from the Department of Transportation and the Federal Highway Administration.

The report gives one alternative as channeling to the far west of the Florida Turnpike, but recommends against it. The engineers, H.W. Lochner, Inc. of St. Petersburg, contends it would be in conflict with both Martin County and Palm Beach County's goals of limiting development west of the Turnpike.

The route favored by the engineering firm is also expected to draw plenty of flak from developers and conservationists. "Alternate 9," which is the extreme eastern route, goes through an already populated area, and would mean the removal of many homes and businesses. It would also have an adverse impact on the mangrove areas on St. Lucie River's South Fork.

The route "straddling" the turnpike, described by DOT engineer Ken Woods to the Mirror last week, also has its drawbacks, and will probably not be considered because of the conflict with the turnpike funding. Interstate funds can't be used to pay off turnpike bonds, and the cost of bringing the highway up to interstate standards would be prohibitive. The fourth alternate, another eastern corridor, would parallel the turnpike.

The map and report will be in the county commission offices and available for study until the public hearings set for Sept. 27 in Stuart at Martin County High School, and a second in Jupiter on Sept. 28. Everyone wanting to exercise a voice in the hearings is asked to be present, the DOT spokesman said.

John's back, and we're glad

The Ocean Breeze Park mailman, John Ross, is back from three weeks in New Jersey visiting with his family and, as usual, saying how glad he is to be back. It was too hot for him up there, too rainy, and so crowded in Atlantic City that he didn't try his luck. So it's no wonder he is glad to be back, and OBPers are in turn glad he's back so they can again hear his cheerful "While-while-you-work".

The park office reports the following anniversaries: Stan and Florence Hughes, Errol and Marguerite Ridgwell, Cliff and Hope White, Leroy Logan, Van Campbell and Frances Runyan. We all say welcome back. Thank, pitch those who returned before, make a total of at least 21.

PARK EVENTS

Don't forget pot luck, 5:30 p.m. Friday, at the clubhouse. Be sure to sign up at the office, listing your donation, so there will be places for all and a balanced menu. Bring your own place setting and beverage.

This really must be the low point of park activities, for at 7 p.m. last Friday, there were no shufflers or card players. However, it could be seen that there had been plenty doing during the day, as most of the bleacher seats had been painted and the new poolside bleachers had been installed.

RAMBLING AROUND

Bill McDowell, 19 Cypress Dr., recently celebrated his birthday with a trip to West Palm on the Courtesy Bus, and remarked that it was great fun, especially the big ice cream cone that he enjoyed just as much now as he did 88 years ago when he was a 10-year-old lad.

Ron and Catherine Cumpsty, 13 SW 5th, are back from four weeks in Madison, Wisc., where they looked into housing for their daughter Rhonda. She is going to study for her master's degree in social work and mental health at the University of Wisconsin. Rhonda recently graduated, magna cum laude, and will start school in Wisconsin this month.

The Cumpstys came back by way of Newfane, N.Y. (near Buffalo), where they visited Ron's mother, 86-year-old Mrs. Mary Cumpsty, who is an exOBPer and built the first cottage in the park on NE 4th St. She is doing well in a nursing home and wants to be remembered to all the ol' timers.

Frances Runyan, 16 Pepper, who came down here in 1985, is just back from summering at her cottage on Torch Lake, Mich. (near Traverse City). Frances said it was a good summer for rest and relaxation, but with it too hot at times and too rainy at others, she was anxious to get back early. However, after selling her cottage, she spent six weeks with her children, elsewhere in Michigan. Says OBP is home now.

Ralph and Bobbie Tucker, 16 SW 9th, who came down here in '63, have just returned from visiting their family in Flint, Mich. There they saw their twin boys, daughter and eight grandchildren, and took in a Tucker reunion with the usual pot luck and picture taking as 35 relatives gathered together.

They were only gone from July 8 through Aug. 17, and flew both ways. Ralph remarked it's not like their travel trailer days, when they'd take off and be gone months at a time, putting in 150 thousand miles in the U.S., Mexico and Canada. Bobbie said they never had car problems, as Ralph had spent 40 years working at Buick and could fix anything.

Errol and Marguerite Ridgwell, 20 Ocean Breeze Dr., came to OBP in 1970 from Northampton, Mass. (another of those enticed by Bill Tourville). They had an excellent summer, first three weeks on Cape Cod at Turo (near Provincetown), where the weather was perfect; then a week in Hallowell, Maine, where it rained plenty, and then spent the rest of the time with their daughter in Southboro, Mass. Errol said they got out just in time, for a telephone call last night reported temperatures down in the 50s. Heard from Wyatts, who are due back Sept. 8.

LETTERS FROM OBPers

Ann Bartle, 11 Cypress, writes from New Jersey, saying there's been too much rain, but she's had a great time with her family and Airstream friends. Also, went over to Atlantic City....to look, not to gamble. Jack and Betty Hosken, exOBPers, visited her for 12 days, doing all the sights, including the Lobster House at Cape May. Ann must be having too much fun, as she never mentioned a return date.

Earl and Lila Ehrmann, 7 Kumquat, wrote from Flint, Mich., that they have just returned from their 37th anniversary trip to Alaska. It was a wonderful 14 days, seeing Mt. McKinley, Mendenhall Glacier, the pipe line, and four days on the Pacific Princess where they had cake and champagne for their anniversary dinner. They say, see you soon?

Margaret Johnson, 1 Pepper, writes from Petersham, Mass., saying she has had many visitors and has visited many relatives and friends. Ruth Phelps and her sister are in Washington to see the King Tut exhibit. Margaret says she is fine and dandy, trees keep her house cool, only one night too hot to sleep. Will be back early if the weather turns cold.

Joe Eisenbarth, West End Blvd., writes from 804 Phillips St. Marietta, OH 45750, that it's 91 by 11 a.m., but down to 60 at night. She has something to do, watching 75 birds in her cherry tree, blue jays, wrens, etc., all busy trying to establish a "pecking-order". They had a good hot trip in the rain, return date not mentioned.

Louise Kalb, 37 SW 5th, writes that Louis Kraft and wife visited them, along with the Rands. Everybody is fine. Kalbs won't be back until after the leaves have turned, probably last of October.

Esther LeMessurier, of 13 Kumquat, writes from 274 West Lake Rd., Honeoye, N.Y. 14471, that weather isn't too bad 80s most days, with some 90 temperatures, but often a fire is needed in their cottage on the lake at night.

Nina Zigelhofer, 1 Pine Lane, writes from Wooster, Ohio, that they are just back from a trip to New York, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, visiting Roy's daughter and other relatives. Nina says the gardens are great and it is good sleeping weather with 65 degree temperatures. Plan to be back by Sept. 21.

Dot Snyder, 1 Oak St., writes from somewhere in New Jersey, that she and John Carter are busy getting her house ready to sell. Then, around Labor Day, they'll be married, and take a trip through New England before scooting back to OBP.

Magic monster computes biorhythm

BY SALLY LATHAM

Paul Zinter, in his pleasant little office of the Welcome Center on U.S.1 in Port St. Lucie, has a magical machine that can tell you more about yourself than you really care to know.

It is a computer that enjoys minding your business. But strictly as a hobby. The Welcome Center's "computer machine" is primarily designed strictly for big business, Zinter admitted.

"If you're going to buy here for investment," the real estate man said, "I will make an investment analysis projection up to 50 years."

Put out by Texas Instruments, the terminal has a headquarters in reality.

Zinter demonstrated the computer's big-brother digitals by picking up the telephone attached to it, calling the master-brain in Kansas City, and explaining the purpose of the call.

In almost no time, a reply began coming back, on the paper emerging rapidly from the typewriter-like instrument:

"This program will plot your bio-rhythm curves," it informed me. "Required input will be: your name, your birthdate, today's date (or date that you want the plot to begin), number of months you want to have plotted."

Paul dutifully gave back my birthday, birth year, and starting date.

Then came a brief note saying in effect that it would be talking in numbers: 1 represents the physical cycle; 2, the emotional cycle, and 3 the intellectual cycle. With that out of the way, it took off, swirling and swaying with a numerical pattern looking for all the world like a dance floor-plan for a ballet.

In what seemed like a few brief seconds, the omniscient gadget had charted my life for the next two months, showing what I could expect to be like every day.

And it doesn't look too promising. When the emotional and intellectual scales are high, the physical one is in bad shape, and vice versa. There doesn't seem to be such a thing as all plus, at any time. And I can expect three intellectual ground zeros between now and the end of October.

The machine, after scaring you to death, goes on to explain:

"The physical cycle has an 11½ day up phase when the person is stronger and has more resistance, followed by a downward cycle of 11½ days."

Right now, I'm a physical plus, but a mess when it comes to emotion and mind. I can't expect much in either of the latter departments until next week. And even then, not before I've gone through a couple of crises.

"The most difficult periods come when curves pass the zero point, going neither above or below the center line. It is during this zero period that accidents may occur. Vulnerability to disease increases, and bad decisions are likely to be made."

I hit ground zero intellectually on Sept. 11 (a Monday, which is always a period of sheer panic for everyone in the Mirror, when we're going into the clubhouse turn toward publication).

On Sept. 8, I reach an emotionally bad impasse, and according to the chart, I just barely made it through physically this past Monday. I have the same glum prospects on Sept. 13, and the emotional doldrums come the next day, on Sept. 14.

So boss, if I fall on my face, blow my mind or have a severe nervous breakdown in the next couple of months, it's all right there on paper, and I can't do a thing about it.

Zinter, incidentally, didn't come by his hyper-intellectual toy lightly. He went through Certified Commercial Investment School to learn all about it.

"Only the people who have had the training can use it," he said.

The one in his office is the only one in the area.

Zinter is well qualified to work with the computer system in making real estate prognoses. He came here ten years ago from Arlington Heights, Ill., as housing manager for General Development, and he's seen the amazing development and change in land values around this highly unusual area. And he feels, under any circumstances, it's the best investment.

"The one thing God isn't going to make any more of," he said, "is land."

[illegible] City so all-knowing it's [illegible]ming.

"It would take 500 seasoned brokers [illegible] hours to make an analysis it can do [illegible] minutes," Zinter contends.

[illegible] The Mirror was not visiting the [illegible] Center to make any [illegible]-dollar investments. The [illegible] for the visit is that this writer [illegible] been told Zinter's miraculous [illegible]ine could take down a few facts [illegible] me and project my exact [illegible]rhythm."

[illegible] even knowing what a biorhythm [illegible] the writer approached with an [illegible] but empty mind. Just what is [illegible]rhm?

[illegible]eryone, the amiable gray-haired [illegible] explained, has a pattern of highe [illegible]ows that interweave and follow [illegible] other as night to day. The [illegible]puter, if asked politely would tell [illegible]ow I'm to be up, respectively, [illegible]ally, emotionally and intellectu-

BUY EXISTING OR BUILD?

QUESTION: I am an accountant, and for two years I have been trying to decide whether to invest in an existing apartment house or to buy some land and build one for myself. Considering all the profits builders make, I'm inclined to build. What do you think?

ANSWER: Many people ask the same question. Building apartment houses can be profitable. However, you should be aware of the risk involved. It is an economic law that the greater the return, the greater the risk involved.

An apartment-house developer must first consider site acquisition: Is the land properly zoned? Can it be rezoned? Can it be acquired at the proper cost? Are the necessary utilities available? Can the ground support the structure without expensive improvements?

He must be certain that a market survey is conducted that considers the following questions: Do population trends substantiate a demand for apartments? Does the survey show enough potential rental income to cover construction costs? Is the financing market strong enough to insure construction and permanent financing?

He must then insure that construction costs are controllable to the extent that he does not exceed a realistic budget that allows for contingencies such as poor weather, material shortages, and labor problems.

These are but a few of the complexities involved in developing income-producing properties.

For the inexperienced the road to wealth accumulation normally lies in acquiring income property that is already developed.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

Anna Miller plans rummage sale

The Anna Miller Circle will hold a rummage sale Saturday, Sept. 9, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Palm City Recreation Hall, with all proceeds to go to the Harry Anna Crippled Children's Hospital.

The Circle's 5th Annual Variety Show, "Around the World in Ninety Minutes," is scheduled for two Friday evenings, Nov. 10 and Nov. 17, with rehearsals starting this week.

At a recent meeting held at the Elks Lodge in Stuart, Wanda Becker, Jane Arbereen, Florence Hisey and Ann Cottrell were initiated into the Circle. A Crutch Pin was awarded posthumously to Dolores Plezia for her years of dedicated service to the Circle.

COMMUNITY CENTER COMET

200 S.W. Prima Vista Blvd.
Port St. Lucie, Florida 33452 Phone 878-1388

Open to all?
We'll just have to try harder

In spite of repeated efforts, there continue to be those within this area who do not realize that the Community Center belongs to all of you. It is open to the public; there are no "members." It is you who have made it all possible.

Please feel free to stop by any time. You can help us in this respect by telling new friends or new neighbors about the Center and its accessibility.

No ticket, no lobster, plenty dogs, burgers

By the time you read this, it will be too late to buy a ticket for the New England Clambake being put on by by Jack Sheridan and Dempsey McLain at the Community Center on Labor Day, Sept. 4, but don't let that stop you just because only those who purchased their tickets by Aug. 25 will be able to line up for lobster, Ipswich clams, steamed corn and clam chowder on Labor Day.

There will be a scrumptious hamburger plate for $1.50 and also hamburgers and hot dogs offered by that mistress of the culinary arts, Ethel Krall, in the Center's snack bar. She will have beverages and dessert available, so there will be food for everybody whether they go the Clambake route or not.

Plan to visit your Community Center on Labor Day.

They will start serving the clams at 2 p.m., but Ethel and her crew will be ready for their first customers starting at noon and will keep the snack bar open until 3 p.m.

A STRONG SUPPORTER of the Community Center's expansion program is the Sun Bank of St. Lucie. The Sun Bank's Port St. Lucie Branch Manager Martha Sneed is handing Center President Dick Lundin a check for $1,000 and both seem mighty happy about it.

Center gets second line, new phone

For many months, the Community Center has tried to operate its office management and building custodial section with the single line telephone service that began back in 1972, but on August 18, all of that changed when the Center gained a second line, according to Office Manager Helen Ingram.

She reports that the new number at the Center is 878-1390, joining the old number, 878-1388. In addition, she pointed out, there is the pay telephone (878-9500) in the Trustees' Lounge which can be used for incoming calls whenever the other two numbers are busy.

President Dick Lundin explained that with the rapid growth of the community and attendant calls for social services and other information, furnished gladly by Center staff members, and the incoming and ougoing volume of calls generated by the current construction program at the Center, another phone was a necessity.

"We just hope that this will take care of us for at least a year or two," he said.

Thanksgiving cruise is total sellout

That Thanksgiving week cruise to Cozumel-Cancun, Mexico, Grand Cayman Island, Ocho Rios in Jamaica, and the Berry Islands (one of the Bahamian Out Islands) is a sellout with 32 community residents eagerly looking forward to a week of fun and turkey afloat, beginning Nov. 18. The cruise is a fund raising event for the Expansion Building Fund of Trustee George Jacobi.

Center Cruise Director June Johnston reports that although the cruise is sold out there are four couples on standby and that Frank Bonfield of Travel House of Florida, the cruise sponsor, is checking every Friday with Caribbean Lines to see if there have been any cancellations on the MS Southward for Thanksgiving week. "We keep hoping that it will all work out and maybe it will," she said.

June added that she and Frank have been going over plans for fund raising cruises in 1979, starting with a seven day cruise in April, a 14-day European cruise in September, and another seven-day affair Thanksgiving week.

"We may have something more or less firm on one or more of those by the October Comet," she promised.

Swim pool and bus service head 'most wanted' list

Thanks to a grant from the Department of Manpower Planning in Tallahassee, the Community Center has a four-member survey team in the field getting community residents to answer a questionnaire designed to produce data for both the City of Port St. Lucie and the planning and social services officials of the Center.

Trustee Rose Hanna is monitoring the team that is headed by crew chief Angela DeVasher. Other team members are Celie Mae Hudson, Lilian Barker and Mary Ann Franklin. The four members take their questionnaires to designated areas each morning and return in the afternoon to the Center. Mrs. Hanna reports that good progress is being made and that the canvassers are meeting with exceptional courtesy and cooperation on the part of the residents. Where it isn't possible to complete the form during the visit of the team member, residents are mailing it in to the Center later or sending it through the mail.

"We're having good success with getting them where we have to because people are being so good about filling them out and seeing that they reach the Center within a day or two. It's been a real education for us and we've really enjoyed meeting so many nice folks. We ask them questions and they ask us nearly as many. It's kind of a two way street," Angela said.

As the questionnaires are brought in, they are being tabulated question by question so that the data accumulated will be available for study by Director Nickie Porter's Community Services Committee, Trustee Clem Bramley's Master Planning Committee and City Planner Mike Szunyog.

Asked what people seem to want the most, Angela replied: "They want a swimming pool and bus service more than anything it seems. We tell them that there is a swimming pool in the master plan of the Community Center but that for bus service, they'll have to call the Council on Aging in Fort Pierce. The younger people are worried about schools. Recreation is another thing, like softball leagues, but we tell them the Community Center tries to meet social and educational needs of the community, leaving recreation to the county and city."

Early sign-up urged for annual golf tourney

Area golfers want to sign up early for the Fourth Annual Community Center Golf Tournament to be held as a shotgun event at Sandpiper Bay on Thursday, Oct. 19. Tournament Chairman Don McConnell reminds community residents that on Sept. 7 the tournament will be thrown open to contestants from all over, but that until then it is limited to Port St. Lucie residents.

Application blanks are available at the Saints and Sinners pro shops at Sandpiper Bay, at the Port St. Lucie Bank and at the Community Center.

Frank O'Beirne's sensational posters are not only super works of art but contain all of the details concerning the tournament that begins with coffee and danish before the 8:30 a.m. teeoff time and concludes with an awards luncheon after the morning's play is over. The application blanks are attached to the posters.

As reported in the August Comet, the tournament is being sponsored by General Development Corporation and hosted by Port St. Lucie General Manager Bob Seeley and Sandpiper Bay Resort Manager Bill Pullen as a benefit affair for the Community Center's Expansion Building Fund.

McConnell promises a fun day for all starting with golf and winding up with a cocktail hour and luncheon when lots of prizes will be awarded and the winning man and woman given the white jacket emblematic of the Community Center champion.

"There'll even be door prizes for the luncheon guests who don't play in the tournament," McConnell added.

ONE OF THE MOST frustrating things about the new construction at the Center is President Dick Lundin and Supt. Heine Demeules has been getting the roof on the building. The roofer has tried twice to get the job done and each time the rain has kept him from doing it. It looked like this time all systems would be go, but inevitable rain washed everything out before the day was over. "It looks like we'll never be able to get that roof on, and we need it so badly, too," Demeules said.

THE QUARTERLY FINANCIAL STATEMENT for the Community Center as of June 30, the end of the Center's fiscal year, is available at the Center office for anyone wishing to review it or make a copy of it.....THE BUDGET for the new fiscal year, as approved by the board of directors is also there for your perusal.....THE SUMMER YOUTH PROGRAM of CETA really helped us out this summer. Ed Petty, Vince Liecione and Barry Lee performed all manner of tasks both inside and outside the building, but their main accomplishment was clearing off the "wilderness" area immediately east of the picnic area so that it can be kept mowed and be useful for holiday events.....THE SEPT. 8 meeting of the board of directors was moved up to Sept. 1 to accommodate our distinguished corporate secretary, Mme. Schreiber. Anything for the ladies, folks.....WEREN'T WE FORTUNATE to come up with such a fine quartet of ladies for our Community Services Survey Team? CETA employees all, they have been getting nothing but good notices around the community as they conduct their door-to-door canvassing. It's doing a lot of good for our image and they deserve a vote of thanks from us -- Crew Chief Angela DeVasher and crew members Mary Ann Franklin, Lilian Barker and Celie Mae Hudson.....ON THAT NOTE, let's not overlook Trustee Rose Hanna who is monitoring the survey, nor Nickie Porter, chairman of the Community Services Committee, who is tabulating the results weekly.....CAROLINA MOLA is going great guns as our snack bar hostess. She cooks a mean hamburger and her egg salad and tuna fish sandwiches and hot dogs are just as good. Drop in soon and sample her fare. It's good.....IF YOU LIKE smiles, you'll be glad you did because Carolina is all smiles.....A GOOD STAFF is an important ingredient and we feel that ours at the Center is one of the best. The PSL Jr. Woman's Club took note of that fact recently in commending Chief Building Coordinator Clarence Kemp and his two-man staff of Tony Puccarelli and George Boon for the courteous and efficient job they do in keeping the building shipshape and taking care of the needs of the clubs, classes and individuals who use it.....WE'RE PROUD of them, too. Nancy.....IF YOU HAVEN'T visited the new building lately, be sure to make an inspection tour soon to see just how much progress Supt. Heine Demeules, Volunteer Foreman Ralph Huffman and their corps of willing helpers have made. It's really shaping up and the short-range goal is to have it ready for limited use by late October and the Halloween Carnival.....A BOND ISSUE just may be the way to finish it up before rising costs of building material and equipment finishes us off. A decision on that is likely late in the year.....THAT HONOR ROLL, or leader board, in the Trustees' Lounge grows right along. Those clubs and businesses and financial institutions show that they are in the forefront by being there. Tropicana Products still leads and it just makes their orange juice taste that much sweeter.....YOU SCRATCH MY BACK and I'll scratch yours is an old Southern expression, but it applies here. I know we buy only Tropicana orange juice now.....OUR IN MEMORIAM board has two names on it. It's a wonderful way to memorialize a loved one.....OUR LITTLE PAPERBACK LIBRARY is getting a good play. Come in, browse, and take one or two home to read. Bring in your surplus paperbacks for others to enjoy.....OUR COMMUNITY SERVICES COMMITTEE needs volunteers, too. Call Nickie Porter (878-2338) if you can help in any way with the host of social services this fine group offers.....ON A FINAL NOTE, don't forget to sign up for either the luncheon or the golf and luncheon for the Oct. 19 Fourth Annual Community Center Golf Tournament at Sandpiper Bay. It's a benefit for the building fund. You'll enjoy the fun and help move up the day when we can have a grand opening for the new hall and catering kitchen.....CHEERS.

Local electric company to shed light

Did you know that we have our own Electric Company at the Community Center? Not the rock music group, but a team of electrical contractors, retired from active employment, who are going to bring light into the new Activities Hall.

Ed York, Gene Hedeen and Max Johnson comprise this electrical subcontractor. They will be installing the electrical service into the building, including part of the panels for distribution of lighting, putting electricity into the restrooms, and installing lights around the top of the inside walls with a regulator so that the lights can be maintained from dim to bright.

The new 600 amp switch has been delivered and as soon as it arrives, the boys will get started. About a month will be required to accomplish the above mentioned steps. Ed York says that it takes a month of good, hard manual labor with lots of muscle required. It is anticipated that the hall will be closer to the present "limited use" goal. As soon as it becomes available, ceiling fans will be installed along with the commercial kitchen equipment.

Some time back, when we profiled the "hard hats" volunteer construction crew, Max Sidelman was not available for interviewing. We shall be seeing him at a future time for another purpose, but briefly, he comes from New Rochelle, New York, where he was in the electrical contracting business for 50 years. He and Mrs. Sidelman have been in the area for three years, having discovered Port St. Lucie "by accident" when they were invited to a wedding. He was attracted to the Center's on-going construction because he felt with 50 years of experience, he might be of some service!

New cook book is now being printed

That new cook book of the Community Center has gone off to the printer in Kansas City and should be ready for Christmas shoppers by Thanksgiving, according to Pat Seeley and Marie Haughton, co-chairmen.

There are 200 appetizing recipes in the attractive new cook book, the two authors report, and both are convinced, obviously, that the title, format and general content will delight community chefs, both male and female.

In the meantime, Office Manager Helen Ingram points out that there are still a few of the 1974 CESA cook books on hand, going for a closeout price of just one dollar.

We'd like to tell you what the intriguing title page of the Haughton-Seeley culinary creation has on it, but that would be giving away their secret, so you'll just have to wait until they go on sale at the Center late in November. Plan to get some as Christmas gifts.

Fetch, Toby!

(What? In seven feet of water?)

Photos by Pat Murphy and Sally Latham

BY SALLY LATHAM

It s a matter of record that humans hold no exclusive patents on personality hang-ups.

Chickens think they're kittens – dogs start mewing in obvious identity crisis – reliable rumor even has a mouse who roared.

So what's wrong with a Schnauzer turned otter?

Absolutely nothing, according to the Charlie Groomes, over on Barbara Avenue. Charlie and Vera, owners of Jamison Flooring, are ultra-proud of their four-year-old Toby, who would rather dive and cavort about in the family pool than chase cats.

Toby, in fact, is so aquatically inclined that underwater or just emerging from his own private deeps, he takes on the appearance of a miniature artist's concept of a walrus, with his drippy, drooping moustache, especially when he's just nabbed his favorite underwater prey – a much-chewed and beat-up rubber fish.

That fish has almost had it, but in Toby's eyes, it is as compulsively tempting as the most delicious fresh perch. When that fish is tossed into the pool and sinks to the bottom, Toby plunges in, does a fast back-flip, and lunges after it, like a furry Johnny Weismuller.

Toby is not new to the news. He's been written up for his remarkable natatory prowess in other papers But he'd never been photographed during his submarine forays. Hence The Mirror decided to follow him into his extra dimension.

To do so, help was recruited in Pat Murphy, son of Realtor Hoyt Murphy, an old friend of The Mirror. Pat, now in his sophomore year at Indian River Community College and learning real estate in his father's offices, has a fine underwater camera which he has used effectively for the past several years in sojourns with his family in the waters of Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

Pat, complete with camera and scuba gear, accompanied this reporter to the Groomes' home Monday morning to capture the ups and downs of this show-off Schnauzer. And Toby didn't disappoint anyone. He staged a full hour's show demonstrating his peculiar talents at zooming down to every depth the pool had to offer, never giving up until he had retrieved piscatory playmate. Had he been in the ocean, no doubt he'd have wound up with deep-sea bends rather than come back up empty-mouthed

How did he develop this unusual talent?

"He's been doing it since he was a little puppy," Charlie said. "He'd see us go underwater, and he had to come down to find out where we were."

It never occurred to Toby that he couldn't, Vera and Charlie agree. Doesn't every dog dive?

The Mirror's visit, with the help of Pat, gave the Groomes the answer to a question they've been asking ever since they acquired their gainering canine: when he dives, does Toby keep his eyes open or closed?

Pat confirms it – they're open, all the way.

SEE? I told you I was a better diver than any piscine puddle-jumper

TOBY TUMBLES headlong into pool after his rubber fishy play-toy ...Ah, there it lies, in the pool's depth....

TRIUMPH REIGNS, both for the pooch and photographer. SCUBA-geared Pat Murphy caught Toby in action underwater, and Toby caught the fish, and everybody's happy

They remember the time..

The strikes and threats of strikes by public employees kind of get the local users away from their pet gripes – inflation and health costs – for a change. And, this week, it was the pending postal workers' strike that got their attention.

Some mentioned how the TV program "Washington Week" pointed out that the rejection of the contract by the postal workers, that President happily greeted as the first major step toward curtailing the inflation spiral, would probably ruin the whole program.

Some talking by this age group was pretty one-sided, as most could remember the time when it was necessary to earn an increase in pay, not just sit back and demand it by threats of making it tougher for folks who have it tough enough as it is.

Some "yakking" went on and on, merely blowing off steam, but nothing that's been nagging many of us was pointed out. Where is it going to in? Many workers are becoming so affluent, they are interested in more money to buy more things. The Roman Empire became so affluent and no more Romany Empire? Is this the heritage that we want for our great grandchildren?

Some worried about this should write their congressmen, telling them to stop mortgaging our future with unmanageable federal debts that will soon be over a trillion dollars.

There are still many telephone calls, usually after one of the WMCF public service announcements, and some of the requests for information or action might be of interest to other readers, so here are a couple:

The 1960 retiree living on Soc. Sec. in Vero house, says that the latest tax increase will force him to sell. He can't bear to as it's "home." Asked what'd ever happened to "reverse mortgage." You know, that is where a bank loans you so much each month, using your equity, but settlement can be made until the house is sold or the owner settled. It sounds like a good idea and solution and it is thought that the Vero Proximire has something like this under consideration. Those interested should write to the senator.

Some other interesting call was a counter-point on the editorial in last week's Mirror regarding better communication between the medical profession and the elderly. A senior was irate. He had just received a bill for $20 for just a telephone call. It seems he was feeling better, so called to see if it was OK to cut down from three to two pills a day, and found that it was OK. If there was a regular forum established, these misunderstandings could be quickly ironed out. So the elderly will continue to work for a committee to establish closer relations.

It was birthday and anniversary time at Congregate Meals Fridlly. The last Friday of each month is party day for all those who had a birthday or anniversary during the month and there is cake and ice cream to help celebrate the event. This month, there was a special birthday to honor, and it turned out to be quite an affair.

Sunday, Aug. 27, was Dorris Walker's birthday. She is the site manager and has been on the inactive list since last May, undergoing surgery and treatment. First, and most important, she had her final treatment Friday and her doctor said now should would be OK and could return to light work Sept. 1. Next, all the site members had sent her individual cards, so many that the postman had to deliver them in bundles, and finally, a big card signed by all was presented with a gift of $70 from the group. Dorris was overwhelmed and said so, thanking the members, one and all. So, congratulations Dorris, and hurry back.

Early snowbirds are finding that there are not permanent openings for the Congregate program at this time, but as quite a few are away on short vacations, there is room for most of them, on a day-to-day basis. As they return, they should get in touch with Asst. Mgr Betty Mattis, 334-8984.

CHAPTER EVENTS

There will be an AARP picnic, Thursday, Sept. 7, on the Jensen Causeway, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Giving plenty of warning this time, as after the last picnic, some AARPers said they didn't know until too late.

Remember, it is always the first Thursday of the month, during the summer on the causeway, and during the winter at Langford Park.

If you heard a big "bang" last Monday night, that was when Al Tucker, 3rd v.p. and membership chairman, officially dropped the 1978 delinquents. Their names were removed from the membership files and the bulletin mailing lists. Those on the waiting list were then made active members and their cards will be ready for them at the next picnic or meeting. There are openings for about 50 more before the limit of 750 is reached, either delinquents reinstated or new members.

That much talked about Christmas Bazaar is a step nearer, as Pearl Wyse, 1st v.p. and chm. of health committee, has found that Buccaneer Inn is willing to go into it with us, allowing us the use of a big room for the tables and serving of refreshments. This is a good central location with excellent parking, so tentatively, the weekend of Dec. 9 has been suggested as a target date. Edith Hill, bazaar chm., reminds the members that she cannot do it alone, lots of help will be needed. Those interested in helping out, call Edith at 334-3440.

Even this early, members are calling about Defensive Driving classes, as with the high car insurance rates, that 10 per cent discount for graduates of the course is well appreciated. Last year the chapter worked with the Jensen Beach Area Samaritans and classes were held at the Environmental Studies Center, with George Krauss as instructor. A chairman is needed to get this organized. Anyone interested, call 334-0756.

Another very worthwhile project must be organized very soon. That is the tax aid program. The last couple of years it has been handled by Paul Berglund, but he'll no longer be available, so a new coordinator is needed. Volunteers, get in touch with Paul at 283-2980.

It is almost time to start the Senior Information Centers at Public and Ocean East Mall, and with possible expansion to Jensen and Monterey Plaza. It was a huge success last year under the direction of Boyd Smith, with Ada Baum and Betty Taylor as counselors. However, this year Boyd finds that other commitments will make it impossible for him to handle it. So, here's another case where a coordinator must be found. Anyone who can spare a few hours each Friday, please get in touch with Boyd at 334-2144.

Folks coming down from the northland are still telling about the low cost or free flu shots they can get in their home towns. Not long ago, the USA Health Dept. told about an expected epidemic of Russian Flu and suggested that all over 65 should get their shots before the start of the winter season. Doctor Archie MacCallister of the Martin County Health Dept. said he'd be glad to help out and asked us to find out just how it is handled up north. We should get someone working on this right now. Anyone willing to investigate, call 334-5806.

Here's one that hasn't come to my attention before. Some 1980 retirees, existing on Soc. Sec. only and living in old 1920 houses or pre-1950 trailers, find that repairs and upkeep are beyond their means. The MCCA or HRS will furnish a Mr. Fix-It, but there doesn't seem to be any agency that will supply paints, repair materials and replacement parts.

This might be a project for someone to take on and find out what could be done in such cases. If interested, call 334-0756.

The Buy-A-Block campaign has been in the summer doldrums, but it must soon be activated if a Senior Day Care Center is wanted in a centrally located Senior Center. Some faithfully keep their pledge to buy a block a month, sending the money down here each month, some others have bought blocks of 10, but the sustained drive of hundreds of dollars a month is missing. Who'll volunteer for this task?

Ostomy meeting set for Sept. 10

The first fall meeting of the Gold Coast Ostomy Association will be held Sunday, Sept. 10, at Imperial Point Hospital, 6401 N. Federal Highway, Ft. Lauderdale. Time is 2 p.m.

Venture Three

Coordinator, Vita Autenreith

September bringing some returnees....

September first is upon us and that signifies that our absent neighbors and friends begin to think of returning to the most beautiful place of all — Venture Three.

The Paul Sebans and the Bernard Hanzels came in this past week.

Welcome home to both families

Speaking of home, if you are registered to vote in Florida, don't forget to cast that vote on Sept 12 at the H.O. rec hall. This is the first primary and that is followed by a run-off primary, and then the general election, so keep posted on the times and candidates. Good government is what you get when you exercise your right to vote.

I was so pleased to have a visit with Mable Cook over the telephone. She called in answer to our pleas for news from each and everyone who is away.

Mable is doing very well and she sounded more like our bubbly, newsy, friendly Mable than she has for a long time. She said she can watch TV and even sew a little, so she feels better. She is also very busy freezing and canning the bountiful crop of vegetables from Thornton's garden. Says she has enough for them and their children. She had talked to Edna and Andy Wellston and they are fine. All send their greetings.

Also had a lovely visit with Kay and Ray Kileen. Ray said he didn't call so he could be quoted in this column, but I told him that I had to report all the news I receive or I might be sued like so many other reporters, for not giving up all my news notes. So here's what I heard from them:

Both are fine and have been hearing all about the trip to Alaska that their son and his family had made. Ray had called to get Stanley Clark's address so they could find out how Stanley is recovering from his eye operation. Their last news was that Stanley is doing just fine and both he and Barbara are well and, except for having to have extensive work done on their septic tank, they are enjoying their summer.

A group of stay-at-homes in Venture Three got together and made a couple of trips to the Sand Dollar for their annual participation in the Royal Palm Festival by offering to the public for one week a sumptuous Polynesian buffet. It was a fun thing to do to break the summer blahs.

The need for news continues and only you can help. Hope you all celebrate Labor Day and then begin to make your plans to return to Venture Three.

City grass law may be headed for court

BY BOB FRYER

...like the city of Port St. Lucie ...have its new grass ordinance ...ed in court.

...Tuesday, city council members ...ed unanimously to continue ...ings under its new grass ...ance to require Dimitry Alex..., an attorney from Davie, to ... his vacant lot at 248 S.W. Todd ...ace mowed.

...official city council hearing on an ...ce of the grass law by Alexander ...s conducted Tuesday morning. ...exander wrote that he was not able ...end the hearing because he was ...ired to teach a college class that ... In his letter notifying the ...he could not make the hearing, ...ted that an earlier, six-page ...he wrote against the grass law ...ed. It was. He also pointed out ...the fact that many lot owners are ...of town or out of state is an ...nt problem in having such a ...to live and makes it hard for ...m to attend appeals hearings.

...wrote that he feels the grass law ...unconstitutional and said that if the ...eal is lost at the administrative ...he would take the matter before ...rt to seek injunctive relief and to ...k the constitutionality of the law.

...ring discussion of Alexander's ..., council members also talked of ...rt Schweiger's property at his ...ercent St. home. Schweiger has ...ly bushes and trees growing on ...lot and maintains it is natural ...owing which he has there by ... Where the city sought to have ...nager's lot mowed last year, ...nager opposed the mowing, and in ...rt case eventually was successful ...ing the city's old grass law ruled ...unconstitutional. In May, a new grass ...was approved by the council.

City Clerk Sandra Krause said the next step is for her to write Alexander a letter advising him of the council's action on the appeal and that the council expects him to comply with the grass law. She said then the city would send another letter to Alexander, similar to its first letter telling him his lot was in violation of the law. After that, she said, the city would expect Alexander to either comply with the law or fight it.

Mayor William McChesney said he thought Alexander may believe his lot is in an undeveloped area and that if he was informed there were homes in the area that he might decide to have his lot mowed. The city has informed him that it would contract to mow the lot for $40, or that Alexander can make his own arrangements to mow it.

In other action, council members delayed discussion of drainage problems until a meeting is held with GDC officials and city staff members to determine drainage system maintenance responsibilities.

Council members decided to postpone selection of the First National Bank of Fort Pierce as the lead bank in securing a $600,000 loan for construction of the new city hall. It was decided to check with other banks in St. Lucie, Martin and Palm Beach counties to see if any would offer an interest rate lower than the seven and a half per cent rate the Fort Pierce bank offered.

A request for a zoning change from one business category to another for construction of a funeral home along Floresta Drive received no adverse comments and will be on the agenda of the council's next meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 11. The zoning change request is being made by Wade Aycock of Aycock Funeral Home.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO stick your neck out just to survive in Port St. Lucie if you're a great blue heron. The same applies to swans, geese, sandpipers, pheasants, turtle doves and any wild bird that's not a game bird. Deer, squirrels, rabbits, bear, panther and other fur-bearing animals are also safe. This is due to recent action by the city council to update their ordinance against hunting within city limits. Not only is it against the law to hunt the animals mentioned, it's also against the law to trap wildlife, including by use of an animal or hunting falcon. So, with the protection of the city law, herons like this one can stretch their wings without fear of having them clipped. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

$1.3 million city budget vote tonight

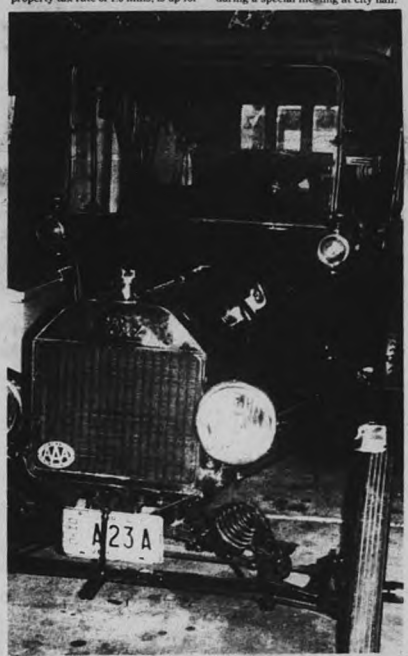
A $1,384,439 budget for the City of Port St. Lucie, which includes a property tax rate of 1.5 mills, is up for final adoption by the city council at 7:30 p.m. tonight (Thursday, Sept. 7) during a special meeting at city hall.



A 1929 MODEL A FORD--is among several automobiles that will be auctioned off this weekend at the Lee Sweet garage along U.S. 1 in Port St. Lucie. Roger Chancey will be auctioneer and Martin County High School Band members will be on hand to sell refreshments. Many collectors of antique cars are expected to participate in the bidding. Before he and his wife, Ethel, died earlier this year, the Sweets spent many of their last years restoring old cars. Staff photo by Bob Fryer. (For more details, see story inside)

When the budget was passed on first reading a couple of weeks ago, only one councilman, Merle Anderson, opposed it. He noted that he had no objection to any parts of the budget other than the exclusion of $120,000 for starting up a city police force and the inclusion of $171,000 to pay Sheriff Lanie Norvell for extra police protection.

The budget is for the 1978-79 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, and the 1.5 mill tax rate means $1.50 in property taxes will be charged for every $1,000 of assessed value.

The tax rate for the 1977-78 fiscal year was also 1.5 mills, and brought in $369,702. But just because the tax rate is expected to remain the same for the coming year doesn't mean individual propertyowners will pay the same amount of taxes. Increased property values due to inflation are expected to drive up some tax bills. And, since some new homes will be added to the tax roll, the anticipated revenue to the city this year from taxes is $360,610.

The other major source of expected revenue for the city in the coming year will be from building permit fees. Council members cautiously projected only $175,000 would be raised from building permit fees for the 1977-78 fiscal year. However, with the building boom, the city had received $309,000 in permit fees by the end of June. So, for the coming year, with no end to the boom in sight, council members are expecting the city to collect at least $300,000 from building permits.

The Florida Power and Light Company electric franchise revenue to the city is projected to jump from $85,000 to $120,000, and there are a number of other sources of revenue that are projected for small gains over the 1977-78 budget year.

Projected expenditures for the coming fiscal year include a jump from $299,057 to $346,879 for salaries. That includes $25,968 for a new city manager, Leonard Silvia, who should report for duty on Sept. 15 and $20,000 for new city engineer Daniel Blust, who is expected to report for duty within a week or so.

Included in the new budget is $270,000 earmarked for the new city hall. $120,000 of that was raised during the 1977-78 year and placed in a special city hall account and $150,000 of that will come this year from the city's $1.3 million cash reserve fund. Ground-breaking for the new city hall took place last week, and council members intend to borrow the balance of the money needed for the $756,900 structure.

Not included in the new city hall is $85,542 requested for building a new recreation park and $27,746 that had been earmarked for buying new park sites.

Tennis and handball courts were among several items cut from the Sportsman's Park budget when council members trimmed the $127,685 request to $69,790 for the coming fiscal year. During the 1977-78 year, $46,085 was budgeted for the park.

One of the few new items added to the budget for the coming year is $93,000 for the creation of a city maintenance department.

Sharp has ...ed as Indian River County School ...attorney and Tooker was ... County's attorney for a ...er of years. Voters from Martin, St. Lucie, Indian River and Okeechobee Counties will cast ballots in the judicial seat race.

There are two other local races, but those won't be decided until the Nov. 7 general election. In those races, incumbent Republican county commissioner Ed Enns will seek to keep his seat and Democrat challenger Phil Thibideau hopes to oust Enns. Also, incumbent Democrat Dale Cassens of Fort Pierce is running for his District 76 state House of Representatives seat, opposed by Chuck Nergard, a Republican from Port St. Lucie who held the post for five terms before deciding not to run two years ago.

The Tuesday, Sept. 12, primary will also eliminate some of the many candidates running for governor and state cabinet offices.

In St. Lucie County, the latest figures released by the Supervisor of Elections office indicate there are 21,493 registered Democrats, 9,692 registered Republicans and 1,692 registered Independents. However, in Port St. Lucie, the Republicans outnumber Democrats by a 2,509 to 2,411 margin. A total of 883 persons are Independents in Port St. Lucie.

A breakdown of precincts in Port St. Lucie shows that in Precinct 20, the North Port Marina, 1,180 are registered Democrats, 1,209 are Republicans and 189 are Independents. Precinct 21, Spanish Lakes, has 650 Democrats, 707 Republicans and 109 Independents. At City Hall, Precinct 22, there are 483 Democrats, 763 Republicans and 146 Independents. Only at the Community Center, Precinct 23, do Democrats outnumber Republicans -- by a 1,118 to 830 margin, with Independents trailing at 219.

Business hour law appears to be dead

After numerous attempts to come up with an ordinance to control the operating hours of various businesses in Port St. Lucie, city council members voted three to two Tuesday to defeat the latest version of such an ordinance.

With the defeat of the latest ordinance proposal, it is expected no new attempts will be made to control business hours.

Initially, different opening and closing hours were proposed for businesses based on the zoning that applied to the land the businesses were on. For instance, businesses in areas zoned for large shopping centers would have been allowed to open early and stay open late, while businesses in smaller shopping areas or in residential areas would have been more tightly restricted.

On the advice of assistant city attorney Charles Dorfman last week, council members decided they only wanted an ordinance to apply to businesses located on lands zoned residential. So, on Tuesday the council members considered a law to limit hours of operation from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. for businesses in residential areas.

When the law was discussed, it was thought at first that it would apply to home businesses offering personal services, such as insurance. However, the more the law was discussed, the more it became apparent that it would apply only to one area. That area is the Southport Shopping Center, which council members recently rezoned as residential. However, as a result of the court case, the city had to issue two building permits for stores on the land.

When it was determined that this would be the only area affected by the law, City Attorney Spencer Gilbert labled the law "an exercise in futility." Then, council members voted three to two to defeat the proposed ordinance. Councilmen Schuyler Sharpe, Merle Anderson and Vice Mayor Mike Reeb voted against the measure and Mayor William McChesney and councilwoman Lolita Kernohan favored it.

138 permits in August

For the fourth month in a row, building permits issued in the city of Port St. Lucie have been in triple figures.

City Building Department officials recently released statistics for the month of August. During that month, a total of 138 permits were issued for single-family homes, and 51 permits were issued for additions to homes. The estimated value of the new homes is set at $3,358,844 and the value of the additions is set at $140,836. This resulted in a total of $32,530 collected by the city in August for building permit fees.

An all-time record of 164 permits in a month were recorded in may, beginning the string of triple figure months for the city. In June there were 141 permits issued and in July there were 100.

...Y GRAFFITI--is found on the wall of this unfinished home in the Windmill ...bdivision west of the Florida Turnpike in Port St. Lucie. Nobody seemed to know who put the happy message on the wall, but since the wall will eventually get an outer covering, nobody seems to care. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

Democratic primary stirs voters to action election season again, and on day, the politicians will briefly aking and listen to the voters .

you're a Democrat, there are a of races to cast ballots in during ept. 12 primary. And, if you're a ublican or a nonpartisan person, e are still several important races ve you opinion on.

the Democrat portion of the st Tuesday's election, there are sets of candidates seeking that y's nomination for the offices of ernor and lieutenant governor. The ts include Leroy eden and Maria Bob Graham and Wayne Mixson, Kirk and Mary Singleton, ert Shevin and Jim Glisson, Bruce ers and Charles Boyd, Hans ter and Manuel Arques, and Jim ms and Betty Castor.

nwhile, Republican voters will ded to pick either Jack Eckerd Paula Hawkins or Lou Fry and S. Cupus as that party's lieutenant rnor in the Nov. 7 general on.

ublicans won't be asked during ept. 12 primary to cast ballots in ther statewide races, but the erats will have choices in a four t contests. For secretary of Democrats Beverly Dozier, Jim George Firestone, Joe Little and el Renick are in the running. ner wins that race will face ican Andr Crenshal in the Nov. 7 general election.

are no Republicans at all for attorney general, so the r of the Sept. 12 primary will get h Democrats Alan Becker, Richard and Jim Smith are that post.

Dansby and Gerald Lewis, both ats, are the only candidates e comptroller, so whoever wins day primary has the job.

race for state treasurer, the is between Democrats Bill and Don Hazelton in the . The winner will run against Latham, Republican, in the election.

Incumbent Don Childers will face challenger Jack Scarola in the primary for the state senate District 28 seat. Both men are Democrats and both are from West Palm Beach. The winner will face Republican Billie Brooks of Riviera Beach in the general election.

There is one local race that will be decided on Tuesday. That's the contest for the county commission district four seat between Democrats Maggy Hurchalla and Dr. Ed Geary. Mrs. Hurchalla is the incumbent and is running on her record. She favors adoption of a master plan for the county and maintains in her ads that "No one has the right to turn Martin County into another Fort Lauderdale.

Her opponent, Dr. Geary, was appointed to the county commission in the early 70s to replace a suspended commissioner, but lost to Mrs. Hurchalla in the 1974 election. He favors an easterly route for I-95, a bridge from Cove Road to the as yet undeveloped state park on Jupiter Island, and his ads state he favors "economic development compatible with our environment."

There are no Republicans running for the district four county commission seat.

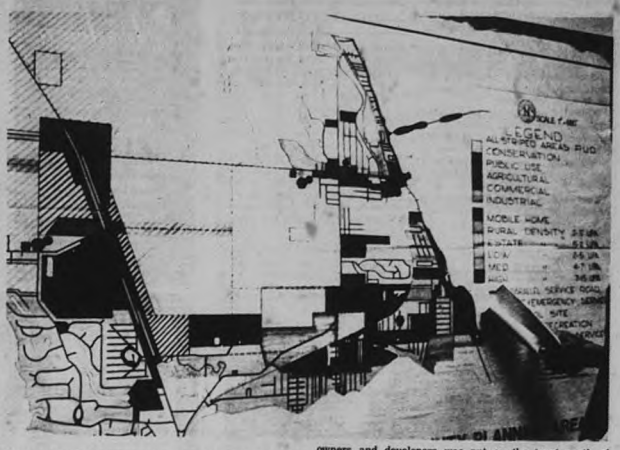
Regardless of your party affiliation, you can cast ballots in contests for a circuit judge post and for two school board seats.

Ken Sharp of Vero Beach, who has been a municipal judge and a public defender and who is the Indian River County School Board attorney, is facing Bruce Wilkinson of Stuart and Dean Tooker of Jensen Beach for a post as Circuit Judge.

Wilkinson has served as Chief Assistant Public Defender in charge of the Fort Pierce office and has also practiced privately.

Tooker was Martin County attorney for 11 years and was an assistant public defender for two years. He has been in private practice a number of years.

Norma Miller, Moria Moore and Mildred Perry are vying for the district one Martin County School Board seat, while incumbent Charles Covington faces Pete Marovich for the district five school board seat.



COMPREHENSIVE LAND USE MAP as outlined for the northern part of Martin County, including Jensen Beach, was the center of much controversy, at the hearings last week before the county commission. Particular emphasis by owners and developers was put on the tract north of Commercial Boulevard, east of U.S.1. According to Commissioner Frank Wacha, it would be a place for "a regional park instead of a lot of little parks." (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

IT'S NOT JERICHO, because the walls are coming up, not down. The progress on Harbor Bay Plaza, being built by developer David Gibson of Canada is definitely on the up and up, despite drainage and other problems which have beset the project. Gibson has predicted the center at the intersection of Sewall's Point Road and A-1-A will be open by December. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Fairwinds allows 20 units

Martin County commissioners agreed Tuesday to grant 20 certificates of occupancy for Fairwinds apartments (formerly Dolphins Bay) along the Jensen Beach causeway after a bond was accepted for improvements to the facility.

Local engineer Ken Ferrari noted that modifications to the Fairwinds water and sewer plant, work on a storage tank and installation of booster pumps was assured by the bonding and he also said a contract for the improvements has already been let.

Ferrari said the contractor should finish the modifications within 60 to 90 days.

In addition to allowing 20 units to be occupied, the county commissioners also authorized the Fairwinds owners to turn on electricity for all of the buildings to prevent mildew.

BLOOMER--There are still a few of the beautiful ...ping cereus along Indian River Drive in Jensen ...ring the day, the flower is folded. At night, the bloom opens into a gorgeous flower. It can be seen at night or early in the morning. The flower is a cactus plant that wraps itself around palm trees, growing up the trunk.

DWI charged car hits condo

Robert Gibson, 37, of 612 East Ocean Boulevard, Stuart, was charged with driving while intoxicated and careless driving following an accident last week when the Florida Power and Light Company car he was driving ran into River Vista condominiums in Jensen Beach.

Gibson, who was listed on the accident report as a FP&L supervisor, was driving north on Indian River Drive when the car veered across the intersection of Elaine St. and Indian River Drive, knocking out a concrete street marker. The car continued, running over a sprinkler system, hitting bushes around a sewer treatment plant, then striking a screen porch at apartment 103 of the River Vista condominiums. The accident occurred around 11:20 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 30.

Sheriff's deputy Ron Cucchiara reports that after the car hit the condominium building, Gibson backed up the car about 35 feet before it came to rest. Gibson reportedly declined medical treatment.

The deputy estimated damage at $500. His report did not state the owner of apartment 103.

PATH OF DESTRUCTION--This is where a Florida Power and Light Company car driven by Robert Gibson of Stuart went late last Wednesday night after the car veered off Indian River Drive. The vehicle knocked down a street marker and a lawn sprinkler, took out these bushes and fence around a sewage treatment plant, then continued into a screen porch of River Vista Condominium. Gibson was charged with driving while intoxicated and careless driving. (Photo by Sally Latham)

Mirror planning series

BY SALLY LATHAM

Retirement.

That is a pretty word or a dirty word, depending on one's point of view when that famous three score rolls around for most of us. Some people love the idea of kicking the work habit at the age of 65, and settling down to a life free from time clocks and work schedules.

The one thing we don't stop to consider when we're setting 65 as the jumping-off place from careers is that it is an artificial figure, set by the Roosevelt administration as part of the employment package: to help solve the enigma of depression, you were required to retire at 65 in order to move over for the meager army of unemployment marching through the breach.

That is no longer true. The New Deal, the Fair Deal, the New Frontiers, et al, have come and gone.

The Mirror, awfully aware of the many "retirees" who are working harder at serving their communities is exploring through a series the full depth of this goldmine as yet not fully plumbed.

THE OWNER-OCCUPANT INVESTOR

QUESTION: If I buy a small apartment building, what are the advantages of living in one unit versus renting all of them and living elsewhere? I prefer to live in one unit & want the investment to be as profitable as possible.

ANSWER: The advantages of being a "owner-occupant" in a small apartment house are numerous. You can oversee your investment from day to day. Banks look favorably upon loans for owner-occupied buildings, which are usually well maintained and well managed. You could even acquire a problem property and, by living on the premises and closely overseeing its operation, increase its value by making judicious improvements and attracting good tenants.

The major argument against living in your apartment building is that you unnecessarily limit your selection to properties that are located in the area where you want to live and that contain a rental unit with the space and amenities which you want. For this reason you may find that you will want to acquire a building, rent all the apartments and use the proceeds to offset the cost of separate accommodations.

If you have found a suitable building in a convenient location that has the features you and your family want, and if you don't mind living in close association with your tenants, then go ahead and move in!

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-4747, or stop by

Don't let him kid you, Bob's not ordinary

BY SALLY LATHAM

Robert Russell, commissioner of Sewall's nt and one of its key leaders in dealing th the small but exclusive town's rowing, will tell you his background before ayement was "quite ordinary," should you k him.

ll neither Bob Russell nor his beautiful
e Doris approaches the "ordinary," either w or in their past. They are of the new ned — people who in retirement years are ving more of themselves to the life and ality of their community than they did en they were actively involved in their reers.

If you have watched and listened to Bob ussell from a reporter's vantage point week ter week and month after month as he sits the bench of the Town of Sewall's Point mmission, you know that here is a man ncerned with the welfare of his mmunity, making judgments based on perienced and considered opinion, dirced from the biased self-interest of anger men.

You know that when he weighs an issue, ether it be a matter of overtime for town ployees or the future of a multi-million dollar shopping center, it comes from a deep font of acquired knowledge about good business.

Yet it is offered with a good-natured twinkle. Bob Russell has that rare ability to take the issue seriously without taking himself seriously.

If you have the even greater privilege of visiting him and his delightful wife in his home, you discover the reason for this quality making him such an asset to his fellow citizens. Both Bob and Doris have Kipling's elephant's-child insatiable curiosity about everything and everybody coming their way.

This, if you examine it, is the Fountain of Youth. People like the Russell. don't have time to grow old. They're too busy with the excitement of life.

Bob obviously doesn't consider his "Time and a half" task of serving on the Town of Sewall's Point Commission as an onerous duty. When he and Doris came to this part of Florida, both of them looked on it not as a place to put up their feet and relax but as a place to grow in.

"I was a member of the Kiwanis, and the Kiwanians took on the community swimming pool as a project," he said. "We worked on the fund-raising drive — we raised $100,000, and the county gave $100,000. It was finally built, which thrilled us all."

That's how he got his feet wet, from a community-involvement point. But his whole life has been built on a doer's philosophy.

A graduate of the University of Illinois in 1937, Bob Russell majored in journalism, which probably gave him his sympathetic and tolerant attitude toward the press.

"But I went to work for Marshall Fields in Chicago, writing copy," he told The Mirror, relaxing in the warmly homey surroundings of the Russell living room made totally private by the light-and-shadow of an atrium on one side and the swimming pool on the other.

"Then came World War II, and I spent six years with the Army in the South Pacific."

After the War, he went back to Fields, working in sales and promotion. Shortly thereafter, his branch of that giant in the business and publishing field merged with the E. F. MacDonald Corp. of Dayton, Ohio.
That switched him into merchandising, sales promotion and the larger field of incentive selling which has become the basis for much of the post-war business structure.

His lucky day was that Day of the Blind Date.

"There I was, an old bachelor at the age of 30. A friend introduced me to Doris Larsen — she was a commercial photographer's model and in TV in its early days — she had a children's program."

Doris, whose parents came to this country from Sweden, was definitely a beautiful
"Svenska." She had a proud heritage in her family on both sides — including the rare
Scandinavian beauty. The very American Robert, whose artistic mother left him with an appreciation for his cultural inheritance, and the very Swedish Doris, with her inherent appreciation for the fine arts and crafts of European origin, have melded an unique charm into the home they've created together.

In addition to the pleasure they get from occasional visits from the son and grandchildren, now living in Houston, Tex., the Russells share a love for animals. Bob has for years been an equestrian buff. A Mason, Bob had the thrill of being a member of the Shrine Mounted Patrol, which twice pranced its way through the Tournament of Roses Parade. On the wall of his den is a portrait of his "Goldie," a palamino who was a "sweetie." You can tell she was by the loving softness of those eyes.

Their present quadruped member of the household is a very possessive but warm-hearted German Shepherd, at 10 years of age both a pampered pet and a protector. If you love dogs, as this reporter does, he's your friend. But don't try to intrude.

Doris, animal lover that she is, is active in the Martin County Animal Shelter.

"But I don't dare go down there often. I want to bring them all home."

She is also a born green-thumber. The whole Russell house is rife with plants she has grown from seed or from pineapple tops.

"I'll try anything," she says. And it usually grows.

Bob didn't consciously go out "to go out for politics." At a time when the small, incorporated town of Sewall's Point was going through a period of political problems, he had already been recognized as a responsible leader of great calibre.

"In 1978, I was approached by a couple of men, along with Ed Gluckler and Scrappy Crawford. We agreed to run and we won."

True, his involvement in the community affairs takes up an inordinate amount of time.

"I used to like to go fishing, but the job is so time consuming — I stop in at Town Hall every day, and there's always a lot to read, to keep ahead of it."

But it's obvious he wouldn't trade it for anything. When you add the catalyst of contribution to the mellowness of know-how, the mildew of age doesn't stand a chance."

AND DORIS RUSSELL bask in the afternoon sunshine outside their luxury Point home. Most of the greenery and landscaping around the pool and in atrium of their little kingdom has been the handiwork of Doris, who is a ber of the Stuart and Satin Leaf Garden Clubs.

A BENEVOLENT LANDLADY, and an unusual one, is making an international incident out of a honeymoon cruise for Hedako Koto, one of the lovely and petite Japanese hostesses at Benahana on Sewall's Point. Dottie (Mrs. Leonard) Childs, owner of the stately and historic Castle Hill which was built for Queen Marie of Roumania, has guest cottages which she has made available on a limited basis to tenants. One of her renters is Hedako, who is just the size of the patrician gentlewoman. When Hedako needed a gown (her wardrobe's entirely oriental) for the Captain's Dinner aboard the Emerald Seas, Mrs. Childs turned personal dresser and lent Hedako a gown which has seen balls for the great and famous. And Dottie, a perfectionist, wouldn't let Hedako go without coaching on everything down to the last flick of the mantilla. No tenant ever had it so good. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

FOR THE CHRISMONS TREE—these busy women of the Community Church are not wasting hot weather time by complaining about the heat. For months they've been making these exclusive ornaments for their Christmas trees which will be laden with them, come the Holy Season. They aren't just ornaments -- they are special symbols of the Light of the World (Christ-plus Monogram) which tell the story of the life of the Savior. Copyrighted by The Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Ascension of Danville, Va., the Chrismons have to be made in the special way denoted by the "mother church," and they can never be sold. But thanks to the ladies of the Community Church, they'll add greater glory to the Community Church tree, come Christmastide. Left to right are Terese Wittnebert, Helen Richardson, Lolita Kehrli and Sandra Emery.

First of Martin County's savings plans let you be a smart saver. You can put some of your savings in a regular account where they will be immediately available, yet earn the highest allowable interest. Then you can invest other funds in good return, short term certificates. For higher yields, that will help build a nest egg for you, there are a variety of longer term certificates to choose from.

Whichever plan, or combination of plans, you choose, your savings earn interest compounded daily and are safely insured up to $40,000 by an agency of the federal government.

...W DOCTORS—Two groups of doctors from Fort Pierce ...ently announced they will be opening branch offices at ... Port St. Lucie Medical Center in the middle of next ...nth. The two groups are Radiology Associates and Orthopaedic Associates, shown above are, from the left, Dr. Michael Lavine of Radiology Associates, Dr. Scott Baden and Dr. William Stolzer of Orthopaedic Associates, and Gary Gerlack, operator of the medical center. Fort Pierce doctor groups to open in PSL

"I think we may have cracked the ...t this time," said Gary Gerlak last week after a press conference at the Port St. Lucie Medical Center.

During the conference, two groups of Fort Pierce doctors announced that they'll be setting up branch offices at the center.

Gerlak, operator of the center, has been wooing Fort Pierce doctors for quite some time. But until last week, none had set up practice at the Port St. Lucie center.

The center began in August, 1978, and from time to time one of the center's supporters, Fred Wiggin, has complained that Fort Pierce doctors were snubbing the center. He also charged officials were draggin their feet on granting staff privileges at Lawnwood Medical Center for the doctors that were locating at the Port St. Lucie Medical Center.

Last week, at the press conference, the topic of staff privileges drew few comments. Gerlak noted that it was a matter between the individual doctors and the hospital and he noted that some of his doctors have, after a wait, been given staff privileges.

Gerlak's comment about the cracking of the gut apparently was a reference to finally gaining acceptance by at least two groups of Fort Pierce doctors.

Announcing that they will be opening satellite offices in the center around the middle of October were doctors John Sullivan, William Stolzer and Scott Baden of Orthopaedic Associates and doctors George Theodrou, Robert Dimmett and Richard Stern of Radiology Associates. Also with Radiology Associates will be Dr. Michael Lavine. In the case of both groups, main offices will remain in Fort Pierce.

Dr. Stolzer said Orthopaedic Associates decided to move into the Port St. Lucie area because the doctors already have a lot of patients from this city and because of the rapid growth of the city.

The new doctors coming to the center from Fort Pierce all have staff privileges at Lawnwood Medical Center.

Gerlak commented during the press conference that 14 of his 21 offices at the center are now filled and that several other doctors should be signing up for offices soon. Also, he pointed out that Stephen Licata recently opened Port St. Lucie Medical Laboratory at his center.

Rio Lindo meeting is Monday, Sept. 18

The date of the next meeting of the Rio Lindo Garden Club in Port St. Lucie was incorrectly listed in the Port St. Lucie Community Center calendar in last week's edition of the Mirror.

The calendar stated the meeting would be on Sept. 11, but it is actually to be held from 10 a.m. to noon on Monday, Sept. 18.

ANNUAL ANNIVERSARY SALE
SEPTEMBER 4th THRU SEPTEMBER 30th

PHASE 1

1974 ... Ah-h h ... yes, that was a grand ol' year! A time when 3 local people, long established in the furniture and design field, teamed together in introducing to our community a home furnishing decor with an atmosphere of refinement that reflects the ultimate in luxury for the local homemaker. The Furniture Center has always maintained high standards of quality while making sure their prices were exceptionally modest by comparison.

—Using the age old philosophy "the customer is always right" as their main guideline; the Furniture Center has grown rapidly the past 5 years. Now it is time for the Furniture Center to move over temporarily and allow the owners to bring to the community another concept of merchandising. From our hearts ... we thank "you," our customers.

PHASE 2 - PRESENT

Great Plans, but if any of you have built recently then you understand the problems that confront you in constructing a building today ... Our new building was to be erected by the first of September which would have given us sufficient time to be moved in for our October Opening. Merchandise has been selected and ordered months ago from the High Point, Dallas and Chicago markets. Shipments of many items can not be held, so we are having quite a problem in warehousing. However, each problem creates some benefits and this one is to benefit you "our customer." We must make more room so we must sacrifice much of the merchandise now in stock to make room for the new furniture, much of which is now on the way. On the other hand there is really no nicer way to celebrate our Anniversary than to give you, our friends, even greater values. How better can we say thanks for the pleasure we have in serving you the last few years.

PHASE 3 - FUTURE

Springer's Furniture Center, will officially open its newly located store this Fall 1978. The completion of our new store makes Springers the largest Interior Design oriented store in the area and one of the largest on the east coast of Florida. One of the highlights of this new 22,000 square-foot store is the creation of the color - coordinated model rooms in traditional, modern, oriental, eclectic as well as featuring the fashionable Florida look and the famous Drexel Etcetera Gallery. They have been designed to give the homemaker ideas for the decoration of her home. Drexel, Heritage, Henredon, Century, Woodmark, Thomasville, Hekman, and Simmons are just a few of the leading manufacturers and importers whose furniture you will find in room settings throughout the store.

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE a cool head on a hot day, particularly is you're a bird of intellectual feather. Howard Lew, who makes himself as much at home indoors as out, finds the window fan the perfect spot to peruse Irving Wallace's People's Encyclopedia while keeping an eye on the competition outside. It didn't take Howard five minutes to discover and take advantage of the open ingress to the living room created by a broken screen. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Free boat course will begin Oct. 3

The good news....384 fewer boating accidents in 1977 compared to 1976. The bad news...48 more fatalities for the same period according to the Coast Guard annual boating statistical report. But the fatality rate per 100,000 boats dropped from 9.8 in 1976 to 9.6 in 1977....an all time low.

In their continuing effort to lower these statistics, the St. Lucie River Power Squadron, the local unit of the U.S. Power Squadrons, will offer their annual free boating course at the Student Union Building o Martin County High School beginning Tuesday evening, October 3 according to an announcement by Gerald E. McMaken, commander. Registration is scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m. and classes at 7:30 p.m.

No advance registration is required. The course is open to men, women and interested teenagers. Ownership of a boat is not necessary for participation. Ample parking and seating facilities are available.

Comprising a broad, basic range of knowledge needed for skillful operation of all types of boats, the course will offer ten lectures to be presented on subsequent Tuesday evenings.

The weekly classes, taught by trained volunteer instructors, will feature the following subjects: boat handling under normal and adverse conditions, seamanship and common emergencies, rules of the road, aids to navigation, compass and chart familiarization, running lights and equipment, boat trailering and river boating. All subjects are continually updated to conform to current rules and regulations. Groups of six students are assigned to an instructor who remains with them for the entire course assuring adequate individual attention to each student.

Why Tuff-Kote can effectively rustproof used cars.

Anyone tells you they can rustproof their used cars in one step, start asking questions. One-step rustproofing may look like it coats the metal on your car. But if it doesn't penetrate existing rust, it can seal in moisture and air, and create more rust damage than you may have had in the first place. Only Tuff-Kote uses a exclusive two-step system which stops rust cold in both new and used cars. First, Tuff-Kote professionals apply a unique penetrant that creeps through all welds, seams and crevices. It displaces moisture, and goes right down to the bare metal to stop any existing rust. Second, Tuff-Kote applies a special abrasion-resistant sealant that locks out moisture and prevents any new rust from starting.

If you have a used car, your Tuff-Kote Dinol dealer can effectively rustproof it. And if you have a new car, your Tuff-Kote dealer is the only one who should.

Tuff-Kote Dinol

Our two-step rustproofing is one better.

Ed 'Doc' Geary
Your Primary Reason to Vote
September 12th

An Open Letter to supporters of Ed 'Doc' Geary:

Dear Friends,

I have been trying to write personal notes of thanks to all my contributors, but this week, when the list grew so rapidly, I realized this was an impossible task, so I'm taking this opportunity to thank you publicly.

It is very gratifying to see so many people willing to give to help Martin County be a better place in which to live.

I have been encouraged by the diversity of backgrounds of the donors, and I believe this indicates that people from all walks of life are interested in once again approaching our problems with a positive attitude.

May I ask just a little more of you? Please continue to speak to your friends about my candidacy and ask them to call me if they have any questions about my stand on any issue.

THEN,

URGE THEM TO VOTE ON SEPTEMBER 12th.

We can win if we all make the supreme effort to enlist every vote possible.

Let's make this a PRIMARY VICTORY!

Elect Positive Leadership!

...rmine that the highest vote getter, Ken Sharp, would have to be in a runoff, as he was close to having a majority of all votes cast. However, if the results of the absentee ballots did dictate a runoff, it was still not known who would win the right to face Sharp. Voters from Martin, St. Lucie, Indian River and Okeechobee counties participated in the judicial balloting, and totals from those four counties, with 1462 absentee ballots still to be counted, showed Sharp leading with 8646 to 6643 for Tooker and 4328 for Wilkinson.

In St. Lucie County there were 265 absentee ballots, Indian River County reported 553, Okeechobee County had 138, and Martin County had 506.

Except in Martin County, where voters cast 2221 ballots for Tooker, 1457 for Sharp and 1342 for Wilkinson, Sharpe was the top vote winner in each county. His home, Indian River, county gave him 4344 ballots to 980 for Wilkinson and 788 for Tooker. St. Lucie County voters went 2353 for Sharp, 1804 for Wilkinson and 1276 for Tooker. In Okeechobee County, the vote was 514 for Sharp, 403 for Wilkinson, and 355 for Tooker.

In other action Tuesday night, St. Lucie County Democrats voted somewhat counter to the statewide trend in the race for governor, casting 1980 for Robert Shevin, who lead the seven-way race statewide, but gaeve their second highest number of votes, 1117, to Hans Tanzler. Bob Graham was second in statewide results and is assured of an Oct. 5 runoff against Shevin. Other county totals in the governor's race show 988 for Graham, 702 for Bruce Smathers, 580 for Jim Williams, 410 for Claud Kirk and 135 for Leroy Eden.

Republican voters didn't have must to vote for or against, as only the race for governor was contested. Jack Eckerd handily outpolled Lou Frey by a 2128 to 726 margin locally and was also an easy winner statewide. So, he will face the winner of the Shevin-Graham runoff.

County results for the Secretary of State race show Beverly Dozier with 1024, Jim Fair with 661, George Firestone with 1195, Joe Little with 699, and Richard Renick with 1207. Statewide, Dozier will be in a runoff with Firestone and the winner will face Republican Ander Crenshaw in the Nov. 7 general election.

St. Lucie County voters cast 2594 ballots for Jim Smith, 1286 for Barry Richard, and 751 for Alan Becker. Smith also won the race statewide.

Incumbent Gerald Lewis was the favorite here, with 3550 votes to 658 for Don Dansby, and was also favored throughout the state. He has won the seat, as he has no general election opposition.

Bill Gunter was reelected statewide for Insurance Commissioner and was also the local preference, racking up 3445 votes to 1276 for Don Hazelton. In the 28th state senate district, incumbent Don Childers easily won over John Scarola throughout the district and will face Republican Billie Brooks of Riviera Beach in the general election. Locally it was 2002 for Childers and 1141 for Scarola.

He said if this happens, the landowners would each assume responsibility for maintenance of the property immediately abutting their own, but said the proposal is for GDC to continue maintenance of the swales in the area.

"I am asking that the city decline GDC's offer," he said, adding that with the area closed to the public, noise and trespassing would be better controlled, landowners could then landscape around the lake. "And, I might add that the majority of the propertyowners ideas of landscaping aren't consistent with my own."

Mayor William McChesney noted that the Fiorenta Pines II Property Owners Association is in the process of giving up control of greenbelt drainage areas and as a result the city is assuming the maintenance burder. He said if the lake area land was given to Schweiger's group, sometime in the future, members of the association may be asking the city to take over the maintenance burden.

Council member Schuyler Sharpe said anytime the city is offered a 21-acre park that includes a lake, the city ought to take it and said the tract in question "would make an excellent passive park."

The discussion concluded with McChesney saying council members would take Schweiger's proposal into consideration whenever they talk with GDC about the park site offer.

Council seeks bids on city hall loan

After hearing the presidents of two banks contradict each other, Port St. Lucie city council members voted Monday night to seek bids from seven local banks for a $600,000 loan to build a new city hall.

The bids are expected to be turned in by Friday and will be opened in a special meeting at 2 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 20.

Jim Sheehan, president of the First National Bank of Fort Pierce, had made a written proposal on Sept 1 to have his bank serve as lead bank in loaning the money at a 7.5 per cent annual interest rate. Last week, when council members considered that proposal, they decided to contact other banks to see if the loan could be secured at a lower interest rate.

Monday night Sheehan and two other bank presidents, Herbert Haughton of Port St. Lucie Bank and Thomas Munday of Sun Bank of St. Lucie County, met with the city council.

By acting as lead bank, First National agreed to invite other local banks to participate in loaning the money to the city, and had agreements from Haughton's and Mundy's banks to join in the loan at the 7.5 per cent rate.

As the three bank presidents explained various methods of financing, council member Schuyler Sharpe commented that he had nothing against Sheehan's proposal, but said he felt the city should have sought closed bids from a number of banks.

Mayor William McChesney noted that 14 banks had been contacted and none had offered a better deal and he said he thought it was bad business practice to ask for bids after Sheehan had, in effect, made a bid.

"When the city asked me, based on a specific set of conditions, we came up with a rate. If Mr. Haughton has another offer, let me hear it," Sheehan said after Haughton had told council members that a loan could go for from 5 5 to 8 per cent, depending on a variety of criteria.

Later in the discussion, Haughton said, "Our bank has not had the opportunity to bid the loan. If this request had come to us in proper form, in writing, we would have made a bid," he said.

Mayor McChesney then read a letter from Haughton dated July 17, which stated the Port St. Lucie Bank wold "be pleased to act as the lead bank" and noted "The interest rate would be determined on closing and would probably be one quarter of one per cent higher than the then market rate for municipal bonds rated "A" by Moody's with similar maturities."

Haughton said that was not a bid. "No one has requested of me a bid on a specific loan with a specific dollar amount for a specific period of time.

Sheehan commented that when he had been working up his proposal, he contacted other local bank presidents to see if they wanted to join in on the loan and said when he told Haughton the loan would be at 7.5 per cent, "He (Haughton) said, 'gosh, couldn't you get the rate up higher?'"

A short time later Sheehan left the meeting, saying he had company and needed to join them.

After Sheehan left, Haughton said he didn't want to get into a bidding war, but said when Sheehan had called him "my reaction was that the rate was a little high."

Mayor McChesney pointed out that Sheehan had said Haughton's reaction was the opposite of that, and Haughton said, "I'm not sure why Mr. Sheehan said that."

Finally, after council member Merle Anderson chastized fellow council members for getting a reputation as "wishey-washey" by changing its mind so often, council members voted four to nothing to ask for closed bids to be turned in by Friday. Councilwoman Lolita Kernohan is on vacation. The seven banks that will be asked to bid on the loan include the three represented at Monday's meeting, plus Stuart National Bank, First National Bank and Trust of Stuart, Indian River Federal Savings and Loan and First Federal Savings and Loan of St. Lucie County.

$7 million in year 2000

Regardless of what bank is selected to loan $600,000 to the city of Port St. Lucie to build a new city hall, and regardless of what the interest on the loan turns out to be, the building is sure to cost less today than it would if built in the year 2000.

While discussing loan proposals with city council members Monday night, First National Bank of Fort Pierce president Jim Sheehan commented that inflation is on the rise and loan money is getting tighter. He concluded, "Your city hall would cost you $7 million to build in the year 2000, based on the current rate of inflation."

City hall construction estimates have ranged from $500,000 to $750,000 since the building has been under consideration by the council, and as of last week, the latest total cost figure for the new city hall stands at $882,498.

That figure includes $756,900 for the construction bid awarded recently, $37,098 in engineering and architectural fees, $17,000 in furnishings, $10,000 for landscaping, and $1,500 for material testing, and $59,557 as a contingency fee.

The city already has $270,000 set aside for the building and is seeking to borrow up to $600,000, with a provision that if all of that amount is not needed, it won't be borrowed.

Groundbreaking for the new city hall was held last month, but work on the project can not start until the loan is secured. It is expected to take nine months to build the structure, which will be located at the northwest corner of Port St. Lucie and Airoso boulevards. The council approved the site plan for the building Monday night.

DEDICATION services for the Morningside Friends Church will be conducted this Sunday at the church in Port St. Lucie. The ceremony will be conducted at 3 p.m. at the church, which is located on Morningside Drive a little north of Port St. Lucie Boulevard. Rev. J. Daniel Frost will conduct the service and the public is invited. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

Seniors divide power on basis of security

...itor's note: Mirror corre... Ernie Curwen surveyed ...r citizens at a recent gathering on ...ial preferences.)

BY ERNIE CURWEN

...r citizens have been much ...erned with voting this past week, ...d no wonder, as their age group has ...for the best voter turnout of any age ...up. In fact when the total voter ...rnout is running at 40 percent, the ...s generally have a 65-80 percent ...ord. That is important when it is ...ized that Florida has around 40 ...t seniors...over 2 million ...s. They could have enormous ...r if they should ever vote as a ...; however, their varied interests ...cause them to split up on most issues.

There are the 1980 retirees who have to struggle to make a $380 social security check and a small 1980 income level pension make ends meet in a market place with all items costing 2 to 3 times as much as they did when they retired.

Then there are the ex-union people whose social security checks may not be tops, but they have quite adequate pension checks and their carry over fringe benefits relieve them of many problems.

Also, there are the 1970 retirees with $800 social security checks and industrial or federal pensions, often suppling them with incomes of $1,000 to $1,500 per month.

As the seniors talk, it can be seen how they divide on the many current issues. Take inflation first: the 1980 retirees feel that all else must take a back seet; ex-union people want it controlled but not at the expense of increased unemployment; and the 1970 retirees, who only feel a 10 or 20 percent increase and have adequate funds for that, generally feel reduced taxes is the number one problem.

Then, as the seniors get on their favorite subject, health costs, it can be seen: the 1980 retirees say almost anything would be better than what they have now; ex-union folks are not much worried about this as their fringe benefits give them cradle to death coverage; and the 1970 retirees are concerned as health cost care is climbing faster than cost of living and could be a problem later.

Another item the seniors really chewed over last week dealt with teac her strikes.

The 1980 retirees often remarked that about their 25 to 40 pupil classes in old drafty buildings, with teachers the lowest paid of any professions. They learned to cope with depressions, a couple of wars and develop the technology to put a man on the moon.

The ex-union people feel that strikes are the only weapon the worker has and nothing should be done to curtail their effectiveness. The 1970 retirees say, "the nerve o f those teachers setting an example for their students," that "it's okay to disregard the law if it's not in your favor," and "violence is always justified to get what you want."

Also, some quoted from a weekly magazine, "More and more critics are charging teachers, whose salaries have risen and whose jobs are protected by union contracts, must shoulder much of the blame" for the poor showing of their pupils on recent evaluation testing.

So, it can be seen that each issue has many sides and although get out to vote in large numbers, they do not vote as a unit.

Seniors report that a number of Haitans are working in this area, some around condominiums, and their surly, unsatisfactory performance has distressed some of the residents of those condominiums. If any such cases are observed they should be reported to the Immigration Service and the Haitian Consel in Miami as that a few won't give the-majority a bad name. If they are illegal aliens they would be subject to deportation.

Hurchalla buries Geary in primary

BY SALLY LATHAM

Maggy Hurchalla, Martin County's outspoken and occasionally peppery woman county commissioner, defended her title at the polls hands-down Tuesday, in a decisive victory over contender Dr. Ed Geary, favorite of the real estate interests. The unofficial vote count was 3428 for Hurchalla and 1705 for Geary.

Hurchalla took every precint in the county, despite overt attacks from such real estate leaders as Jensen Beach's Ransom Tilton, who contended that she "voted against everything that was good for the county." Since winning the seat from Geary in 1974, Hurchalla has become known as the voice of the conservationists.

In the school board race, Norma Miller was the strong winner in District 1, and incumbent Charles Covington appears to have retained his seat in District 5. The unofficial Count:

District 1, Norma Miller - 3032, Moira Moore - 1479, Mickie Perry - 1729.

District 5: Charles Covington - 3181 and Peter Marovich - 2713.

It is possible, though not probable, that the latter race could be upset by the absentee ballots, Supervisor of Elections Peggy Robbins said Wednesday morning.

"We sent out 650 absentee ballots and got back 506," Robbins said. "It could make a difference."

The absentee votes were being counted at press time Wednesday.

Ken Sharp of Indian River County is the unofficial primary winner in the Circuit Judge contest. Although Jensen Beach's Dean Tooker, former Martin county attorney, got a strong vote here, Sharp walked away with the seat in St. Lucie and Indian River Counties. The count in Martin County: Ken Sharp - 1861, Dean Tooker - 2870, and Bruce Wilkinson - 1808.

However, there will be a run-off election between Sharp and Tooker, according to election officials, unless the absentee ballots all go in Sharp's direction. But this is unlikely, officials say, because Martin County has more absentee votes than either of the other two, which will undoubtedly help Tooker.

As of Wednesday noon, Sharp's four-county count was 8548, with 6963 for Tooker and 4228 for Wilkinson.

Other Martin County unofficial totals were:

State Senate: Don Childers - 2971, Jack Scarola - 1508.

Governor - Democratic: LeRoy Eden - 144, Robert Graham - 1728, Claude Kirk - 278, Robert Shevin - 1638, Bruce Smathers - 484, Maxs Tanzler - 661, Jim Williams - 291.

Governor - Republican: Jack Eckerd - 2878, Lou Frey - 1007.

Attorney General: Alan Backer - 773, Barry Richard - 1020, Jim Smith - 2108.

Insurance Commissioner-Treasurer RACE WAS Bill Gunter - 2830, Don Haxleton - 131

Comptroller: Don Dansby - 767 and Gerald Lewis - 3118.

Chamber chafing over sand and roads

BY SALLY LATHAM

...e Jensen Beach Chamber of ...merce board is getting more and ...re up in arms about the ...mercial Street sand mining ...ration, and the continuous run of ...ladded sand trucks hauling loads ...m the Jensen Beach Causeway, and ...Monday night's meeting, they ...ussed the plan to do something ...ut it.

...ile the county has no policy on sand ...ing," boardmember Jon Chicky ...d, "eventually we'll see the whole ...n tracked away."

The sand "hill" which runs the length of the river from the savannas south is one of the area's chief drawing cards, Chicky contended, and many people choose to settle here because of the unique elevation. He agreed that people should be allowed to do what they want to do with their own property, within reason.

"But it's the place where you draw the line between development and ripping off the land," he said. "It's up to us to get the proper laws so it doesn't happen again."

Boardmember Ron Mitchell, president of Jensen Beach Bank, said that a site plan should have been required of the owners, when they announced their intention of hauling off the sand. John Heyburn, who is the community's old faithful at sitting in on all county commission meetings, said no site plan had been requested for the sand tract, owned by James Erskine Jr. who has an Outdoor Resorts of America address.

Another thorn in the flesh of the Chamber, on which the county commission has been dragging its feet, is the hoped-for widening of the intersection of Commercial Street and Savanna Road. Chamber president Fred Meeker made it plain that the community had been stalled far too long on the location, one of the area's worst traffic bottlenecks.

"This Chamber wants action on strip stoplights from Commercial at Indian River Drive to Savanna Road," Meeker said impatiently. "Sewall's Point Road got done, and Jensen is still sitting here with an intersection you couldn't get goats across."

The board voted to send a letter to the county commission pressing the issue. The strip, all members of the board concurred, must get county attention before the seasonal tourist influx.

The whole traffic headache within the Jensen-Rio area must be given top priority, boardmembers agreed.

Part of the problem, Mitchell noted, is the responsibility of the business people in the downtown Jensen area.

"We have got to convince the business people they want it one-way," Mitchell said. "We are getting caught up in progress--we are taking a little fishing village that's close to becoming a city, and the streets can't handle it."

Referring to the traffic portion of the Comprehensive Plan, Meeker noted that three alternatives have been considered. The first one, making Ricou Plaza one-way to the west and the portion of Commercial Street from Palmetto one-way to the east, was recently vetoed by downtown businesses. The second, proposed by the county planning department, would have taken the traffic flow from the west end of the causeway acvross the hill over Skyline Drive and into Commercial at a point near the large shopping center.

"This was abandoned as unfeasible dollarwise," Meeker recalled.

It would also have turned the eastern Commercial downtown area into a ghost town, Mitchell interjected.

The third, and probably the most practical, would cut inland from Indian River Drive at the causeway, but would connect with Palmetto, the north-south street on the east side of the FEC railroad tracks. This last route, he contended, would be the most practical and beneficial to the entire business community.

The board also intends to needle the commission into four-laning Commercial from the track to Savanna Road, asking for four-laning on west to U.S. 1 later.

Red vines are a threat to SP

The west coast of Florida is perennially threatened with its Red Tide. Sewall's Point, the exclusive little incorporated community at the tip of the Indian River peninsula, is threatened with its botannical equivalent--the Red Vine.

At last week's TownCommission, John B. Nairn of the planning and zoning commission warned of the encroachment of "dodder," a parasitical vine which has already taken over many of the acres south of Stuart along U.S. 1.

The red-leafed plant, a member of the morning glory family, has a way of locking in on trees, shrubs and other plants, and ultimately strangling its victims to death, Nairn said.

"It should be cleaned out wherever it is found," he said. "The plants should be burned so the birds can't carry the seeds".

It is particularly untimely, it was noted, because Sewall's Point is on the verge of establishing a nature walk on Melody Hill, the tract of land recently by the city for recreational purposes. Melody Hill, purchased from Marion Monroe is ultimately due for use as either playing fields or construction of such town facilities as a fire-hall or other public buildings.

In the meanwhile, however, Satin Leaf Garden Circle, headed by Mrs. Donald Graham, and John Shannon, urban forester for the Florida State Forestry Division, have been working toward clearing out the undergrowth on the tract

At an August meeting, Shannon offered to supervise construction of a nature walk, and to place placards on the trees identifying them. The lot contains beautiful examples of Royal Palms, Coconut Palms, Sable Palms, Mangroves and a type of Palmetto that is on the endangered list.

Now, according to Nairn, it may be even more endangered by the "dodder." With the help of Martin County Public Library research librarian Shirley Grubb, it was determined that Dodder is, botanically speaking, Convolvulaceae, of the genus cuscuta. Quoting Dr. Ed. Menninger's book of vines, Mrs. Grubb described it as being found world-wide on trees and shrubs. Its yellow, orange, brown and white tendrils are the killers, spreading over the desirable vegetation and strangling it.

Nairn says it has already taken hold on wooded areas on south Sewall's Point Road and River Road, and if it isn't nipped in the bud it could become a major menace to the community's natural beauty.

Bowling for MD highlights weekend

BY DONNIE WILKIE

Before this weekend, nobody knew who Harry Ketcham or Frank Trevino were, aside from a few friends. But by Sunday morning, the two bowlers' names were spreading around the Sunesy morning, the two bowlers' names were spreading around the tri-county area nealy as fast as the new Pope's was in the Vatican.

Ketcham began bowling at 9 p.m. last Wednesday evening at the Fort Pierce Bowl and bowled for a total of 60 consecutive hours before abandoning his world record attempt at 9 a.m. Saturday morning.

In Jensen Beach, Trevino, two years older than the 25-year-old Ketcham, began bowling at 9 a.m. Saturday, almost the exa... time that Ketcham quit, and he bowled for 24 hours before stopping at 9 a.m. Sunday morning.

But the best part of this whole situation was that both bowlers were rolling their bowling balls for the fight against Muscular Dystrophy. Ketcham was attempting to break the record, as listed in the 1978 edition of the Guiness Book of World Records, of 114 hours. That record was set last year.

But after completing ust under half of that, the determined bowler from Fort Pierce was forced to stop by the marathon athlete's worst enemy--severe swelling, in both his feet and the fingers on his right hand.

"I just couldn't go any further," said a disconsolate and spent Ketcham after giving up the battle Saturday. "I'm upset over quitting. It's the biggest thing I've ever done in my life and I'm just sorry I couldn't do what I had in mind."

By the time he quit, Ketcham's fingers were practically locked together, although he wore a special glove throughout the entire 60 hours.

According to unofficial calculations, the two bowlers combined to raise about $2000 for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

New area maps available now

10,000 area maps of Jensen Beach and Stuart have been reveived by the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce. They will soon be distributed to participating merchants and will be sold for fifty cents, according to Helen Richardson, Chamber executive secretary.

The map project was funded by the Jensen Beach Bank, and was completed by the Dolph Map Company of Ft. Lauderdale.

Merchants may obtain the maps from the Chamber office.

Tigers to meet Forest Hill

Last week, the Martin County Tigers found out what it is like to be a winner--a big winner. But now they must keep up the good work, and that will be a difficult task against many of the teams of the Suncoast Conference's Eastern Division. Teams like Fort Pierce Central, Lake Worth and Boca Raton are established powerhouses, and there are others who are eager for the chance to end the Tiger fairy tale just one chapter into the story.

One of the is Forest Hill.

The Falcons seem to have come up with an excellant offensive line this season, which they have failed to do the past three seasons. This means trouble for Suncoast East opponents, because lurking behind the line is Senior running back Greg Anderson, a candidate for All-area honors and a possible Player of the Year selection.

The Falcons looked very good in winning the game 21-0, and this week will host the Tigers in the second game of the season for both teams.

Quarterback David McCaughey threw for one touchdown and showed strong leadership qualities against Palm Beach Gardens, as the Tigers reduced the Gators to the role of an also-ran. Running back Anthony Mitchell rushed for 64 yards in 13 attempts while Mike Thompson added 55 in 10 carries for the Tigers

Widow's guides authored by Sue Hickman

Sue Hickman, a Fort Pierce woman who has been active in social and cultural circles, has been making a national name for herself in the world of widowhood by authoring a series of booklets answering the inevitable questions arising when one's husband dies.

Widowed herself just over a year ago Ms Hickman found herself faced with questions to which she could find no answers. Querying others, she found that few women, like herself, felt ever prepared for the decisions that must be made when the husband dies.

A woman of inquiring mind, Ms. Hickman interviewed scores of other widows on their experiences, and then turned to psychologists, lawyers, clergymen, automachanics, beauticians, stock brokers, real estate men, insurance executives and others for the answers.

The outcome is a series of eight "Widow's Guides," on a variety of subjects. She is advertising her informational booklets in several national magazines.

The response, she says, has been "steady." She is now working on a syndicated radio series called "Widow Talk."

Among the titles of her books are "The Widow's Friend," a study of the four stages of mourning; the Widow's Guides to Automobile Maintenance, Cooking for One, Trusts and Estate Planning, Real Estate, Investment Insurance, and "Picking up the Pieces."

The author has since re-married, and in private life she is wife of Dr. Martin Gould, a practicing physician. They live at 6101 S. Indian River Drive in Fort Pierce.

AUTHOR SUE HICKMAN—at the publisher's, with copies of her booklets on the problems of widows. Mrs. Hickman (Now Mrs. Martin Gould) is now in the midst of preparing a syndicated television show to complement her informational treatises.

Chairman Dick Campbell predicted the new Jensen Chamber of Commerce building would be completed by October 1, as he and a committee of Rich Neeson, Buck Mauldin and Gary Wright installed insulation. The building was constructed mostly with donated materials and labor.

Gary Wright was named chairman of the Chamber's incorporation committee.

Alliance postpones to October

The executive committee of the Martin County Alliance has decided against holding a September meeting because of alterations to its regular meeting place and probable low attendance, according to Dr. Walter Stokes, co-chairman.

The first meeting of the fall will be on Oct. 30. Because of the uncertainty that the Howard Johnson's restaurant will be ready for use, the meeting place will be announced later. The executive committee will have a meeting this Thursday, Sept. 14 beginning at 1:30 p.m. in the board room of the Library.

LaLeche League will meet Sept. 14

The LaLeche League of Stuart is holding a meeting on September 14 entitled "Advantages of Breast-feeding." Meeting time is 8 p.m. at the home of Kathy Shelling's, 4306 N.E. Sunset Dr., Jensen Beach.

HANDLING THE COST OF MANAGEMENT

QUESTION: A while back you advised a busy professional man to hire a professional manager to handle the details and problems of owning income property. My problem is just the opposite—I have lots of time available. I own a three-family building now, and my wife and I have enjoyed managing the property ourselves. My question is this: When we look for a larger property, should we allow for the cost of management in evaluating the return we will receive on our investment, and if we do, want this lower our cash return?

ANSWER: Good question. If you intend to manage the property yourself, you are certainly entitled to compensation for this task. You should evaluate any investment as though it were going to be managed for a fee.

Then, if you decide to manage the property, your return will be two-fold—you will receive the normal return on your down payment plus compensation for your management efforts.

You and other people who have the time to manage income property are in an excellent position. You can, in effect, create a paying job for yourself!

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

More elections are coming

The primaries will be over as this is typed. If you didn't vote, why not? Voting is the only sure way of telling politicians how you feel. More elections coming up, remember the dates: Thurs., Oct 5. (Yes, it is on a THURSDAY) for run-offs; Tues. Nov. 7 for general election; and probably Mon. 20 for municipal OBP election.

The records show that there were over 60 returnees at this time in 1975; most have turned miserable earlier than usual up in the northlands that year. However, at this time, there were only 25 in 1976 and 31 in 1977. But so far this year there have been over 40 and no wonder with 97 degrees in Michigan the other day and 32 in New Hampshire, the following scampered back last week.

Peter and Dorothy Cuccia returned as did Bill Kitchen, Gladys Davenport, Mildred Alexander, Marth Trumble, Ralph and Inner Ballets, James and Willometa Kelly, Carl and Gladys Engel, George and Nellie Hall, Margret Weeks and John Carter.

The other day, Ralph Cramer was seen studying the bleak and barren floral displays at the park entrance and on Broad Street Island. He was trying to figure out what to have for the coming season that would again be a "talk of the Town", as were the abundant and gorgeous petunias last year. We can be sure it'll be great as Ralph has the patience and skill needed.

Park Events

The small animals around the park are tame and friendly during the summer when there is plenty of place to hide if frightened. Now, shortly after daybreak you will find Hilda Giblin out feeding all her fury friends. Ole Mrs. Skunk slides around on the outskirts waiting a chance to grab some leavings; some skinny tail and some bushy tail squirrels boldly demand their breakfast and right on time. Shyly waiting their turn are the cute baby rabbits, looking so forlorn if they think Hilda has forgotten them. Then, often not too far away is Mr. Racoon waiting for his meat ration. These special events make summer in OBP great fun.

Contract, Sept. 5, Gladys Gilbert, Jay Ehenger, Mildred Skinner and Francis Runyan.

Pinochle, Sept. 4: Veronica Snyder, Charles Wiedenmann.

Pinochle, Sept. 7: Chas. Wiedenmann and Gladys Baier.

Pinochle, Sept. 9: Charles Wiedenmann, Gladys Baier, Nan Campbell and Veronica Snyder.

Hospital

Geoge Reeves, 41 Sixth, is home recouperating from surgery. No nursing home vacancies so his sister Carol Chapman will manage with hospital bed and visiting nurse services.

Florence Tyree of Indian River Drive and Grace Buell of Mango Street are still in the hospital.

Vi Alley (ExOBPer) is improving rapidly at home in Jonesport, Maine, but her daughter Ellen Nixon of Center Street will have to stay awhile longer to see that she gets proper care.

Edee Yeago of Maleleca Drive told Leta Keith by phone, Sat. Sept. 9 that the eye surgery was a grand success and she hopes that soon she'll be able to read again, and Edee is in hopes of coming back to OBP for a visit in Oct.

rambling Around

Margaret Weeks of 25 Cocos came down here in 1945 from Greenfield, Mass and soon made it her permanent home. However she does get back to Greenfield each year to see her family.

This year after her jaunt to Monaco, she spent July and August with her son Leon. The whole family (10 of them) taglish camping trip down to Cape Cod. Margaret said the weather was beautiful and a sweater was required at times, but she did admit it was only 51 the day she left.

Margaret flew both ways and used the Limosine Service which she said was just great. A 9-passenger limosine came down from Ft. Pierce and picked her up right at her door with the driver taking care of the luggage both here and at the airport.

Avis Hollcraft, 1 Cocos Drive, and her sister Doris Halley, 2 Almond Dr., took another "Tauk Tour" this year, but Oh My! was it different from all others.

The first 9 days of their Hawaiian Island tour was exciting but normal. On the 9th day at Princeville on the Island of Kauai (furthest one), a woman begind Doris stumbled or something and shoved Doris in a heap down some stairs onto a concrete bus loading platform. Tour director rushed Doris 30 miles to nearest hospital, where they found she had a broken collar bone, two or three broken ribs and her whole left side one mass of bruises.

They were so far away from everything, it was decided best to continue the tour with tour director and everybody pitching in to make it possible. Chairs on fork lifts, wheel chairs, hand carrying and room service where there was none, made it possible for Doris to suffer through the last 4 days of the tour. Doris is home now still well bandaged with a smile as her sister Avis said this was one tour she would long remember. As for more tours, "I've had it!"

Al and Avis Colby of S.W. 9th are back from a short vacation in New England. Said weather is fine, saw the Glaziers who are find and will be back around Nov. 15. Also saw the Board Street Moores who are fine and the Burhams who plan to be back here by mid-October.

John Carter of 12 Key Lime had to make a surprise return from Sewell, N.J. when he suffered another heart attack. He had been working with Dot Seyden of Oak Street getting her home ready for sale so they could be married and take a tour of New England. It all must have been a little too much and John's heart kicked up again.

Doctor grounded John and said it was rediculous to think of getting married at this time...gave him a choice of hospitalization right there or a very slow trip back home and take it very easy for the next six months. Dot will continue to get her home ready to sell and then come back here early in October. Disappointed as they are, they eagerly wait the doctor's verdict on setting another wedding date.

Ralph and Inez Ballets of 24 S.W. Seventh Street are back from a long stay in New Cumberland, Pa. where they went last February to take care of Ralph's mother who died at her home last May. As soon as Inez got back to work she fell and broke her wrist, putting her on the injured list for 2 weeks.

They stayed with Ralph and Kathleen Rehm of 7th Street and Ralph helped puttering around at the Rehms' Mobile Home Sales Lot. When asked about the weather, they said never again, it is OBPfrom now on. First, there was 16 inches of snow on a previous 2 feet and no winter clothes....then came a summer unbearably hot and humid; and there was no shuffling, so they've had enough of the north lands. Welcome back and get your cue sticks limbered up, shufflers are a-waiting.

Pet and Dod Caccia of 9 Cocos Drive are just back from four months in Millville, N.J. (near Atlantic City) where they now live in a highrise. Pete had a heart attack just before they left here and was much pleased with the treatment at the Martin Memorial Hospital. He had to sped most of the summer resting and recuperating. They did skip over to Atlantic City and donated a few coins to the one arm bandits.

Letters from OBPers

Barney Chase of Sixth Street and Shuffle Courts sends word from New Hampshire that he is glad he brought along his winter longies as 32 degree weather is hard to take. Cold and rain every other day he claims, but the wedding went well and the clambake was delicious. Ends with "Please guard our heaven", we will be back in Sept.

Clint and Eunice King of Sixth Street write from Canton, Ohio, they had a good trip except for a blowout in N.C. It was too hot at first but now the weather is nice. They are going to leave before the cold sets in and plan to be back here by mid-Sept.

Gertrude Wickes of N.E. Sixth Street writes from Fisherman's Paradise in on the Raritan River that flows past New Brunswick, N.J. its way to the sea at Perth Amboy. Beautiful weather in the 75's. Will be back around the first of October.

Virgina Dryer of Pepper writes to Hilda Gibin and Mable Steven from Reading, Mich hat her trip to Canada didn't materialize but she did drive to New Hampshire to visit friends. Car trouble every bit of the way; trip one garage after another, limped back to Syracuse, N.Y. and traded for a new '78 Concord D-X Wagon. Back home it was dry as a bone....farmers crops are a disaster. See you in October.

..thank you

I want to thank my sister Carol Chapman and all my Ocean Breeze Park friends and neighbors for the attention they have given me during my recent illness. Also, I want to thank all the nurses of the Second Floor West of Martin Memorial Hospital for the excellent service with a smile that I received while in the hospital. Thank you all so very much.

mith's lawyer backs request or talks with lawsuit threat dat and Begin can talk, why in rld not Smith and Port St.

BY BOB FRYER

ess the question posed to city members Monday night by rview" McDonald, attorney for rince developer Peter Smith. e olive branch offer was not all d informed the council of. He that in the absence of talks y officials, Smith's develop- would file a third suit the city "for taking our without paying for it."

nald maintains that as a result nal actions to deny Smith from the Southport Shopping he originally requested and to the land to a residential y, the council has, in effect, ays a reasonable use of Smith land.

Smith is president of a corporation known as Bay Associates, Inc.(formerly known as Sandpiper Bay, Inc.) which owns the Southport Shopping Center along Morningside Boulevard in Port St. Lucie. Currently, the center contains city hall offices, a couple of shops and a convenience store.

McDonald maintains that Smith's firm bought the center and 7.2 acre tract surrounding it for $500,000 from General Development Corporation a couple of years ago, and that the land was bought as a commercial tract.

Last July Smith submitted plans to develop the rest of the land by building a Winn Dixie supermarket, a two-story office building, a one-story set of stores, another convenience store, and a restaurant.

The City Council opposed the permit requests and the developer filed a lawsuit seeking to force the city to issue building permits for the plans he submitted.

Circuit Judge C. PfeifferTrow bridge ruled the city must issue permits for a 7-11 store and a one-story building to contain 10 retail stores but said the city had a right to deny permits for the two-story building and Winn Dixie. Plans for the restaurant had been dropped.

Smith took out the permits for the two buildings allowed and at present they are partially constructed. In recent weeks no work has been done on them, but Wayne Sines, contractor for the job, says that is because his crew was busy on another job. He said by the end of this week, work would resume on the two buildings.

After the first suit was decided, a number of country club residents asked the council to rezone the entire tract to a residential category and to allow only the businesses in the original part of the center to remain in operation under non-conforming use provisions. The council began taking steps to rezone the entire tract as residential but did not complete that action action before a second lawsuit was heard. In that suit, Smith sought approval of a building permit for a one-story building similar to the retail store building thath Judge Trowbridge allowed.

Circuit Judge Dwight Geiger ruled against Smith, saying that since the rezoning process was underway, the city could deny the permit request.

McDonald has filed an appeal of Geiger's ruling, but the appeal has not yet been heard.

On Monday night, McDonald told the council "the ball is in your court now."

"If the city wants to say this is residential land and won't consider anything else, then tell us. If your mind is made up that this is residential property, tell us and then we'll go to court and ask that you pay for what you took," McDonald said.

Sines termed the difficulties between Smith and the city as "a running dog fight" and called for a beginning of a dialogue between the two parties. He said, "There hasn't been any two-way exchange of ideas on how to develop this land, and that's not good for the developer or the city."

Assistant city attorney Charles Dorfman said he was not sure, with one case under appeal, that talks would be beneficial to the city. He said he would investigate the desirability of talking and report back soon.

One man in the audience asked McDonald "Why do you persist in seeking this thing when96 pe cent of the people don't want it?" He referred to a petition against expansion of the center that he said 96 pe cent of the people asked to sign it did so.

Smith's comptroller, Frank Tallant, said he'd have a petition in two weeks with 60 per cent of the people in favor of Smith.

but on Monday, Blunt expressed reservations about the property owners controlling the land when one member "is not even willing to cut his own grass."

City Planner Mike Szunyog said he felt the tract would make a good passive park and said would not like to see the city give up the chance for the public to use the land.

Only seven of the 11 board members were present at the Monday meeting, but they voted unanimously to recommend city acceptance of the land. The recommendation will now go to the city council for consideration.

PSL grass ordinance to get constitutional challenge

A lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of Port St. Lucie's newest grass ordinance is expected to be filed this week by attorney Dimitry Alexander of Davis, Fl.

Alexander owns a vacant lot at 248 S.W. Todd Avenue in the midport section of the city and was recently cited for having vegetation on the lot growing higher than 12 inches. The new city grass law, passed in May, forbids vegetation higher than a foot on any land within 80 feet of a building on grounds that it creates a fire hazard.

Alexander responded to the citation by writing a letter to the council, telling them he felt the law was unconstitutional. The council conducted a hearing on the matter, as prescribed by the ordinance, and alexander's first letter was read, as well as a second one explaining he could not be present for the hearing. The council decided at the hearing to have the city attorney write Alexander, explaining the ordinance and telling him the council would proceed with action to have the lot cleared.

However, Monday night, when it came time to vote on Alexander's lot to be cleared, and to eventually attach a lein on the property if Alexander didn't pay the clearing bill, the council decided to postpone the vote.

Assistant City Attorney Charles Dorfman asked for the delay in the order to clear the lot, explaining that City Attorney Spencer Gilbert had spoken with Alexander. "He asked that we not clear his lot until he had time to file the suit and the court decided the issue. As a courtesy, Mr. Gilbert said the city would give him a reasonable time to file," Dorfman said.

The assistant city attorney explained Tuesday afternoon that the council action was not a vote to hold up all other lot clearing under provisions of the law and said at this time the routine clearing of lots will continue. He said once he received a copy of the suit Alexander files, a determination will be made as to whether to order the lot cut then or wait for the outcome of the court case.

At one point in the discussions Monday night, Dorfman said it was a possibility that if the new grass law was ruled unconstitutional, the judge could order the ruling to be retroactive. If that occurred, the city may get stuck with the bills for the mowing that has taken place under the law. However, Dorfman stressed Tuesday that he has not had time to research that possibility yet "to see if the court could or would do that."

According to city officials, Alexander should have the suit filed by tomorrow.

The city's first grass ordinance, which prohibited growth of vegetation more than six inches tall, was ruled unconstitutional in January as a result of a challenge of the law by Robert Schweiger of Clearmont Street.

During discussion of Alexander's lot, city council member Schuyler Sharpe asked Monday night if the city was requiring the clippings from the lot clearnings to be picked up. He said he had heard reports of clippings being left on the ground and he said this created more of a fire hazard than the growing vegetation.

Several persons in the audience said they knew of examples of clippings left on the ground, but Mayor William McChesney said the law requires the removal of clippings. He instructed city staff members to check into any reports of uncollected clippings.

Schweiger, who challenged the city's first grass law and had it ruled unconstitutional, told the city council that the other propertyowners in the group didn't necessarily agree with his "natural look" preference in landscaping.

Dr. Skinner to attend PTSF meeting tonight

The Paren-Teacher-Students-and-Friends association of Port St. Lucie Elementary School will conduct a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 21, in the school auditorium, and county school superintendant Dr. Nolan Skinner is scheduled to attend.

It is expected that Mike Shriver, parent of two elementary school children, will express opposition to double sessions at the PSL school during the PTSF meeting. The public is invited to attend.

Cystic Fibrosis bike-a-thon

A "Breath of Life" bike-a-thon will be conducted at the Port St. Lucie Community Center from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 23, to help raise funds for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

"Our goals are simple: to find a cure or control for the inherited disease cystic fibrosis, while improving the treatment of children with serious lung damaging diseases," said Mr. Edward Swanson, chairman of the bike-a-thon in Port St. Lucie.

The bike-a-thon lasts from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and those wishing to participate can pick up instructions and pledge forms at the Port St. Lucie Elementary School or Port St. Lucie Bank. If you have any questions or can help in any way, contact Swanson after 6 p.m. at 878-2786.

he noted, "We have dedicated volunteers, a national organization, renouned scientists and researchers, and 110 diagnostic and treatment centers. What we don't have is enough money." That's why the foundation is appealing for support of the bike-a-thon.

For more information about the bike-a-thon, call Mrs. Eleanor von Tabonsky at 878-4631.

Do property owners really know what the master plan zones?

BY SALLY LATHAM

The current series of hearings on the land use portion of the Comprehensive Plan for Martin County has been causing considerable consternation among property owners, particularly those along Indian River Drive where the land-use map now calls for all residential on the west side, which is now occupied by many businesses.

Most of all, owners are upset that they haven't been personally notified by mail of the hearings, which are required to set the pattern for official zoning lines. Notification has come only through legal advertisements published in area newspapers of record.

"Do I have to buy the Stuart News to find out what's going on?" one businessman plaintively asked the county commission last Wednesday.

Joe Bumberra, another of the many expressed concern over the threat of absentee landlords, who citizens could be zoned out of their present use rights without knowing it.

Martin County Planning and Zoning Director Tom Mumford, however, told property owners that nothing definite is pending to imperil the rights of owners. These sessions being held on the various areas of the county are only a part of the foundation-laying for the Comprehensive Plan.

"These are land-use maps, not zoning maps," he emphasized. "The county has no zoning maps as yet. We are just recommending, based on the 1977 hearings. The commission must decide the next step."

The county commission, he said, hasn't even decided whether the maps, when and if accepted, will constitute an imperative or merely guidelines for communities to go by.

The maps, which outline land uses in various areas within each community ranging from low-density residential to industrial and public lands, were the result of at least two meetings each in all the communities in the county.

"We held the preliminary hearings to find out what they wanted their community to be," Mumford explained to The Mirror in an interview this week. "We went back in with the maps trying to depict what they said. The response was marvelous."

Most of the people voicing their opinions at the current series are the same ones who spoke out at the 1977 sessions, the planning director said.

"But they're talking to a different commission, and they want to be sure they're heard," he commented.

The map portio of the study is only one phase of the comprehensive plan, which includes a proposed traffic pattern, sanitation and housing plans, projections on conservation, recreation and open space, coastal zone use and utilities.

It was drawn up to meet the requirements of the Local Government Comprehensive Planning Act, passed by the legislature in July of 1975. The legislature, fearful that unplanned growth in the state could be disastrous without control, edicted that all counties, municipalities and other local governments adopt acceptable guidelines for future development.

MArtin County's plan was approved by the state two years ago, and already parts of it are becoming obsolete.

"The ma-s were ade om 1976 amd we've grown so much since that time that I feel they should be reviewed on an annual basis," Mumford said. "We need to go through them every year. Prior plans have been cast in stone, and that was it. This is a viable, living, moving, changing document."

Mumford stressed that people need not fear being put out of business by the zoning plan, even after it is adopted.

"If you have a restaurant on your property and it is zoned residential, you can keep that restaurant in business as long as you wish," he said. "You can even sell it to someone else to run as a restaurant. If it is closed six months, however, it can be reopened only as a residence."

Too, if the property were 50 percent or more destroyed by fire or hurricane, it could not retain its commercial status in a residential zone.

The recommended changes were made to take all factors into consideration -- not just the permisiveness of the neighborhood.

"It might be that one straw to break the camel's back in facilities," Mumford said. "Or it might put that one car too many in the area and we'd have to close the street. The plan is for the overall good of the community."

County Commissioner Frank Wacha, who is concerned with the decisions to be made about the Comprehensive Plan land use maps now undergoing public hearings, is urging all property owners in the north county to check the status of their land on the maps prepared by the county planning and zoning department.

The maps are now on display in the county administration offices in Stuart. To make it more convenient for Jensen area property owners, Commissioner Wacha is also arranging to have a copy placed on display in the Jensen Chamber of Commerce office on Commercial Street next Wednesday through Friday.

Road buffer laws causing flap in Pinelake-Lelani

A contradiction in the county zoning regulations is creating a prickly situation between neighboring communities on Savanna Road. And everyone, including both parties involved, agree that the laws need rewriting.

The hassle began back in April, when developer Ransom Tilton began construction of a road on the north side of his Pinelake Village Mobile Home Community, which abuts Lailani Heights. The road path is 15 feet from the Lailani Heights line.

When Lailani resident Leon Conklin heard about it, he contested the road, complaining to the planning and zoning department that he understood the ordinance stipulated a 25-foot setback for construction.

"I was never notified," Conklin told The Mirror. "I found out about it from the workers."

Conklin contended that Tilton agreed to move the road back.

"But on May 30, he had a change of heart, and got an interpretation from the county attorney that the 15 feet was okay," the Lailani resident claimed.

Although the two laws which seemingly contradict each other are obtusely written, Conklin contends that in essence, they both say the same thing.

"The one states plainly there must be a landscape buffer, and you can't landscape a road," he said Tuesday.

Conklin said he went before the county commission this week with the issue, and that Tilton was to be asked to delay work on the project until the laws could be straightened out, if possible. He was also promised that the matter would be pir on the Sept. 26 agenda.

Conklin's first act of litigation against Tilton was the filing of a complaint charging the developer with violation of the Sunshinelae, because Tilton had met in conference with the staff of the Planning and Zoning Board, at their request. Conklin, however, was apparently unaware of the gist of the Sunshine statute, which makes it illegal for elected officials to act in private, without advance notice to the public. Assistant State Attorney David Phoebus quickly determined that no commissioner or other elected official was involved in the conference.

The complainant said the three signatures on the petition were those of himself, his wife, and his mother-in-law Mrs. Raymond Rohrer, who owns a home near his, in Lailani Heights.

"They're raising my ground level 17 inches, and it's going to pour water on me," he said. "And she (Mrs. Kohrer) found she's going tobe chopped down three feet by the road."

Tilton, meanwhile, appeared to be a bit puzzled by all the furor.

"He never talked to me," Tilton told The Mirrot Tuesday. "I'd be glad to sit down and talk with him. Jack (Carmody) wrote him a letter and said he'd set up a meetin."

When Conklin first placed his complaint with the county, Tilton recalled, he was called in to the county administration offices for a meeting with planning director Tom Mumford, county engineer Jim Winn and zoning director Ed Lyden.

"We went over the plans, and I explained everything to them before I went ahead with the road," Tilton said.

At the time, Tilton said, they all agreed that the laws were poorly written and probably a conflict with each other, hence the officials granted Tilton the go-ahead.

This Tuesday, Commissioner Frank Wacha said, tilton was to be asked to delay blacktopping the road until the legalities could be resolved. "If possible."

"It may not be possible, because of his contract with the builder," Wacha told The Mirror. "It was a request, not a mandate." Wacha, too, agreed the laws were "bad."

Father Coffey instituted

The Rev. Jonathon Coffey, who has been serving the pulpit of All Saints Episcopal Church since the first of July, was officially instituted last afternoon, in a ceremony attended by nearly the whole membership of the parish.

The colorful rite was performed by the Very Rev. Kerry Robb, recort of St. Mark's Episcopal Church of Palm Beach Gardens. Father Robb is also Dean of the North Palm Beach Deanery. He acted in behalf of Bishop James Duncan, who has been attending church conferences in England and Europe.

Participating in the institution service were members of the All Saints vestry, principally Senior Warden Albert Walker and Junior Warden Wallace Fletcher.

Others on the vestry are Anne Akers, secretary, Katherine Ouellette, treasurer; John Fulton, P.L.Kinne, William Stevens, Irene Stewart, Paul Tyree, B.R. Whittle and Gerald Wilkinson.

The sermon was given by the Rev. Arthur A. Smith, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church of Stuart.

After Dean Robb's Declaration of Election, the keys of the church were ceremonially presented to Father Coffey by Senior Warden Walker.

The All Saints Guild members wer hostesses for a covered dish supper that followed the service. President Nellie Cook was assisted by vice president Evelyn Swenson, Secretary Grace Madden, and treasurer Mary Ruelius.

nior Angler Tourney on causeway

The Martin County chapter of the Izaak Walton League will sponsor its annual Junior Anglers Tournament from 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday, Sept. 30 on the Jensen Beach Causeway.

The contest is open to boys and girls from age to 14 years old and entrance is free. Several financial organizations have contributed prizes. The first place winner will get a free day's fishing on the charter boat Pride and Joy, and all sorts of fishing tackle will be given away during the tournament. Prizes will be awarded at the end of the tourney.

DON SIVYER

Officer-in-charge is a 34-year veteran

Don Sivyer, a veteran of 34 years with the U.S. Post Office, is the new Officer in Charge at the Jensen Beach Postal facility, as temporary replacement for Harold Salzler who resigned last month as postmaster.

While here, Sivyer is on loan from the Opa-Locka Post Office, where he is manager of Customer Service. His present tenure could last as much as six months, because of the complicated screening process through which a postal employe must go before he finally can become a permanent post master.

First, Sivyer explained, the position is advertised in the southern regional journal. Then the field of applications is narrowed down to five, who are put through investigation and evaluation by the Selection board in Memphis, where the final choice is made.

There is no chance of Sivyer being "the man" here, much as he might like it.

"The rules say anofficer in charge cannot be one of the candidates," he said. "I have applied for other postmaster jobs, but this is the first time I've been officer in charge."

Sivyer has been career post office most of his adult life.

"I started out as a Christmas carrier while I was still in high school in Miami," he said. "During the war I served with the Navy, but when I got out I went right back into the post office."

Miami has been home base for him throughout the years. He and Mrs. Sivyer have seven children, all grown and out of the nest except the 13-year-old, and nine grandchildren, so they have reason to want to keep Miami as home base.

The new OIC finds Jensen Beach delightful, a total change in pace from Opa-Locka.

"There we have over 28,000 deliveries and 105 employes," he said. "But this is beautiful -- Jensen is wonderful. I'm happiest when I can look at the river."

S-P docks may now get roofs

The Sewall's Point town commission gave dock owners more latitude in building at last week's meeting, by voting to allow construction of covered areas on their waterway approaches.

Under the ordinance now being revised by Town Attorney Tom Thurlow, dock owners and builders may now have a maximum of 100 square feet of roof on their piers, as long as the structure is no higher than the house.

It was pointed out that this limitation precludes roofs on the Indian River side of the peninsula, because of the low elevation of most of the homes. It would allow most of the owners on the St. Lucie River side to have them, since most of the residences are built on the ridge.

The commissioners voted to include the dock revision in the new Ordinance 111. The law will also make it necessary for all residents building private docks to produce letters of no objection from the immediate neighbors.

In other business, the commission voted to retain the contractual services of the District 2 Fire Department for the next three years. District 2, which has its headquarters next to Confusion Corner in Stuart, has served the town for the past three years, and Mayor Ed Gluckler noted that the service has been fine and the equipment superior.

The contract was signed for a $2,000 donation per year with Fire Chief Ed Smith. The only competing unit was the Rio department, which made a presentation at the workshop meeting Sept. 6.

The commission appointed S. Tenney McGraw of Indialucie to the town Planning and Zoning Board, to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Richard Campbell several months ago.

Mrs. Graham showed a landscaping plan drawn by Fred Stresau of High Point, utilizing some of the shrubs and trees from Melody Hill, which must be somewhat thinned out to make it suitable for a nature walk. John Shannon, urban forester for the Department of Forestry, obtained the use of the only "tree picker" in the county to move some of the trees, which were transplanted in the town hall grounds this week.

The breezes graduated into winds out in the deeper water, making the St. Lucie Inlet almost impassible. At least one and possibly more boats turned turtle over the weekend, in waves reported to be running as high as 12 feet. The rough conditions also kept the deep-sea fishermen from attempting to go out, for almost a week.

One not to be deterred by the waves was Jim Steinfeld of the Bait [illegible] Jim who has been making almost daily runs out as far as 12 and 15 miles, has caught more than 1,000 pounds of big ones in the past several days, most of them grouper.

quadron offers water safety know-how

...ses for a record enrollment ...provided for the free boating ...the St. Lucie River Power ...to open at the Martin County ...School on Tuesday evening, Oct. ...ing to Gerald E. McMaken, ...tor.

...ion is scheduled for 8:30 ...night and class will follow at ...on that and subsequent ...evenings for nine weeks ...all aspects of safe boating. ...are lectures on piloting, ...rules of the road, aids to navigation, charting, boat trailering and use of the compass.

Aimed to teach the minimal knowledge required for safe boating, completion of the course will increase the boatman's confidence whether he owns, rents or boats with friends.

This year's class will be especially fortunate in having Fred Stunt as chairman. Stunt is a past commander of Jones Beach Squadron and skipper of a 36 foot, diesel powered trawler that has cruised the Intracoastal Waterway and Bahama Islands extensively.

"It is sheer folly and an engraved invitation to trouble for a boater to attempt to operate his boat without a knowledge of the rules of the road, safety requirements or aids to navigation," Stunt said.

Course material, constantly updated and modified to comply with changing government regulations, is augmented by audio visual techniques that graphically amplify the lecture and assures a clear understanding of the material presented. The weekly open lectures will be followed by closed-group teaching sessions at which more than thirty table instructors will work out assigned problems with their individual groups of six students.

Commander McMaken urges enrollment while the only cost to the boatman is his time contribution. USPS provides the rest. It could easily prevent serious injury or a threat on a life, Machen said.

This is to express my appreciation for all the support that was extended to me during the recent political campaign. There were those who talked to neighbors; those who made phone calls and wrote letters; those who put up signs and attended rallies; those who gave me moral support and advice; and the hundreds of people who gave of their finances. To each of you, I say, "THANK YOU".

We did all we could, and I'm proud of the clean campaign you helped me run. Please continue to demand positive leadership from your elected officials and make your voice heard on important issues.

Bugged Bugged Bugged

BY SALLY LATHAM

Dear Lord, so wonderful and wise,
Who made the mountains and the skies,
Who bids one live, decrees who dies,
I have a little question:
With all your endless, grand parade
Of creatures every size and shade--
Pray tell me, why were love-bugs made?
They give me indigestion.

The love bug doesn't swing or dance--
It doesn't life or fate enhance--
It doesn't even have a chance
With neighbors, friends or brothers.

It hasn't got a grain of sense
Or even any self-defense.
Yet twice a year, it vents intense Offense on me -- and others.

The love-bugs, always as a pair,
Get in your nose and in your hair--
They do not do -- they're simply THERE.
They clay and clog and bug us.
We do not doubt your wisdom, Lord.
With all (or most) we're in accord.
But frankly, now, we're getting bored.
Dear Lord, your love-bugs bug us.

Lutherans to worship at new church

The congregation of Prince of Peace Lutheran Church will hold the first Worship Service in their new building this Sunday morning at 11:00 A.M. The Church is located on U.S. 1, two miles north of Stuart and just north of the entrance of Vista Del Lago.

Sunday School will begin on Sunday, October 1, at 9:45 A.M. and a second Worship Service at 8:30 A.M. will be added in October.

The new Church is of Spanish-contemporary design and consists of two buildings joined by a center courtyard which is enclosed by wrought iron gates. A striking tower stands in the center of the courtyard. The north building contains the church office, Sunday School and fellowship rooms, nursery and kitchen. The south building is the Sanctuary. This is the first unit for the congregation with two additional buildings planned for the future.

Prince of Peace was organized three years ago and has emjoyed rapid growth. Until this week, the congregation worshiped at the Trinity United Methodist Church in Jensen Beach. The church office was located in the Rick Carroll Building but has now been moved to the new Church.

Formal dedication of the new facility will take place on Sunday, October 22nd. The public is invited to all services.

KEN ANGUS—recently rolled a co-in-a-lifetime 660 set on the first night of organized league bowling at the newly opened Port St. Lucie Lanes. Angus said by the time he was on his third game, he was getting nervous and didn't bowl as well as in his previous games. Otherwise, he may have broken the 700 mark. Not bad for a man who hasn't bowled much in couple of years. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

Once in a lifetime 660 rolled by Ken Angus

It doesn't happen very often you know," said Ken Angus as he related how he recently bowled a 660 set at the newly-opened Port St. Lucie Lanes.

"I bowled a 641 a couple of years ago, back up north, and the score never got recorded, so I figured I'd blow my horn on this one," said Ken Angus, a retired Baltimore police officer who now lives in Port St. Lucie.

It's no wonder he's proud. A 660 in bowling is pretty rare, expecially for a non-professional. It's the highest score Angus has ever tallied in a set during his 26 years of amateur bowling. And, it came on the first night of organized league bowling at the new lanes off U.S. 1 a little north of Port St. Lucie.

Angus said the league is unsponsored so far, but noted "we fill the lanes. I think there are about 24 teams."

Angus and his wife, Maureen, were bowling in mixed doubles competition when he rolled the magic 660 set.

"And I had 700 in my grasp," he said, explaining that his scores for the three game set were 256, 238, and 166

'My knees were gitting a little shakey in that last game," Angus said.

In the 256 game, he bowled eight strikes.

"I'll probably never bowl 660 again. It felt pretty good to bowl it the first night. It was a nice feeling," Angus said, adding, "The lanes there are in very good condition, and they are friendly people there."

Angus says he bowls just once a week and noted his wife turned in a very credible 131 average for her set.

"I had laid off of bowling for a couple of years and am just getting back into it. It's fun," he said.

Break One-Nine!

Use your eyes before you use your ears.

Before you think about putting up your CB base antenna, make sure you've got your signals straight.

To begin with, Citizen Band antennas, unlike TV antennas, are under FCC regulations.

FCC and local rules sometimes differ on the allowable height. So, before erecting your antenna, check with the appropriate authorities.

And when you're ready to put it up, check on one other thing—the clearance.

The slightest touch of your antenna or guy wire to a power line could cause you a serious shock.

Here's how to play it safe. Make sure that you check all directions. In other words, not only the space above the antenna but all around. So, if your antenna should happen to fall, it won't happen to fall onto a power line.

How far away is safe?

Certainly a distance no less than the height of the mast.

This safety rule not only goes for CB antennas but TV antennas as well. Or any metal pole for that matter.

And here's another word of caution; even when using guy wires to raise or lower your antenna you can't be assured of positive control. So, better double check the clearance.

So many people are now tuning into CB that we thought you should also be tuned into the necessary safety requirements.

This safety message has been brought to you by Florida Power and Light as a public service. Because serving the public is really what we're here for.

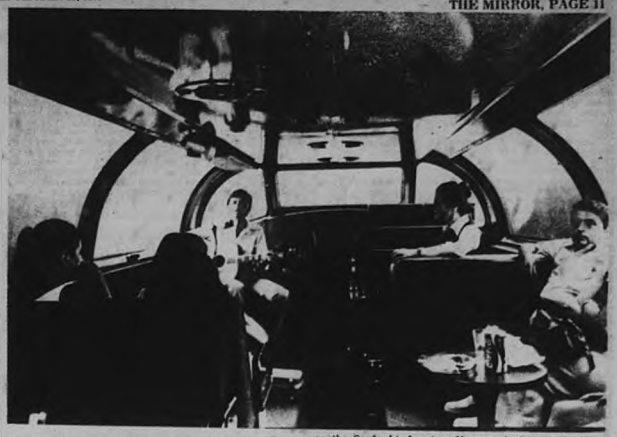
A PLACE TO RELAX AND SNACK, if the weather is right, delights the traveler waiting for his car to be boarded at Autotrain in Sanford. Robin Latham, chauffeur and sanity-saver for this writer, prepares to make use of the tables after getting the luggage all in the proper places. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)



NEVER A DULL MOMENT aboard the Autotrain, if you're looking for diversion. Ace guitarist Johnny Pence, a regular on the Sanford-to-Loreton, Va. run, had an enthusiastic audience of all ages in the night-club sky-car during the long dark hours. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Auto-Train; the next best thing to teleportation

BY SALLY LATHAM

...el just ain't what it used to be, ...the veteran trainman, sipping on ...g of coffee in the chief conductor's ...by-hole aboard the Auto-Train, as ...gwest modus of transportation ...ded its way north over somewhat ...ger tracks.

...nductor Jim Horton, who has ...ailing the rails for nearly four ...des, was obviously proud of his ...w and of his latest responsibility, ...he was more than happy to have ...curious reporter to share it with.

...ailroading is more than a job of ...even more than a profession. It ...ving art.

...Horton said it "ain't what it used ...." I was happily agreeing with ... I was one can look back to 30 and ...wn ago, making the trip from ...ida to Virginia, Washington or ...mer, one can do nothing but ...enjoy, on that gleamingly clean, ...streamlined train which was to whisk ...them mid-Florida, just about ...ands to the north in 15 hours. All too ...I could remember...

...ck in the 1930s, when it took a fast ...and sometimes five days to trek ...upper Pennsylvania to St. ...rsburg. Not only were the roads ...and that it was impossible to speed ...ughout to stop overnight were so ...ced far between that one had to ...n a course like crossing the ...ies to be sure of accommoda-...

...Mother and Dad, early in August, ...ld get out the map, the AAA ...tory book, and start writing – first ...a presentable tourist court in ...sburg, Pa. – second night, ...other fairly reliable court in ...nburg, Va. – third night, another ...ridge, S.C., and with luck, the ...m in St. Augustine. In between, ...ver nothing but shacks or in-town ...-tourist or famine.

...Those days of narrow two-lane ...ashes or bumpy cracked cement ...then, interlaced by not a few red ...bump-back byways posing as ...onal highways through South ...ina and Georgia, you'd be out of ...mind to use a short week's ...ion to go north and back.

...ou'd hardly have time to get out of ...ver on the other end, even with ...e weekends added in. With ...ences like that sticking in my ..., I was more than a little averse ...making the flying trip to ...delphia and on up into ...sylvania and New York State, ...ll sister Jeanne Myers and ...ional host Layton Sprnker of ...d suggested the Auto-Train ...rt. But why not try, you only ...live through once – I think ...Jeanne's older sister, decided her Renault was the more respectable of our two vehicles, so we were to take it. Hence son Robin drove mama up to Sanford, not a vast trip from Jensen Beach, but far enough that it seemed wise to make it an overnighter, especially as a kick-off for vacation. Because of this decision, we discovered the wisdom of making motel accommodations in advance.

Before leaving Jensen Saturday, a call was made to the Holiday Inn in Stuart, which graciously used their toll system to play detective.

At Sanford: Sorry. Full up. Had been for several days.

The Auto-Train, it seems, floods business and money into the economy in many ways. The gracious HI Stuart operator next checked the facility at Altamonte Springs. Yes, they had two singles, fortunately for our peace of mind. When on vacation, one should be able to relax, not speed full and anxious steam ahead.

The Altamonte Springs HI was the beginning of a chain-reaction of happy experiences and fortituous timing that held sway for the whole two-way trip. From the desk clerk to the bell-boy and from the dining room hostess (where great food reigned) to the make-up maid, it was cordiality personified. That team led a parade of pleasant folk who peopled our lives for nine straight days. What better batting average can you ask?

The train itself is an experience not to be missed. The crew, for the most part, is made up of young people of college age, all reveling in the glories of railroading. (The one who piped us aboard was "the prettiest trainman" son Robin had ever seen.) They all, young men and girls alike, were obviously bent on making the trip so pleasant that we'd all come back and make Auto-Train a paying venture.

At the station in Sanford, it was somewhat like boarding a cruise ship. We were given our choice of smoking or non-smoking area – sky-car or lower – our preferred dining time, and ditto for breakfast.

Our seats in the dome car were ideal – plenty of leg-room, space for our extra bags, and supplied with pillow and blanket for snoozing during the night. Making it even better was our across-the-aisle traveling companion, a New Yorker name of Sylvia Hershfield returning from the islands. Sylvia had traveled the Auto-Train many times, and clued us in on all the refineries. It is always good to meet someone who knows the latitudes of the "do's" and "don'ts," on any first adventure.

You don't smoke in the dining cars, sister Jeanne found out quickly when she tried to light up after our nourishing and passably good dinner of fish and mixed vegetables. But there are plenty of areas for the smokers, including the night-club cars.

These are fun. You can either while away the time in the downstairs area, where the atmosphere is like your friendly neighborhood tavern with lots of jostling and plenty of conversation, or you may go upstairs to the dome room where the libations are served to the tune of a great guitar, played by a string-tickler and singer name of Johnny Pence. Before the evening was through, he had a lively singing, hand-clapping audience ranging in age from 18 to 80, all of them having a ball. More than a few friendships were made and addresses exchanged, during that tempus-fugiting interim.

The night, for those who wanted uninterrupted sleep, was fitful at best. The train itself is comfortable, but unfortunately through some of the metropolitan areas, rough tracks gave the tireless Auto-Train square wheels. If the track-laying powers-that-be would measure up to the quality of the train itself, perhaps railroad passenger travel would survive.

During the pleasant interim chatting with conductor Horton, who turned out to be an enthusiastic Emergency Medical Technician in his hometown of Hinesville, Ga. when he isn't on the train, I learned that every effort is being made to make the Auto-Train a pleasant and profitable venture.

It is, during the height of the season, he said.

"And there's always a nurse and-or doctor aboard," he told me. "In the winter, most of the people going down are senior citizens, and we're careful to have the staff."

When we got off the train at Loreton, Va., the next morning, (an hour ahead of schedule,) both Jeanne and I felt we'd experienced a major miracle in time – the next best thing to teleportation.

Jeanne got up the road about fifty miles. She looked at the gauges on the dashboard.

"I'm getting awfully good mileage," she told me smugly.

"I should guess so," I replied. "Not many of us can go from Florida to Virginia on a half-tank of gas."

THE AUTOTRAIN, though stuck way out in the "goonpers" of Florida outside Sanford, still has plenty to divert the interest of passengers waiting to go on board. The two-car boutique is filled with all forms of souvenirs and refreshments for the hungry. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

NEYMAKER–Eight-year-old Jenny Ladley pedaled her bicycle 46 miles in Cystic Fibrosis bike-a-thon last Saturday in Port St. Lucie to become a nder for the title of top moneymaker for the event. Sponsors pledged a total 7.75 cents a mile for each mile she rode to combat the disease. Bike-a-thon rman Ed Swanson said if she collects on her pledges, she will have earned re money for the Cystic Fibrosis cause than any others who rode in the event. r riding 34 miles, a mechanical failure on her bike caused her to take a spill din her knees and elbos. But she took a break, then went out and rode her 12 miles, all on a 20-inch bike. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

City opts against talks with Smith

BY BOB FRYER

Port St. Lucie city council members voted four to nothing Tuesday to accept city attorney Spencer Gilbert's recommendation that the council take no action to negotiate with Fort Pierce developer Peter Smith.

Last week Smith's attorney, C.R. "Pete" McDonald, asked for negotiations, but also threatened that without some talk on possible uses for land around Southport Shopping Center, a lawsuit seeking damages on grounds of "confiscation without compensation" would be filed.

The firm which owns the 7.2 acre tract around and including Southport Shopping Center, of which Smith is president, has already had two court battles with the city over Smith's plans to expand the center. McDonald has filed an appeal of one of those cases, as it went against his client, and in the other case, it was something of a split dicision, with Smith getting permission to construct two new buildings and the city allowed to deny two other structures.

In the second suit the city was upheld in its position that a permit for a 10,000 square foot building (similar to one of the two new buildings underway at the center) should be denied because the council was in the process of rezoning the business use portion of the tract council was in the process of rezoning the business use portion of the tract to a residential category, while allowing tenants in the existing and two new buildings to do business under non-conforming use provisions. This is the ruling McDonald has appealed.

But in addition to pursuing that appeal, the attorney said last week that the city was, in effect, taking Smith's land, because it is not allowing a reasonable use of the property. He said last week, "If the city wants to say this is residential and won't consider anything else, then tell us...and we'll go to court and ask that you pay for what you took." He said Smith paid $500,000 for the land.

A group of country club area residents frequently voiced opposition to Smith's shopping center expansion plans over the last year the project has been in the news. Attorney Harold Goldman, hired by one of the critics of Smith's plans, addressed council members Tuesday and urged them not to negotiate with Smith. "The issues were drawn by him (Smith) when he went to court. There is no need to negotiate; the issues have been defined and decided," Goldman said after the meeting.

Though council members didn't take immediate action after hearing Goldman, they later voted against negotiations with Smith when they heard and approved attorney Gilbert's recommendation.

Additionally, council members voted not to pay the next quarterly bill from Smith's firm for maintenance of the grounds around the city hall, after Mayor William McChesney complained Smith's firm had not been doing an adequate maintenande job. The bill, around $150, is due in early October. City Hall offices are located in the Southport Shopping Center and are leased from Smith's firm, Bay Associates, Inc.

Also, city building department head Ralph LaChance said he would again seek to have work resumed on the new buildings at the shopping center to alleviate what he says is a danger of free-standing walls collapsing.

It has been a number of weeks since any work was done on the two buildings. Last week Wayne Sines, contractor for the two structures, said his workers had been busy on another job but would be back at the center by last Friday. They had not resumed work as of Tuesday, Sept.26. LaChance said other than seeking to have a safety hazard corrected, the builder could go a full year before the city could seek to force the contractor to complete the job or force the removal of the buildings.

om logged an incredible 70 miles ally earn the long-distance title e charity event. Since he only 0 cents a mile pledged for his t he fell short of raising the most ey in the event for the charity.

d Nelson, a 13-year-old Port St. resident, wasn't the only one to in a good performance.

ie Jenny Ladley, an eight-year-city resident, rode her 20-inch e to for an exhausting 46 miles.

since she had $7.75 cents a mile ged from persons who sponsored ntry in the bike-a-thon, it looks e'll win the prize of a 10-speed e for earning the most money in ent to combat Cystic Fibrosis. depends on how she does in collecting on her pledges," explained bike-a-thon chairman Ed Swanson, who noted that more than $1,800 was raised by the 29 bicyclists and one jogger who participated in the event last Saturday. He pointed out that nine-year-old rider Rob Post of Port St. Lucie turned in a 45 mile ride and had $6 a mile pledged, giving him the second highest amount earned. One of Post's sponsors was the Port St. Lucie Mirror.

It wasn't just kids who participated though. Swanson said 69-year-old Jim Turbyne of Port St. Lucie jogged four miles in the event and was accompanied by his wife, Clara, who rode a bicycle along the way with him.

"It was a juge success and we hope it will be even a greater success next year, when we'll try to organize more schools to participate," Swanson said, adding that officials at the Cystic Fibrosis charity headquarters iln Clearwater were pleased with the bike-a-thon results.

Council meets Friday

A special city council meeting has been called for 9 a.m. Friday, Sept. 29 for the purpose of finalizing financing for construction of a new Port St. Lucie city hall.

Several weeks ago it was expected that the city council would enter into an agreement with First National Bank of Fort Pierce to borrow up to $600,000 to pay on the future city hall. However, a question arose as to whether the lower interest rate than the 7.5 per cent rate the bank offered might be obtained for the loan by seeking closed bids from a number of area financial institutions.

Last week, bids were received and the apparent low bidder was the Port St. Lucie Bank, which bid the 15-year loan at a 6.425 per cent interest rate. The next lowest bid was a 6.9 per cent interest rate submitted by Sun Bank of St. Lucie County, while First National stayed at 7.5 per cent, according to city treasurer Gerald Van Patten.

City attorney Spencer Gilbert was to have met with the Port St. Lucie Bank's attorney to work out legal details of the loan in time for the city council to approve borrowing the money at their council meeting Tuesday morning. However, Mayor William McChesney explained Tuesday that the bank's attorney had not been available for a meeting on Monday, so the matter would have to be delayed to Friday for final council approval. "There's no financing problem, it's just that the attorneys need to get together first," he said.

The latest estimate of the total cost for the new city hall is $882,000, including a $756,900 construction bid the council recently awarded to a Fort Lauderdale firm. That company is expected to begin work at the city hall site, on the northwest corner of Port St. Lucie and Airoso boulevards, within 20 days of a contract being signed by Mayor McChesney. He has been legally unable to do so until the loan is finalized.

Last year and in the coming budget year, money is earmarked for the city hall downpayment, and council members are hoping that not all of the $600,000 offered by the Port St. Lucie Bank will have to be borrowed. Also, there is to be a provision in the loan agreement that the city can make early payments on the loan without penalty.

The construction contract allows 270 days for completion of the building.

his arrival he has toured the egan hunting for a house, and city staff members. When ask initial impression of the city, ly responded, "It's big."

said he was surprised at how e city is (It covers about 70 miles) and said it will present a llenge to him "because most perience has been in cities tablished growth, where they had city police and fire departments. Things were already structured there."

"I will have to adjust. It's something of a culture shock," he said of his move to Port St. Lucie's warmer climes, but he said he had experience living in a hot and humid climate"when we were in South America." His reference was to a two-year stint he and his wife served as Peace Corps volunteers in Brazil in 1965-67.

Silvia said he has received cooperation from city staff members in getting acquainted with the city, and said he plans to take things slowly in getting a feel for the run of things here.

Since December, 1976, he has served as city manager for Lake Mills and prior to that he was town manager of Ipswich, Mass.; municipal management officer for the Massachussett Department of Community Affairs, and executive secretary of Norton, Mass. He also once wrote speeches for Hubert Humphrey.

Silvia was born in Attleboro, Mass. Currently, he says, his home in Lake Mills is on the market and he is hoping to bring his wife and two children, Leonard, 7, and Scott, 6, down to Port St. Lucie soon.

In other other action Tuesday, William G. Miley became the city's first full-time engineer.

Until this week, the city has been using the consultant services of Stuart engineer Cal Montgomery. However, with the growth of the city, council members had decided last year that a city engineer should be hired. After reviewing more than 40 applicants, council members recently selected Miley for the job. He comes here from Ocala, where he was branch manager for the Ardaman and Associates engineering firm.

An engineering department is to be created this year, and there will likely be a city maintenance department created too.

Parents concerned over double sessions

BY BOB FRYER

There appear to be signs of growing unrest among parents of Port St. Lucie Elementary school children over the institution of double sessions here this year.

At a recent meeting of the Parent-Teacher-Students-Friends association at the school, several parents expressed displeasure over the split session situation and heard Dr. Nolan Skinner, county school superintendant, explain how it came about.

Basically, the problem is due to overcrowding and a lack of funds budgeted for a new school in the city. Port St. Lucie Elementary is the only school in the county on double sessions this year and the school board has agreed that a new elementary school in this city is the board's first new-construction priority. This summer a special two-mill school construction tax was proposed to finance a new PSL school and a new school in the northern part of the county. However, voters overwhelmingly defeated the proposal and a short time later school board members adopted a budget at last year's millage rate of 6.95. The new budget did not include any funds for a new school.

Mike Schriver, parent of two elementary school children, complained that learning with double sessions is difficylt and that children would have to either be going to or coming from school in the dark in winter months.

Since that meeting, another parent has expressed dissatisfaction with split sessions. Mrs. Doreen Petrella says she feels most parents are opposed to double sessions and says she is hoping to get parents organized to voice their opposition. She asks that anyone interested in working for a solution to the problem call her at 878-5075.

Later, Mrs. Petrella announced that insted of having persons call her at her home, someone would be at the Port St. Lucie Elementary School all day Friday, Sept. 29, to get signatures on apetition of persons against double sessions. However, school principal Victor Blackmer said later the same day he knew of no plan to have someone with a petition at the school and had had no request to permit such an activity. Attempts to contact Mrs. Petrella before presstime for more details on the petition and whether it would be available at the school, failed.

Blackmer said although nobody seems to like the idea of double sessions and that everyone would prefer an uncrowded single session, he feels "things are most definitely going much smoother here at the school (with double sessions than with the single session of last year). We just don't have so many bodies on campus as we did last year and it really makes a difference."

"In effect, we have two schools here, although the day for each student is reduced in time, our teachers are really concentrating on teaching the students communications skills and language arts and math, and those are the most important things for any school," he said.

Blackmer noted that as a result of double sessions, class sizes are reduced and said there is room for expansion as the year continues.

As of Tuesday morning there were 964 students enrolled in the school, which is exactly the same number enrolled at the end of the last school year. But Blackmer pointed out that several students came in to enroll at noon and that more would be coming to the school in the future. There were 880 students enrolled at the beginning of this school year, he noted.

School superintendant Dr. Nolan Skinner said, "People have a comprehension problem when they see the enrollment now is the same as last year and ask why we can't have a single session like last year. But they don't realize that we figure we lost about 100 students (to private schools) because we went to double sessions and if we had a single session, they'd probably attend our school. Also, the way the area is growing, we expect about 100 more students to enroll at Port St. Lucie Elementary before the end of the school year. And last year at 964, we were just hanging on and trying to cope until the end of the school year.

Both Blackmer and Dr. Skinner agreed that it may be several years before a new school can be built in Port St. Lucie and double sessions can end. "That's simple because there is no money. We can't gilve anybody any more information about the situation, because that's the way it exists and there is nothing in our power we can do to do anything about it until additional funds are found at the state or local level," he said.

Dr. Skinner also noted that school officials have been aware of the growth in Port St. Lucie for several years and had been trying to find alternative solutions to going on double sessions, but to no avail. "It's not a new problem, but a lot of parents are just now having to realize the inconvenience of double sessions and are upset about it."

NEW CITY MANAGER Leonard Silvia, who arrived last week from Lake Mills, Wisc., said his initial impression of Port St. Lucie is that it's much larger than he expected. He says he plans to move slowly in his first days as city manager until he's had time to get acquainted with things here. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

Wanda Lundin art show

An exhibit of the oil paintings of Wanda M. Lundin is being shown next week at the Port St. Lucie Bank. Mrs. Lundin, winner of awards here and at Fort Monroe, Virginia, who first studied under Eastern Shore artist Jack Clifton at Hampton, Virginia, has also studied with Fort Pierce artist Therese Knowles. She has been the chairman of the Port St. Lucie Art and Crafts Show at the Port St. Lucie Community Center for 1977 and 1978 and is a member of the Port St. Lucie Art Club and of the Fort Pierce Art Club.

Demos will decide Oct. 5

The fate of democratic candidates in three state-side races will be decided at the polls on Thursday, Oct.5 -- those of governor, secretary of state and attorney general.

Supervisor of Elections Peggy Robbins today emphasized that the Republicans and non-partisan voters might as well stay home, because no GOP or non-partisan candidates will appear on the ticket.

The run-offs are between the Bob Graham-Wayne Mixson and Robert Shevin-Jim Glisson running mates in the Democratic gubernatorial race; Beverly F. Dozier and George Firestone in the contest for Secretary of State, and between Alan Becker and Jim Smith for Attorney General.

There has been much confusion in the minds of many voters about the school board and judicial races, Mrs. Robbins said. People have been inquiring about whether or not they would appear on the ballot.

"People have been puzzled, because they used to be on the run-off ballot," the supervisor said, "but they changed the law in 1977, and now they will appear on th November ballot."

For the Democrats, the Oct.5 vote will be an important one, Mrs. Robbins pointed out, because the races were close in the September election.

"Statewide, Shevin was first, but Graham got the counties," she noted. "There was less than 100 votes difference in Martin County."

Mrs. Robbins reminds voters that she has absentee ballots available at the Elections office in the courthouse in Stuart.

"And we'll be open on Saturday for voter registration, for people who want to vote in the November election," she said. "Of course it's too late to register to vote in the run-offs."

LAND USE MAP, with proposed zoning areas prepared by the Martin County Planning and Zoning Department, is now on tap for examination at the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce, thanks to Commisioner Frank Wacha. Chamber Executive Director Helen Richardson points out the location of the office, which shares commercial zoning with other downtown businesses and offices. Property owners are being urged to check the status of their lands and to react to the county commission before final decisions are arrived at. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Nigerians are put in bind as government cuts funding

BY SALLY LATHAM

Then shifting tides of international politics have put four Nigerian students at Florida Institute of Technology up the creek without a paddle.

At least two of them have plenty of money in escrow at the college for their tuition. But their home government, which is currently undergoing a shift from military to civil rule, has cut off their bread-butter-and-board checks, making it impossible for them to pay their rent or buy food.

The young men are Timmy Joseph Elegele, Duncan Eradiri, Dounana Eradiri, and Foinbo Oruene. All are in this country on Nigerian government scholarships to learn technical skills to be used to upgrade the quality of life in their homeland.

For Elegele, who has been a student here for the past three years, and for Duncan Eradiri, a four-year-FIT student, the political rug-dragging trick is a rerun. It happened during a governmental shift three years ago.

"Last time it was December to March," the Nigerian medical technology student told The Mirror, "but that time I was renting from a nice guy on Palm Beach Road in Stuart. They understood, and let me stay. This time, I was thrown out last week."

He and the others have been "batching around" with understanding friends, but their stay in this country is definitely threatened despite the money tucked safely in the FIT coffers.

Dean Gene Greenwood has been doing everyting possible to alleviate the situation for the young men, but because of the international implications of the situation, the hands of the college are tied, he told The Mirror.

"There are several Nigerians in Melbourne in the same position," Greenwood said. "Melbourne contacted the Nigerian area coordinator six weeks ago. They said they'd have the checks in their hands in three days. They still haven't come in."

The major stumbling block is that none of the Nigerians are allowed to take gainful employment during their stay as students in the United States. Greenwood says he is sure some of them have, on the "QT," but it is against the official ground rules.

"We would like to help them," Greenwood said, "But we cannot treat them any different than we treat American students, or just as important, than any other foreign students."

Technically, the students who have the money in escrow with the college may be registered -- if they have no back indebtedness to the college.

"But Elegele cannot register because he owes $75.77 to the college for books from last," Greenwood said. "Unless he pays, and that must come from his expense money, we're in the position that we'll have to lift his Form 20 and have him deported."

Area agencies are unable to help the young men, because of lack of funds. Publisher Richard Campbell, a member of the Salvation Army board, contacted Major Judson at the Fort Pierce headquarters. Hudson said the money to help isn't available, but if people want to make donations to the Salvation Army and designate it for the Nigerians cause, it will be channeled to use for keeping the students in food and rent, and to facilitating their stay until the Nigerian government comes through with their expense money.

Fall activities begin at FIT

BY SALLY LATHAM

The fall term at Florida Institute of Technology opened this week, with students bumping into each other on their way to registering and attending classes, which began Monday.

By the time all the late registrations are in, according to Dean Gene Greenwood, they anticipate topping the 750 figure reached last fall term.

He foresees the most sizeable increase in the Oceanographic department.

"Last year we had such a successful underwater technology program we had to create a whole new section," he said.

This year, four new underwater programs have been established, and five of the new staffers this year are related to phases of them. They are John M. Camperman, coming here from Evansville, Ind., to teach oceanography; Jack E. Frye, of Richmond, Va., to teach Oceanography, and Capt. Clarence R. Silberg, retired from the U.S. Coast Guard, here as acting division head of the Offshore Technology Department. Other new faculty members are Harry A. Pettit, coming here from Dayton, Fla., a biology professor, and Jim Davis of New Brockton, Ala., teaching electronics.

The FIT marine program is making news in all sorts of interesting directions, Dean Greenwood said today. The most recent good news is that Bill Denault, who graduated last, with the local class, has been hired to work under Dr. Peter Bennett, head of hyperbaric medicine at Duke University.

All the student facilities are opening up on campus this week. Steve Bingham of Morano's Pizza is running the snack bar and the bookkeller, and the cafeteria, concessionaire for which is a Michigan management firm, has a new resident manager, Ron Coles. The latter facility opens today.

Chamber getting ready

The Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce is preparing for the advent of the tourist and holiday seasons with help from several areas of the community.

The biggest item is the arrival of maps of the Jensen area. Helen Richardson, Chamber executive director, reminds individuals andmerchants that the maps may be purchased for 50 cents individually at the Chamber office, or may be ordered in volume for 25 cents each, by calling the Chamber office at 334-3444.

The Christmas season is going to be more tuneful this year, thanks to the donation of a record player given by Mr. and Mrs. Al Tomaszewski. The Tomaszewskis have lent the equipment to the Chamber for events like the Fourth of July celebration in the past. They now have made it an outright gift.

Plans are also beginning for the Halloween window decorating program, and for Christmas activities. Merchants and others wishing to participate may contact Mrs. Richardson at the Chamber office on Commercial Street.

FIT receives two subs

Florida Institute of Technology has received two "Reef Hunter" submarines from Perry Oceanographics.

F.I.T.'s Department of Oceanographic Technology today announced the donation, which arrived at the Jensen Beach Campus earlier this week.

Mimi Gerstell, head of the Department, said the transfer was arranged through Russell Mortensen, an engineer at Perry, and Keith Anderson, also of Perry.

John Camperman, an F.I.T. instructor in Ocean Engineering, said the equipment will stimulate student projects that would have been impossible otherwise. Camperman was instrumental in arranging the donation, as he and Mortensen had been classmates in a graduate program at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. William R. Gehring, Academic Dean at F.I.T's Jensen Beach Campus, called the submarines "a tremendous asset for the Oceanographic Technology program." In addition to the "Reef Hunters," two wings from a Perry "Cubmarine" were donated.

Camperman and Mortensen will supervise the overhaul of the submarines, with labor provided by F.I.T. students. Besides working at Perry, Mortensen teaches at F.I.T. on a part-time basis.

Gerstell said that students pursuing a Bachelor of Science degree in Oceanographic Technology are learning to operate, maintain, and design equipment for collecting scientific data from the sea. The students will gain practial experience by doing the repair work on the submarines.

THE CHIPS ARE DOWN at Langford Park, thanks to the industry of the special resources class at Jensen Beach Elementary School. The 26 child laborers, under the guidance of special resources director Ron Howells, lent their sinews Tuesday morning to spreading the shrub and tree chips provided by Florida Power and Light along the jogging and exercise path interweaving its way through Langford Park's tree-shaded acres. The project is a result of the efforts of County Commissioner Frank Wacha and Dr. Richard Penick, working in behalf of the American Heart Association. The exercise course is expected to be completed in the next few weeks. (Staff photo by Sally Latham)

Vikings will land n Sunday, October 8

Everyone in the Jensen-Stuart area is reminded to reserve Oct. 8 for a day of excitement on Jensen Beach Causeway. That's the Sunday when the Vikings will take over. The occasion is "Leif Erikson Day," the annual reenactment of the landing of Viking Leif Erikson in America, verified by historians at 1002 A.D.

Ralph Lee, chairman for the festival sponsored by the Sons of Norway, promises a colorful and dramatic event which will feature three full-year-old Viking sexerings (wooden ships manned by six oarsmen.) Dressing in costume, with narrator Ralph Nergard to tell the timehonored story, the pageantry will include a flotilla of floats, with all 15 Sons of Norway lodges in Florida represented. The parade will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the parking lot of the Jensen Beach Bank, proceeding to Indian River Drive and north to the causeway.

The festival, beginning at 1 p.m. will be highlighted by a parade of people in Norwegian costume, and the crowning of the Florida State Viking queen. Other entertainment will include Scandinavian dancing, Indian dances by the Joy Gould Dancers of Fort Pierce, and other attractions.

Headquarters for the visiting Sons of Norway will be the Holiday Inn Oceanside, where a banquet and dance will be held Saturday for the membership.

Navy canoeists enter American Raft Race

The U.S. Navy has entered the annual Annual Great American Raft Race.

Although details are sketchy, raft race organizer E. Kennedy announced this week that a U.S. Navy entry from Fort Pierce has signed up to enter the canoe division of the Port St. Lucie Exchange Club's second annual event.

The Exchange Club is sponsoring the race, this Saturday at the Sandpiper Bay Resort in Port St. Lucie. Like last year, proceeds from the race will go to the St. Lucie County United Way fund.

"I can't tell you much about them, but the registration form does say it's a U.S. Navy entry," Kennedy said.

There are four divisions for the race: rafts, canoes, inner tubes and an unlimited division.

To date, there are about ten organizations planning to enter the charity event, but Kennedy says last year there were many last-minute entrants. He expects that will be the case again this year. "We'll probably have 10 to 15 more entrants who will register on race day," he said.

So far, The Port St. Lucie Mirror is among the early entrants. Mirror editor Richard Campbell will captain the newspaper's entry, with Mary Meissner, Cathy Baum and Bob Fryer serving as crew members. Campbell said the Mirror's entry will be in the unlimited category. He declined to disclose design features of the Mirror raft, other than to hint that the craft will be somewhat unorthodox. "We don't want to give away any design secrets that may help our competitors," he explained. However, informed sources say he isn't talking because the raft is as yet untested and may require major modifications.

The Exchange Club is in the process of putting together a raft, Kennedy noted, and Exchange Club President Hal Roberts said the Sun Bank of St. Lucie County, last year's winner in the raft category, is going to enter the same raft again this year.

Other tentative entrants include the Treasure Coast Jaycees, the Fort Pierce Kiwanis Club, Citizens Federal Savings and Loan, First Federal Savings and Loan of Fort Pierce, and the Port St. Lucie Bank.

Last year the race headquarters were at the North Port Marina, but this year the command post will be at the Sandpiper Bay Resort.

Registration for the race is from 10 a.m. to noon, with the races beginning at the close of registration. A course around the bay area will be used for inner tubes, rafts and unlimited entrants, while canoeists will put in the water along the North Fork near Port St. Lucie Boulevard and paddle down to Sandpiper Bay.

A fish fry will be held on the grounds of the resort from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. and is open to spectators as well as entrants. Trophies will be presented around 3 p.m.

Roberts noted that most of the entrants will probably compete in the raft or unlimited category. "This canoe and inner tube divisions are pretty much wide open, so at this point you could almost guarantee winning a trophy in one of those divisions by entering," he said. Maybe that's why the Navy is in the canoe division?

AFFABLE BRUCE HYATT—owner of the Benihanas of Florida, gets as much of a charge out of his "gimmicks" as his customers do. Hyatt, left, helps the chef open oysters which have been seeded to create cultured pearls which will be given to woman customers through Oct. 1 at his Sewall's Point Benihana.

A gem of a promotion

Bruce Hyatt, owner of the Benihanas of Florida, is a man with way-out promotional ideas, and this time, he's come up with a gem. Last week, he began giving away pearls to his lady customers.

As everyone who has ever visited one of his Benihanas is aware, Hyatt travels extensively in the far East, as owner of several import houses along with his restaurants. On his last trip to Japay, he bought thousands of cultured pearls in their shells, from the Ago Bay pearl beds of Honshu.

Cultured pearls are real pearls, Hyatt explaips. The pearl is formed when a grain of foreign matter enters the oyster's shell. Slowly, a coat of nacre grows around the foreign object, creating the pearl. The cultured pearls are developed in special oyster beds, the oysters are "seeded" and returned to the water to let nature take its course. When the time is right, they are harvested.

At the Benihana in Sewall's Point, through Oct. 15, all women dining at the restaurant will have their oysters opened by the chef, who will present the pearls to the lucky gals. Benihana is open for both luncheon and dinner.

New fire zones are effective Sept. 30

Fire Chief Jon Luciano, who is also president of the Martin County Fire Chiefs' Association, reminds residents in the south Jensen and Rio areas of the zoning change which will become effective Sept. 30.

The rezoning puts the area extending from Myrtle Street, near the Arch, to Palmer Street and Media, on into the western section of Rio in the Rio Fire Department zone. Rio will also serve the south end of Hutchinson Island.

People living in those sectors will be asked to call the Rio department number, 334-2422 if they want information or permits for burning. The Jensen Beach non-emergency number is 334-2220.

Samaritans make 13 runs

PSL delays decision on Thornhill Lake park site

In spite of a request by some homeowners Monday night that the city either accept or reject an offer of a free, 21-acre park site, Port St. Lucie city council members declined to make a decision until a study is made to determine how much it may cost to develop the land into a park.

Three years ago General Development Corporation offered to give a 21-acre tract in the Thornhill Lake area to the city if the city would develop it into a park. The council declined the offer back then on grounds that there was not enough money to make a park.

Recently, GDC president William Avella announced the land offer still stands no time limitation imposed on the city to develop the land into a park.

On Monday night, for the second time in recent weeks, members of the Thornhill Lake Propertyowners Association asked the city to make a clear cut decision to either accept or reject the GDC offer, rather than leave the matter undecided.

The propertyowners group, consisting of the four homeowners now living on land abutting the lake as well as a few of the owners of vacant lots around the lake, is headed by Robert Schweiger.

Schweiger and Ozzie Ferrar, both of whom are lakeside homeowners, are hoping the city will reject the park offer so the propertyowners association can negotiate with GDC to obtain control of the lake and land around it. They said the lake has expanded and could be a hazard during a hurricane, as there is no outlet drainage, and said there are erosion problems with the lake. The association is proposing to take control of the area so they can work to cure the problems. They also maintain that if the city took over the land and made it a park, there would be noise and trespassing problems created for homeowners around the lake.

After the last meeting with city officials, Schweiger hinted that if the city did take over the land, a lawsuit may be filed to keep the land from being made into a park. On Monday, before the council meeting, Schweiger said he and Ferrar had contacted an attorney but were advised to refrain from legal steps until the city made a decision on the GDC offer.

Schweiger pointed out at the Monday night meeting that GDC officials will not negotiate with the propertyowners unless the city declines the park site. "We're asking the council to make some type of clear cut decision, so we can know what we can do as our next step," he said.

Mayor William McChesney said he did not favor a decision on the land offer until a plan for park development was made and council members could know what costs might be expected in developing the park. He told Schweiger that a decision would be made "in due course."

Vice Mayor Mike Raeb said he recently inspected the land and noted that some of it is inaccessable and that there may be erosion problems on a portion of the land. He said he too wanted a study on the cost of developing the land into a park before making a decision. He questioned whether members of the Planning and Zoning Board had personally inspected the land before recently recommending the city accept GDC's offer.

At least one board member, Clyde Blunt, not only inspected the land but swam out to the middle of the lake to determine how deep it is.

Studies have already been made by GDC and the Planning and Zoning Board in previous years to determine the costs of turning the area into a park.

Council member Schuyler Sharps said anytime the city is offered 21 acres of free land, it ought to take it.

City planner Mike Szunyog rebutted a statement by Schweiger that only about four lots around the lake made up the area of the proposed park and that the bulk of the acreage was the lake itself. Szunyog said there are probably "about seven or eight good acres of land that can be developed into a park." He said state officials offer park planning services and that he expects a state planner to evaluate the site soon.

Third Southport suit expected by Tuesday

C.R. "Pete" McDonald, attorney for Bay Associates, Inc., said Tuesday, Oct.3, that he is currently working on a lawsuit against the city of Port St. Lucie and expects to file it within a week.

The suit is expected to seek damages from the city on grounds of "inverse condemnation and other things," according to McDonald.

If filed, it will be the third suit McDonald has filed for developer Peter C. Smith, president of Bay Associates, against the city. All three suits stem from a controversy over Southport Shopping Center, which Smith's firm owns.

Originally, Smith had hoped to develop the 7.2 acre tract along Morningside Boulevard by adding a Winn Dixie, two story office-bank building, 7-11 store and a 10,000 square-foot, single story retail store building to the existing building at the center. However, city officials balked at the size and scope of the expansion plans, adopted a zoning map for the city that designated a portion of the land as residential, then later rezoned the entire tract to a residential category.

Controversy over the center has raged for more than a year now. In the first lawsuit battle, Smith's firm was granted permission by Circuit Judge C. Pfeiffer Trowbridge to build the 7-11 store and 10,000 square-foot retail store building but denied the right to build the Winn Dixie or two-story building. McDonald then filed a suit seeking a second 10,000 square-foot building. Circuit Judge Dwight Geiger ruled against the building and that case is now under appeal by the developer.

The suit expected to be filed within a week came after city council members opted last week not to negotiate with Smith over possible commercial uses of the land. McDonald maintains that by rezoning the land residential, the city has, in effect, taken the land without paying for it. When he asked for negotiations last week, he said if the city didn't want to talk, a damage suit to recover the lost value of the land would be filed.

During the meeting when McDonald asked for negotiations, Frank Talent, comptroller for Smith, said he would get a petition circulated in Port St. Lucie showing support for Smith's shopping center expansion plans. However, on Tuesday, McDonald said there will be no petition. "We were going to do that if they wanted to talk, but there's not much point to it now. If they are interested in what the people in Port St. Lucie want, they'll find out at election time what they want," he said.

McDonald said he is researching some law cases for possible additional grounds for the suit, and said it would likely be filed Tuesday, Oct. 10.

...ds not believe that 98 percent of the residents of PSL are opposed to the shopping center. Many of our members, particularly those who reside in the southern and western portions of the city, live closer to the Southport Shopping Center area than they do to Northport shopping areas. We went on record many months ago that we were in favor of increased shopping facilities in the southern part of our city..."

The reference to the 98 percent figure is made because a Southport resident recently told city council members that 98 percent of the persons asked to sign a petition against expansion of the center, did so.

However, the homeowners group contends that the vast majority of those asked to sign the petition were from only one area of the city. The homeowners group feels that if all areas were surveyed and persons were asked if they wanted their tax money spent fighting the center expansion plans or for payment of damages to the developer for rezoning the land from commercial to residential, the petition results would provide a much different answer.

"Thousands of dollars of our tax money have been expended in one futile fight to deny the use of the land owned by Bay Associates for the purposes for which it was zoned at time of purchase. We do not want more of our tax money spent in legal fees to fight something we do not oppose.

"If developer (Peter) Smith is not allowed to build on the property he had purchased as commercial prior to rezoning as residential, he has promised to go to court to obtain damages. In our opinion, he has a fairly good case in his favor..." the release states.

Further, the homeowners group says if the persons supporting attorney Goldman feel strongly in their opposition to the center, they ought to buy the land, then resell it for residential use or donate it to the city.

Work on city hall to start next week

The long-awaited construction of a new city hall for Port St. Lucie is expected to get underway next week.

The last major obstacle to getting the work started was overcome last Friday when city council members approved an agreement with Port St. Lucie Bank to borrow up to $600,000 for the project.

Several weeks ago, the council had designated First National Bank of Fort Pierce to serve as the lead bank in securing a construction loan. However, when it was learned the interest rate on the money borrowed would be 7.5 per cent, council members decided to seek sealed bids from area banks in hopes of getting a lower interest rate. Last week the bids were opened and the lowest rate was offered by the Port St. Lucie Bank. On Friday, the council finalized an agreement to borrow the money with the PSL Bank serving as lead bank.

The Port St. Lucie Bank is offering the construction money at a 6.5 per cent interest rate through 1979, then will charge a 6.625 per cent interest rate. Herb Haughton, president of the bank, said his bank would chip in $200,000 of the money needed and that Sun Bank of St. Lucie County had agreed to supply the remaining $400,000 that the city may need.

Under terms of the agreement, closing costs are to be no higher than $8,500 and the city has a right to early payment of the loan without penalty.

On Friday, city officials expressed hope that the firm submitting the low bid of $785,900, Garrard and LaRoche Construction Company of Fort Lauderdale, could begin work within 10 days. City Attorney Spencer Gilbert said the bank mortgage would have to be filed before the work could begin, but added that this should be accomplished quickly and without delaying the start of the work.

'Only' 95

Construction activity in Port St Lucie slowed slightly during the month of September, when, for the first time since April, the total number of new housing starts fell below the 100 mark.

A city building department official noted that in September, a total of 95 permits were issued for single-family homes. The estimated value of the new homes is set at $2,330,334, generating $21,593 in building permit fees. Also, there were 51 permits issued for additions to homes. The additions are estimated at $172,792 and resulted in $2,355 in permit fees.

"I don't think it's a real signigicant drop. The way the permits are coming in, it looks like there will continue to be a lot of construction in the city, because I understand GDC (General Development Corporation) is about to get started on PL 42 (a recently re-platted section of the city next to the new Windmill Point development west of the Florida Turnpike)," said a secretary in the building department. That new section will include more than 400 homes.

In August a total of 138 new home permits were issued with an estimated value of $3,358,844 and 51 permits for additions, valued at $140,828, were issued.

The 100 mark for new home permits in a single month was surpassed for the first time in the city's history in May, when 164 permits were issued. In June there were 141 new homes started and in July there were 100 new housing permits issued.

Stop light okayed for Spanish Lakes

The state Department of Transportation has announced it has approved a stop light for U.S.1 in front of the Spanish Lakes mobile home park, but it may be a year before the light is installed.

A secretary for state representative Dale Cassens said Tuesday that according to a letter from the DOT, it would probably be next June before bids could be let for the light. Spanish Lakes park residents have offered to help pay for some of the cost of the light and they are also credited with taking a survey of the number of residents not at the park when a DOT traffic count was made. The DOT count did not indicate enough traffic for a light, but the figures showing how many seasonal residents weren't there was apparently enough to sway the state officials into approving the light.

CHECKING THE LIST – Third grade students from Port St. Lucie Elementary School compare their guestimated prices of various foods with the actual store prices at Winn Dixie during a field trip to the store last week. The exercise was designed to teach students how to identify brand names and specific package sizes as well as teach them how to shop on a limited budget. A number of mothers of the students volunteered to escort the kids on the excursion. (Staff photo by Bob Fryer)

Vikings will land Sunday for a gala Erikson Day

Leif Erikson Day, like St. Patrick's Day to the Irish, is the one day of the year when the whole populace turns Scandinavian. And this Sunday is it.

It is a day of great festivity and solemn pageantry for the Sons of Norway, the descendents of Norsemen who chose to make their home in America. They'll begin converging on the Jensen area from all over the state on Saturday, for a full weekend of activity. The fun will begin with a banquet Saturday evening at the Holiday Inn Oceanside, and will continue through the day Sunday.

More than 200 members of the 11 Sons of Norway chapters throughout Florida have made reservations for the Saturday Banquet, according to Diane Lewis, who with her husband George has been helping with the Leif Erikson Day preparations.

George, who is a Norseman only by marriage, has been custodian of the Gulfstream's chapter's prize possession, the "Octering," a Viking boat said to be more than 100 years old, and which will be part of the Vikings' landing fleet in the Sunday pageant. It will join the "Sexering (six oars) which is coming up for the occasion from Fort Lauderdale.

The first Sexering was donated to the Florida "Sons" by Leif Haugaver of Masfjorden, Norway. In return, Ralph Evinrude gave the Norwegian donor an Evinrude motor.

Emceeing the Sunday pageant will be Chuck Nergard, one of the area's politically-prominent "Sons." The legend surrounding the pageant will be narrated by Bud Bjorgen, who will combine Nordic and English in telling of the classic tale.

In the saga, Bjorgen will tell of the courageous voyage of Leif Erikson more than 1,000 years ago, and of the explorer's landing in America. According to Norse legend, Erikson's American sojourn led to the birth of the first white child in America, a boy named Snorri Thorfinnsson, in the year 1010.

The drama of the observance will be heightened by the beautiful costumes for which the Norwegians have become famous, and for the Nordic dances which will be performed during the day.

One of the highlights will be the presentation of "Miss Viking," who will be named Saturday night at the dinner.

A parade will begin the Sunday festivities. The visiting chapters will have units in the line of march, which will also include an Indian tribe (Boy Scouts), and units from the Jensen Beach Fire Department, which is kicking off Fire Prevention Week that day.

There will be plenty of attractions for rev

There will be plenty of attractions for everyone, whether they're Norwegian or not, Mrs. Lewis said Tuesday. Booths along the causeway will include a hot-dog stand, a Norwegian food booth, another offering Scandinavian jewelry, and a flea market. A Viking cruise will also be given away to some lucky person during the day.

SEXERING, a fast and lively Norse boat with six oars, will be one of ships in the Viking fleet when it lands on Jensen Causeway on Sunday. The celebration of Leif Erikson Day sponsored by the Sons of Norway. The will include a parade, a pageant, Norwegian food and dancing.

Coloring contest will promote immunization

If your child hasn't already "gone bugs" for the current coloring contest being sponsored by the Woman's Club of Stuart and the Martin County Health Department, you parents should help sonny or sis get into the act. It is the fun way to impress them with the importance of full immunization.

The contest, open to children ages three through five, offers prizes for the best coloring of some ferocious looking Bugs – artists' concepts of the major childhood diseases, polio, measles, tetanus, mumps, pertussis (whooping cough), rubella, and diphteria.

The local effort is part of a state-wide program with a goal of total immunization. Gov. Reubin Askew assigned the Florida Federation of Woman's Clubs the job of promoting the drive.

The "Color the Bug" entry forms are available at the Winn Dixie store here in Jensen Beach, the K-Mart, and TG&Y in Stuart, and at the Martin County Health Department. The completed coloring sheets may be returned to the store or school where the child obtained it, or may be mailed to Woman's Club of Stuart, 729 E. Ocean Blvd., Stuart, Fla., 33494, no later than Oct. 18.

Prizes in each age group will be $5 for first, $4 for second, $3 for third, $2 for fourth, and $1 for fifth places.

Winners will be notified by Oct. 30, but in order to collect, they must produce proof of immunizations.

New contract is let for Jensen arch

The forlorn, much-fought-over Jensen Beach Arch which has sat on State Road 707 in a state of disrepair for nearly two years, is at last getting the official attention it deserves.

A contract has been let to a well-known Stuart contractor, and the re-design is this week being studied by the Martin County Engineering Department.

The arch, a landmark since the 1920s, was struck by a car in a fatal crash in November 1978. The crash-victim's insurance was supposed to have covered the cost of repair, but the insurance company let the contract too low, and the contractor abandoned the project when it was half-finished. The county commission, finally weary of the delay, cancelled the initial contract and rebid it.

Last week, the low bid of the Bois Construction Company, the firm which built the Samaritans' headquarters and other civic buildings in the county, was accepted. The contract was let for $4,288, according to county purchasing agent Paul Penrod.

"The Chamber of Commerce (Jensen) wanted some changes in the design," Penrod said. "The engineering department is now studying the requested changes."

Jon Chicky, Chamber board member responsible for the arch project, explained that the major change will be in the cross-piece extending over the road. The Chamber preference is to have it in wood rather than in metal.

It is hoped that the project can be completed before the tempo of the tourist season begins to mount.

Firemen, Samaritans try drama to practice interdepartment work

The scene: A fatal accident.

The cast: Five victims, the Rio fire department and the Jensen Area Samaritans.

The location: The front yard of the Samaritans' headquarters.

Actually and fortunately, the "fatality" in this week walking around healthy Dave Baeder, who played the role of the accident victim so realistically that witnesses were alarmed for his welfare last Wednesday night, was coordinator of "Operation Extrication," a dramatic mock-up in cooperation between two separate emergency services.

It was the brainchild of Gary Socozzo, who is both an Emergency Medical Technician and a fireman with the Rio Fire Department. Having been at the scene of many fires and accidents, Gary was aware of the need for practice in cooperation between departments at the scene.

He suggested the "dress-rehearsal" idea to Maxine Bailey, president of the Samaritans and to Richard Pinsky, president of the Rio Fire Department. They heartily endorsed the project.

For props, they got an old car, and recruited a "cast" including Rio Capt. John Kouwenik, Fire Chief William Gass, EMT Bob Heaslip, and Firemen Art Eitnier, Bob McLedon, Bob Kame, Dave Cole and John Carrigan.

Maxine Bailey appointed EMT Baeder as coordinator, and Dave in turn chose the victims for the fake accident: Dick McCoy, instructor EMT from Florida Institute of Technology; Dave himself as passenger in the fron seat with Donna Cosgrove, EMT, and Douglas Kirkbride, another EMT in the back seat. A fifth "passenger," a doll, was the baby victim in the wreck.

The car, a two door model, was brought to the location from the junkyard by the Rio fire department. At 2:30 p.m., the scene was set. The Rio department brought two vehicles, one a rescue unit complete with the Jaws of Life, and a tanker with hoses to wash down to prevent fire from breaking out.

The Samaritans also had two vehicles on the scene, complete with crews. Brian Moody, in charge of the crews, was assisted by John Acrivellis, EMT students Betty and Bob Schlert, and Acting Day Supervisor and driver Ray LaFrey.

The drama of the "accident," which by this time had drawn a fascinated crowd of by-standers, was heightened by the acting of Samaritan President Bailey. Maxine in the role of a relative of the victims, came on screeming and trying to reach the wrecked car and her injured "family." She was calmed down and led away by EMT Vivian Heaslip.

Meanwhile, the ambulance crew members began their efforts to reach the victims, trapped in the wreck by jammed doors, and to do truage with the help of firemen and the Jaws of Life.

The first victim, the driver, was extricated, and was found to have three impaled objects in his body, pieces of glass deeply imbedded in mid-chest, abdomen and neck.

Although every effort was made to save him, his condition was beyond help. He was classed by the crew as a "Signal 7" (dead person) and the Sheriff's Department was called to verify death. The "body" was taken to the morgue.

The second victim, who had been tossed through the windshield was lying on the hood of the car. He had an amputated arm. The EMT, assisted by students, quickly applied a pressure dressing, bandaged his chest area, and moved him onto the stretcher lying on his abdomen, the position in which he was found. He was immediately transported to Martin Memorial Hospital, accompanied by his amputated limb.

While the EMTs were at work, the firemen were working diligently with the Jaws of Life, an instrument like a huge pair of shears operated by electric power. The Jaws were used to cut the roof from the car and take off the doors so the victims in the rear could be reached.

The first to be brought out was Douglas Kirkbride, who was found in diabetic shock. He was placed on the stretcher in shock position, and purportedly rushed to the hospital.

The fourth patient was Donna Cosgrove, who the EMTs determined had a neck injury. She was placed in a cervical collar, and in case she also had a back injury, she was put on a backboard which had been slid through the broken-out rear window.

The EMTs found it was necessary to remove the front seat in order to get the board in the proper position. That was when the "baby" was found, but too late. The baby, too, was a Signal 7.

The score: two lives lost and three saved, in this mock tragedy.

When all the "victims" and vehicles returned from their sham runs, everyone gathered for a post mortam over coffee and doughnuts, and to hear the report of Bob Morgan, EMT and First Aid instructor who evaluated the scene.

Plans were also made for a "bigger and better" extrication emergency later this month, to put to use the lessons learned in this one.

In foreground is Fire Chief Bill Gass and Ambulance Driver Ray LaFrey. If the car wasn't actually a wreck when it arrived at the scene, it was when the metal-eating Jaws of Life got done with it. Barbeque, demonstration are fire prevention week highlights

This year, the annual observance of National Fire Prevention week will get a double-header send-off, according to chairman Don Wilkie. The Jensen Beach Fire Department will begin sounding its siren in behalf of safety this Sunday, when its units will take part in the Leif Erikson Day parade.

Dates for the Fire Prevention Week are Oct 8 through 14. Activities in this area, however, will overlap the week at both ends, with the biggest event to be Oct 15. The highlight will be a day-long festivity that Sunday, with a barbecued chicken dinner to be offered from noon to 4 p.m. on the Jensen Beach Causeway, games, horseshoes, greased pole competition, and musical entertainment. Wilkie and his co-chairman Bob Wright are lining up acts to make it one of the biggest and most unforgettable days ever planned by the fire department.

Fire Chief Joe Luciano and his men will be visiting clubs and classrooms through the week, to disseminate information about fire prevention. The first such session will be this Saturday, Oct 7, at the Men's Social Club of Pinelake Village.

Chief Luciano, who is also president of the Martin County Fire Association, will be the featured guest on Wednesday on "Viewpoint" over WSTU. The open-mike show beginning at 12:45 p.m. gives everyone an opportunity to question the guest about matters concerning community or personal problems with the subject under discussion.

A spectacular part of the week-long observance will be the LP gas demonstration, which will begin Thursday, Oct. 12, at 8:30 p.m. on the Jensen Beach Causeway. The demonstration is sponsored by the Stuart Fire Department.

Both the demonstration and the Sunday, Oct 15 barbecue will involve all the fire departments.

October sneaks in, but the fish don't care

BY SALLY LATHAM

Can anybody please tell us where October came from? It can't be time for it yet.

But here it is. Before we got used to summer, autumn has arrived, on the calendar, and Trick-or-treating lies only a couple of bends away on the calendar. Tempus fugits beyond belief--especially here in Florida where seasons can sneak in and out without so much as a blush to signal their passing.

The only change for the Isaac Waltons, according to our spies, is a resurgence of the blues, out in the surf. Those choice catches, which have a habit of going north for the summer like the rest of the tourists, began making a seasonal return to the Atlantic waters off Hutchinson Island a few days ago.

Some of the best hauls, according to Tommy Stewart over at the Snook Nook have been: Norman Thalen, 25 blues in the surf, on cut mackerel; Tom Hargrave, 12 blues in the surf on cut mackerel; Irv Barunstine, nine blues and two whiting on cut shrimp; George Gay, nine shiling and three blues from the surf on cut mullet; Bill Wagner, Pat Patterson and Pete Baker, seven pound snook and a five pound blue, out of the river on Trout Tout;

Also Jack Prell and Walter Mielke, three trout out of the river on MirrOLure; Roy Greenwald and Floyd Gillam, four trout out of the river on MirrOLure; Henry and Mary Boyer, six whiting and four pompano, in the surf on cut shrimp; Charlie Kessler, 18 snapper and one flounder, out of the river on live shrimp; Harry Beamer, four trout out of the river on MirrOLure.

Not too many fishermen have been venturing outside during the past week, Tommy says, but Andy Clay, who did, brought home two nice kingfish, one 28 pounds and the other 24 pounds. Andy made his catch on the Six Mile Reef, using grunts for bait.

Dave, over at Jensen Bait and Tackle, reports that Earl Castner and Bob Green snagged a l- ...nd ... crappies over the weekend. ...t of the Savannas on MirrOLure.

Jim, at the Bait Box, says he isn't talking about his most recent successes.

"We went out over the weekend and did all right," the secretive angler told The Mirror, "but if I told 'em where, I wouldn't be able to get out there myself."

Letter to the Editor

...me editor:
...At a recent public hearing on the ...ation of I-95, some incorrect ...ments were made concerning my ...olvement in the selection of the ...oute.

Over a year ago, Chick Reinhardt ...as attempting to persuade the ...Martin County Commission to place ...e easterly-westerly route of I-95 on ...e ballot so that the people could vote ...n whether to go east or west. The ...ommissioners advised that there was ...o design for an easterly route.

I volunteered, as a public spirited ...itizen, to design an easterly route ...hat would miss virtually every home ...and not cause relocation of many ...families.

The county furnished me with an ...erial map, and I drew a route that ...missed all but one home. Later, the ...Department of Transportation moved ...the route (Alternate 9) so much as a ...mile so that it goes through a number ...of homes.

Anyone can see and compare the ...seven routes at the County Administration Building, on display in the ...commission meeting room.

It is my opinion that the route I drew ...would be the most beneficial to the ...people of Martin County.

The insendos that I would profit ...from the route are false. I own no land ...in the area, and do not represent any ...clients who own land in the area. The ...route was planned to go through the ...property of larger land owners who ...had not yet developed, making it ...possible to reduce the number of ...homeowners the state had to deal with, ...the cost of the land, and not disrupt ...heavily developed areas.

I was born here and intend to live ...my life here. I plan to continue to say ...and do what I feel is in the best interest ...of Martin County. Being a member of ...a pioneer Martin County family gives ...me no special privilege of power. ...However, it does make me want to see ...Martin County grow properly, which I ...will work hard to do.

Sincerely, go screw yourself,

The September 21st article in the ...Herald by Geraldine Bauer ...regarding the hiring of Herb Seaver as ...coordinator of Recreation in Martin ...County for $10,000 per year was ...somewhat of a jolt.

...this what? Turn off the lights after ...the game and clean the toilets.

...Jim Biggs, President of the Palm ...City Recreation Association said "He ...(Seaver) did nothing to help us. He got ...in the way." Maggie Hurchalla said it ...best when she said, "You can hire a ...janitor man to fix the lights."

...It seems to me the $10,000 plus other ...benefits could be used for a much ...better purpose. To quote Biggs,"I ...need money to build, not for help."

...As a good voting Republican, I do ...not find that I can vote for or support ...Beyers in his endeavor to attain his ...ambition to a higher office. As for ...Matt Wacha - SHAME.

ALTERNATIVES TO MANAGEMENT

...QUESTION: I have a chance to buy ...an apartment building, but it's ...about 30 miles from my office. ...Everything about it looks good except ...how I manage it myself. I know ...you have recommended that ...owners obtain professional management in this situation, but I can't ...seem to find a firm that will take on ...it. Do you think I should restrict ...myself to big-city property or ...property closer to home?

...ANSWER: Here's an idea that ...might work. Ask the seller to lease ...the property after he sells it to ...you. A typical sale-leaseback worked ...like this:

...Buyer paid $500,000 for an ...apartment building. Mr. Seller took ...back a second mortgage of $100,000. ...Buyer paid $100,000 in cash and ...assumed a $300,000 first mortgage. ...Seller leased the property for ten ...years at $2,000 net after all expenses, ...including debt service. Mr. Buyer ...gave Mr. Seller an option to ...purchase the property for $700,000 in ...ten years, and Mr. Seller pledged his ...$100,000 mortgage to guarantee the ...lease.

...Other points in this sale were all ...favorable to Mr. Buyer obtained his ...investment-free (real estate investment with all of its advantages, and ...Mr. Seller retained the rights to all ...income above $2,000 and the option to ...purchase in ten years.

...Please keep in mind that third parties ...sometimes lease your property ...when the seller wants to be relieved of ...management.

Life can be a moving experience

BY SALLY LATHAM

Fate for Dorothy and Earl Crawford has been one vast moving experience, in all senses of the word. When they settled in their home they had built to their liking on the Archepeligo in Sewall's Point, they were making their 30th move since they were married.

"And we're hoping it's the last – or at least one of the last," Dorothea told The Mirror, seated in their gracious eastern living room at 2 Mindora, subtly furnished with mellow-patinaed antiques.

Yet Admiral "Scrappy" Crawford is not very much on the move, and has been since he retired from the U.S. Navy in 1974.

"I'm finding myself doing more now than I did before I retired," the amiable Admiral said.

Everyone in Sewall's Point is aware of what's going on in Town Hall knows what is keeping Earl Crawford so busy. For the past two years, he's been a key member of the town commission, and has had a finger in nearly every phase of government in this small but carefully regulated community. Right now, he is responsible for the law and order, in that prosperous, growing area.

Dorothea and her Admiral are well-suited to the varied and active life in Sewall's Point, because one of the prime requisites of a Navy man and his wife is flexibility. In the course of "Scrappy's" career, they have lived all over this country and outside of it.

Earl Crawford is a Hoosier – a native of Peru, Ind., and Dorothea is a product of the Philadelphia area.

"We met on a blind date while I was at the academy," he told The Mirror. She had finished high school, and in those rigid years, Anapolis had a rule that a naval officer might not marry for two years after graduation.

The first home they shared was in Long Beach, Cal., while he was serving on the battleship West Virginia. Then it was back across the country to New London, Conn., when he went to Submarine School.

Subs then weren't like they are now – they were dirty and unairconditioned and unpleasant.

"When you'd been on for a while," Earl said aryly, "one wondered what kind one was ever doing there."

He was on a "tin can" all during World War II, in the Pacific, where he and his fellow sailors had their share of near-misses. Like most officers who have been through it, Earl is laconic about the experiences, except to say he never got really clobbered – If I had I wouldn't be here."

Earl was named Admiral in 1964, while he was with the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington. After that, it was all moves in 10 years – from Norfolk, Va., to Cuba, to Washington, and finally to Stuttgart, Germany. They had a home they'd built in Newport when his retirement came through.

Dorothea's reaction to all the moving about is philosophical.

"Every time we moved," she said, "it became more difficult to say goodby." Both Earl and Dorothea like people, whatever their background or cultural leaning, and have made countless friends.

They owned some property in Virginia, and planned to live there after retiring.

"But then we had two tours of duty in the tropics, which made us decide Virginia was too cold."

They first considered California, and then made a trip to Florida, looking around for their settling-down spot.

"We looked all over the state, but friends told us not leave Florida without visiting the Stuart area," the Admiral said. "We came here, found a section too, and decided this was it."

The lot, a dream of a site, is right on the inland of the Archipelago Branch of the St. Lucie River, and the Crawford's own patio-pool has the all-outdoor Florida scenery as its setting.

Besides their private boat dock, which sits "The Barge."

The reason for the boat's name, Earl explained, is tradition.

"In the Navy, the Admiral has a barge, and the Captain has a Gig," he added with his pixie grin.

He allows to take his Barge out on the Intracoastal, to go fishing which is his favorite hobby. But since he became town commoner, he's finding himself pressured by public duties.

Both Earl and Dorothea are also enthusiastic golfers, and are out on the course of the Yacht and Country Club whenever possible. Earl is also active in the Sailfish Club, and was a founder of the Navy League, of which he is a charter member. They attend St. John's Episcopal Church, and Dorothea is dedicated to working in the church shop, the Cracker Barrel, and the Altar Guild.

Their love for sheer shared enthusiasm, and their assets are turned toward their grandchildren, where their only son Joe is currently working his way into the Navy.

Joe, like his father, was first bent in the direction of service to his country. His graduation of the University of Florida Joe interrupted his education to join the Marines. One of the prize exhibits on the wall of Earl's office is of Joe being sworn in – by his father.

When he got out, he went back to finish his education at UF, then he went to California and Hollywood," his father said.

Than far, the 31-year-old bachelor has had only bit parts, but he's getting there.

"So far he's been in Laverne and Shirley, Wonder Woman, and he has a small part in Roots II," Dorothea said. "We watched Laverne and Shirley all the way through the whole hour, and we saw him five or six times. Of course, he doesn't say anything. If he did they'd have to pay him more."

But they're confident he'll make it big.

"He's got a part in 'The Champ' with Faye Dunnaway," she said with obvious pride. "We're quite proud of him."

ADMIRAL Earl Crawford, police commissioner for Sewall's Point, enjoys the memory bank of his den walls of which are filled with photos and drawings from his days at sea. One of his prizes is the caricature done by a shipmate, of the Admiral teeing off atop a submarine.

...n Island, Fla. – The first ...-rise condominium to be offered ...Ocean Village, the 11-story, 42-unit ... building, has won local ...ptance as shown by the sales of 90 ...ent of the building before ...construction began.

...design compatible with the ...ural surroundings was considered mandatory, according to James R. Otterson, director of marketing and sales, Palm Beach architectural firm of Schwab and Twitty was hired to create it. Since Seascape went on the market, 37 residences have been sold 15 of which were bought by people already living in the Ft. Pierce-Stuart area. Mirror: Please type your news

...Mirror is most appreciative of the ...ny press releases turned in from ...clubs and organizations and ...announcements of club meetings and ...announcements of service projects. ...However, in recent weeks it seems ...to have been a preponderance of ...election announcements. Often they are very hard to decipher and in some cases have been totally unreadable. For this reason, The Mirror asks that a news release be typed if possible. Also, it would be appreciated if the copy is double-spaced so our typesetters can set the announcements more easily.

Editor will participate in forum

Richard E. Campbell, editor of The Mirror, will serve as a delegate to the Florida open forum of the White House Conference on Small Business on October 12 in Miami.

The open forums are being held throughout the United States to gain input that will set the guidelines of the regional forums and eventually the January, 1980 White House conference in Washington, D.C.

Campbell will present an outline of concern over the government regulations and paperwork facing small business, especially those small businesses with less than twenty employees and less than a million dollar annual gross.

The editor has asked for the opinions of local businessmen related to his topic to get a complete cross-section of community business views.

...l personality portrait of Ethel Krall

...'s petite, pretty, vibrant and ...ctory, and if medals (for ...ervice) were awarded, she ...ld be in the front line. Her name is ...el Krall and she is one terrific ...

...ifteen years ago Ethel Joe Krall ...s vacationing in Miami. They had ...ad earlier contact with General ...ment Corporation and a ...ntative persuaded them to accompany him on a visit to Port St. Lucie, ...ook, and they fell in love on the ...ay. As Ethel puts it, "Crossing that ...dge over the St. Lucie River does ...mething to you." In these ensuing ...ars, their only regret was that they ...n't discovered it earlier.

So, they left Chicago where Joe had been in charge of maintenance for the National Food Stores chain for many years, and Ethel had been with a surgical supply house for thirty years, first as a secretary, then advancing to customer services, and on into sales correspondence.

For five of their 14 years in Port St. Lucie, Joe and Ethel managed the Snack Bar at the Sailfish Gold Course at Sandpiper Bay. Ethel full-time and Joe part-time. They had the same arrangement later at the Community Center Snack Bar until Joe's illness intervened and Ethel devoted all her time and attention to him.

Ethel has been widowed now for the past year and she has begun to resume some of her previously curtailed activities – the PSL and Beautiful Waters Homemakers Clubs (she served the latter as president for three years), Rio Lindo Garden Club, the Lionesses, the Republican Club, Shuffleboard, All States Club and a card club. She has accepted a trusteeship on the Board at the Community Center.

Ethel and Joe loved to bowl and she is returning to that game. They loved also to dance; in fact, they originally met at a church dance, and Ethel says Joe was a beautiful ballroom dancer, almost professional in performance. Needless to say, that is one of their mutually-enjoyed pastimes she misses most.

But without a doubt, cooking and baking remain Ethel's favorite hobbies. Typically, on the day of this interview she was making soup for a friend who was ill. She thoroughly enjoys creating new dishes and repeating old standbys. You'll find her "cooking up a storm" at the Community Center at many special events – baked goodies for card parties, sausages for the Pancake Breakfasts, hamburgers and hot dogs with a special flair. People swear that they know when Ethel is on duty at the Center because of the tempting smells emanating from the kitchen. Many testified that her "hamburger plate" on Labor Day exceeded the clambake dishes in savory taste! When she's not presiding over some culinary functions, she is a record ticket seller for Center events.

Ethel has a son in the Navy, stationed in Illinois, and a five year old grandson, just the mention of whom causes a special gleam to appear in her eyes. She is particularly pleased that her brother, a retired policeman from the Chicago area, and his wife decided after visiting her to buy a home and move here also.

Ethel has so many fine qualities – we've mentioned only a few. If you don't already know her, then find a way to meet her, for she has a warmth that draws one close.

...SL hard hats increase number

...ers of this community continue ...ir support to Heine Demeules' and ...ck Huffman's pleas for additional ...ds for the construction of Lundin Hall ...ver they do, the crew of volunteer ...ard Hats" increases. Last month ...ded Max Sidelman to the list; ...month we include three more.

Herb Dittler and his wife, Edna, came to Port St. Lucie five years ago from East Orange, New Jersey, where he had been a brewer for many years. The Dittlers have two children, they love this area and are happy that they chose it for their retirement years. Herb is one who just happened to drop by the Community Center to see if he could be of any help and he has contributed greatly to the general labor work taking place on the construction site.

Jim Houlik has been a carpenter with the Grumman Aircraft Corporation both in Stuart and in Long Island, New York, for many years. He has been of tremendous assistance to the "Hard Hats" with his many years of experience and with his particular expertise.

Bob Scott was an engineer in Saginaw, Michigan, until four years ago when he and his wife, Mary, discovered Port St. Lucie. They have two children and three grandchildren. Their hobbies are boating and swimming and one of the reasons they chose Port St. Lucie was because of its water facilities. Bob helps out at the Center in whatever way he can and in whatever capacity he may be needed.

...hings that make our day

...y Center received with consider- ...ncern this month Alice Bowen's ...ition as a Trustee and Director ...ity Community Center. It was an ...ion necessitated by health reasons, ...s been explained in her letter of ...ation.

...Her departure leaves a vacuum ...ay way at the Center, according ...sident Dick Lundin and ...ate Secretary Stelsa ...ner. One of the most immediate, ...s pointed out, was to find a ...ment to be responsible for the ...ion of tickets for Center ...l events. She said:

...contacted Trustees Anita White ...Ethel Krall, explained our problem, and asked if they would be willing to share this most important responsibility for the year. To our immeasurable delight, both not only acquiesced but added that they would be delighted to do so!

"If you think that response didn't make our day worthwhile, then you have never experienced the sometimes unrewarding task of rounding up volunteers to do a job.

"In this case, the dividends are many-fold. Both Ethel and Anita are crackerjack salesmen, have extensive contacts, are thorough and precise, and, best of all, have an enthusiasm for the Center that rubs off on those they encounter."

Tickets are priced at $1.75. We urge you to make up your party right away and reserve your favorite spot to view the new fashions and then enjoy your favorite card game.

The tickets are available at the Center office* or from either Anita White (878-2927) or Ethel Krall (878-2948). These two dedicated Center Trustees will be handling the distribution of all tickets for the Center's special events from now on, according to Special Events Co-Chairman Streisa Schreiber.

Mirror finishes third, but owns second place trophy

BY BOB FRYER

...session is nine points of the ... declared Mirror Editor Dick ...mpbell when he learned Monday ...e that there may be some ...ion about the results of the Port ... Exchange Club's second ...al Great American Raft Race.

...e comment came from Campbell ...ightly clutched the four-inch-tall ...d place trophy which Exchange ... officials had given him at the ...mation of the raft race Saturday ...

...ite of being the last raft to finish ...race Mirror crew members were ...eeing the course of the race that ... the first Federal Savings and ... Association of Fort Pierce crew ...rewed up and taken a boat tow ... to the Sandpiper Bay Resort, the ...ur had placed second in the raft ...ery. That's what the trophy ...in the Mirror says, and that's the ...two area daily papers reported it.

...t, on Monday, Exchange Club ...organizer Ed Kennedy read off a ...of results for this reporter and had ...Mirror's entry listed in the ...ested raft category, in third place.

...was when Campbell was told of ...that he clutched the trophy, dared ...one to take it away, and recited the ...-old cliche about possession being ...points of the law. "And, if you ...y want a scoop," he told this ...orter, "you can put it in your story ... we'll enter a protest sometime ...ng the coming year of the Port St. ...ie Bank's raft. I have it from ...ible sources that the bicyclists ...used to paddle their green and ...yacht were actually members of ...Italian Olympic cyclist team. ...deed, I heard them talking Italian ...er the race. How can they do that ...in a an American raft race?"

...nity editor went on to point out ... the Exchangeclub's entry ...ably should have been disqualified ...as a minimum of four crew ...bers were required and the club's ...was only manned by two. But, he ...at he's not one to cry sour-grapes, ...he'd refrain from filing a protest in their case. "After all, they sponsored the race," he said.

Proceeds from the race and a fish fry went to the United Way.

For the record, here is the list of results furnished by Kennedy:

In the unlimited raft category, the Port St. Lucie Bank streaked to a first-place finish in their bicycle-paddle-powered concoction. Bank President Herb Haughton led his crew, which consisted of Linda Beatty, Dan McCarthy, Kevin Lyones, Tom Minch and Dan Bouker.

The second place finisher in the unlimited division was Sun Bank of St Lucie County, which featured a pontoon craft manned by crew members Charles Gehrke, Harry Hannawacker, John Gates and Robert McIntosh. Third place went to the Port St. Lucie Mirror's entry, crewed by not-ready-for-deadline-sailors Mary Meissner, Kathy Baum, Jeanne Ackley and Bob Fryer.

In the raft division, Citizens Federal took first place in a creation paddled by William Taylor, Larry Lewis, John Lyman and Mike Bollinger. The Exchange Club was second, in a somewhat unstable craft rowed by Gary Berger and Phil Caraune. First Federal, in an entry consisting of a bunch of innertubes lashed together, placed third after crew members Jim Teneyck, Ed Daniels, L. Bailer, Kathy Clark, Bob Bluestone and Mike Brown, gave out in a mid-course and took a tow to the finish line.

In the canoe race, brothers Earl and Tim Dodge edged out the U.S. Navy entry of Charles and Barbara Birch to take first place. In third were two men who simply called themselves the x-rated entry. A canoe entered by Webb Chiropractic Center finished fourth, followed by Georgine Kellagher, Paulette Tomkins and Fran Whalen of Indian River Federal, who were the first all-woman canoe team to finish the race. Linda Carwell and Karen Allen, calling themselves Tooth Fairies, were in the last canoe across the finish line.

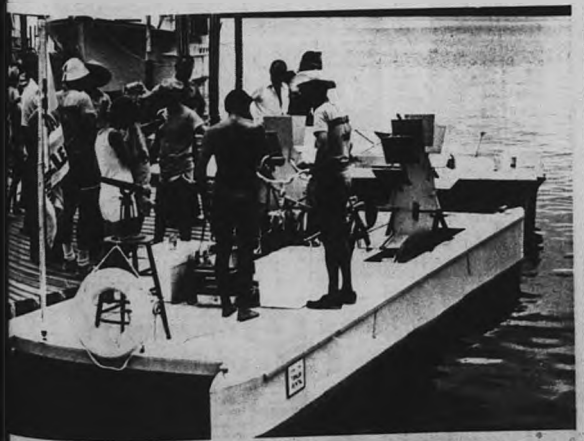
THE NOT READY FOR DEADLINE SAILORS pull up to the finish line, an hour and 32 minutes after starting the three mile Great American Raft Race last Saturday in Port St. Lucie. Crew members are, from the left: Kathy Baum; Bob Fryer, in water by forward innertube; Jeanne Ackley, at stern; and Mary Meissner. The raft, which cost less than $30 to build, was designed to be raced in a wind. There was none during the race.

LINED UP FOR THE START—This is as close as the six rafts in the Great American Raft Race ever got to one another. Seconds later the starting gun sounded and the large, double-paddlewheel raft of the Port St. Lucie Bank, as well as the pontoon Sun Bank creation to the left of it, bolted down the river. The Mirror's raft is in the foreground, with sail lowered. (Why bother to raise it? There was no wind.) To the left of the Sun Bank raft are First Federal, Citizens Federal and the Port St. Lucie Exchange Club rafts.

...D- Mirror Editor Richard Campbell comes up soggy after the paper's ...dy-for-deadline-sailors tossed him into the St. Lucie River at the ...ion of the second annual Great American Raft Race. Campbell avoided a ...rous problem—mutiny—by wisely substituting type-setter Jeanne Ackley ...gnalition on the raft shortly before the race began.

Photos by Fred Meissner

AN EXHUBERANT Kathy Baum celebrates the fact that, finally, the Great American Raft Race is over. The Mirror raft finished just ahead of a downpour (the only thing it finished ahead of). Nobody cared about the rain, as crew members had already spent the last hour and a half in and out of the water, trying to propel the innertube creation. Editor Dick Campbell, far left, shouldn't have cared either, as he was dunked a few minutes later. Others are, from left to right, Bill Meissner, Bob Fryer, Peg Meissner and Salli Campbell.



...EST RAFT on the North Fork these days is the Port St. ... Bank's day-glow pink and green concoction. The huge ...features two bicycles hooked up to double-paddle ...wheels. The elaborate creation took many hours to build, but the labors were rewarded when the raft left all others in its wake during the second annual Great American Raft Race at Sandpiper Bay Resort last Saturday.

CITIZENS FEDERAL won first place in the raft category of the second annual Great American Raft Race in Port St. Lucie last Saturday, while the Exchange Club rafters found the going a little slower, coming in, by some accounts, second in the division. The PSL Exchange Club sponsored the event, as well as a fish fry, at the Sandpiper Bay Resort. Proceeds are going to the St. Lucie County United Way fund.

Carter veto stymies inlet funding

BY SALLY LATHAM

..President Jimmy Carter Tuesday temporarily kicked the slats from under a sand-swap involving the St. Lucie Inlet negotiated last week, which now may or may not mean the beginning of another multimillion dollar project in this area.

The presidential veto of the Public Works bill which includes a $6 million improvement of the inlet blasted the hopes of private interests and governmental agencies alike. But according to Ann Decker, area coordinator for U.S. Rep. L.A. "Skip" Bafalis, they're not going to go down without a struggle.

"Lealled Babalis in Washington this morning," Miss Decker told The Mirror. "The Republicans held a meeting today, and the Democrats are going to have a caucus -- they're definitely going to try to override."

It will take a two-thirds majority in both the House of Representatives and the Senate to shoot down a presidential veto. Miss Decker said the prospects look bright for overriding, because several projects involved in the overall billion-dollar bill are strongly favored by both parties.

The veto is a source of frustration to the county administration, which has been fighting the battle of the inlet with Washington for many years. County Administrator Jack Nobles said Wednesday he was in Washington with Commissioner Tom Higgins two years ago, when the bill benefiting the inlet was first vetoed by the president. At that time, he said, he got the impression that even the conservation lobbyists were willing to listen favorably to the inlet improvement.

Martin County has an escrow account for the project of approximately $1,207,000, which would be used as a complement to the government money, if and when it becomes available.

"We advanced $75,000 to the government for a study two years ago," Nobles said.

The sand-and-land exchange which was to facilitate the development at Sailfish Point was tentatively negotiated last Thursday, in a session involving the owners of the point, Mobil Oil, the county commission, the Department of Environmental Regulation, the Department of Natural Resources, the Parks Department, the Corps of Engineers, and other regulatory bodies.

Commissioner Higgins, contacted Wednesday morning, said he doesn't feel the presidential veto is going to affect the transaction with Mobil, which was seeking river-bottom fill to nourish the point land. The Mobil [illegible] agreed to move the sand which will be dredged out of the Crossroads area by the Corps of Engineers.

"Frankly," Higgins said, "the Corp a is happy to have it moved out -- it needs to be dredged regardless of what further happens on the inlet, and they don't know where to put the sand."

The bottom material, Higgins said, is of poor quality, and unusable anywhere else.

Higgins said he'd talked to Sen. Lawton Childs' office that morning, and Childs said he will vote for the override.

"They should act in approximately two weeks," Higgins said. "We're moving forward on the assumption that the veto will be overridden. We'll go before the state Cabinet on Oct. 24, to get all the state permits. We're getting all our t's crossed and our I's dotted on the assumption that congress will either override or a compromise will be reached. After all, the inlet improvement will be a cost saving. It's ridiculous to consider continuing to spend $400,000 every year to move sand around

Montessori acquires new site

Sun Grove Montessori School celebrated the acquisition of its new site September 17 with a picnic and a key presentation ceremony. The new location of the school is at the corner of Kirby Loop and Dame roads.

Dr. Rudy Widman, pres. of the board of directors for the school, presented the key to Barbara Martin, school administrator, who in turn presented the key to the faculty members, Don and Ginny Zywot, Gudrun Schlange, Karen Blackmer, and Charlotte Hilber.

The school plans to move to the new site early in October. The Sunday celebration followed a week-end of painting and cleaning the school building.

Anyone interested in the Montessori method of education may visit the present site located at the Port St. Lucie United Methodist Church on Prima Vista Blvd. in Port St. Lucie. The classes are in session from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. There is also a choice of separate morning and afternoon sessions for ptrdvhoolrtd

Sun Grove Montessori School was founded earlier this year to expand quality Montessori education in St Lucie County. The school is non-descriminatory and non-sectarian. For more information call 878-1155 or 464-5436.

INDEPENDENCE DIGNITY PURPOSE

HUGH JENCKS, 878-3856

One slight change caused by the trip was that the October board meeting had to be held Wednesday instead of Thursday. That meeting also was a milestone in a way because it was the first held at the Community Center. The board meetings used to held at the Port St. Lucie Medical Center, but that site had to be given up because all the offices there are filling up with doctors. A brief stab was made at using the Northport Marina, but this didn't work because of all the goings in and out and the multitudinous activities at that busy spot.

Word has been received from the Martin County Adult Education folks that the next defensive driving course is planned tentatively for late this month. We expect to get definite information later and will pass it along. For those who are not familiar with the course, it usually runs for eight hours (four sessions of two hours each) and it provides you with a great deal of basic information on what you can do to avoid accidents and, possibly, to save lives including your own. In addition, if you pass the course, you become eligible for a 10 percent discount on your Colonial Penn automobile insurance premium. Some other companies grant similar discount. Keep watching here for news on the program.

Insurance is a topic of prime interest for our members, as always. We've received a number of calls from people interested in the monthly visit of Carl Wahlquist, the Colonial Penn consultant. His regular scheduled call here is on the third Friday of each month, and his current consultation site is the Medical Center. However, like the board of directors, he probably will have to switch from this meeting place to another location, probably the Community Center if arrangements can be made there. Actually, the Center is more convenient for most folks than the Medical Center anyway.

Last Friday, President Maurie Arluck and Insurance Chairman Gordon Long attended an intensive seminar on insurance at the Holiday Inn in Fort Pierce. Delegations from AARP chapters in Vero Beach, Fort Pierce and Martin County also attended, and Bill Kollage, assistant state director for this area, was a member of the Vero Beach group. Carl Wahlquist conducted the seminar, and Maurie reports that those present -- some of whom had been sceptical of Colonial Penn -- were quite impressed with what this company has to offer in the way of accident, health, automobile and home insurance. Maurie and Gordon will present a report at the October meeting on what they learned.

There will be three shifts, from 7 a.m. to 9, from 9 to 11, and from 11 to 1 p.m. If you've signed up as a volunteer, please indicate to one of the committee your preference as to your shift. Volunteers who wish to eat must buy tickets – in advance or at the door. The tickets, which will become available in November, are being handled by Anita White and Ethel Krall.

How about a Christmas shopping tour to the West Palm Beach mall? There has been a fair showing of interest in such a trip. If you are interested, get in touch with Mike Krain at A Traveling Man (878-4683) or with this writer (878-3856). A list was started at the September meeting, and we received several calls since from ladies who are interested.

YNE ALLEN of General Development Corporation outlined plans Tuesday a proposed development of the city's Midport section, east of U.S.1, that could 3,603 new residents here by 1987. The firm's application for development is rly completed and will be up for review by the Treasure Coast Regional ning Council and Port St. Lucie city council soon, probably within 60 to 90 Allen said.

GDC outlines Midport project

BY BOB FRYER

Port St. Lucie city council members got another look Tuesday at plans for developing the Midport area of the city east of U.S.1 into a project that is expected to house 5,503 persons within the next 10 years.

The presentation of the Midport plans was made by General Development Corporation officials, who noted that they expect to make a formal request for development approval soon.

Because the project is to be so large, state law requires that it be considered a Development of Regional Impact (DRI) and that the Treasure Coast Regional Planning Council also review the plans.

Several months ago the original DRI application went to the Treasure Coast council for study, but council staff members said the application didn't contain all the needed information.

GDC spokesman Wayne Allen told city council members Tuesday that additional information requested for the DRI application has been turned in and that he expects by Friday the Treasure Coast staffers will give word that the new information is sufficient. Then, Allen said, those staff members will complete their study of the application and most likely have a list of recommendations on the project ready for the November meeting of the Treasure Coast council. The city's review of the project, he said, will likely be scheduled within the next 60 to 90 days.

Most of the presentation was in the form of a slide show which Treasure Coast council members viewed last month and city planning and zoning board members saw a few weeks ago.

The Midport plan calls for development of 1,250 acres east of U.S.1 from an area a little north of Walton Road, to a point opposite the intersection of U.S.1, GDC plans to build Rivergreen Shopping Center. It is to contain more than 200,000 square feet of shopping area, including a supermarket and department stores. In the interior portion of the project, single family homes are planned, while medium to high density apartments are planned along U.S.1 south of the shopping center and along Walton Road east of the center. A 20-acre hospital site, a 16 acre park, sites for an elementary, middle and high school, office centers and a motel are also included in the plans.

GDC plans to build a total of 756 single-family homes in the project. All of those homes, plus 80 medium density (eight units per acre) apartment units and all drainage facilities, are expected to be built in Phase I, between now and 1981. Shopping center construction is to begin next year, with all but about 50,000 square feet of the center planned for completion by late next year. A total of 1,843 persons are expected to be living at the project by the end of Phase I.

In Phase II, from 1982 to 1984, an additional 988 units, including some medium density and some garden apartments (12 units per acre), are slated for development. The population for the project at the end of that phase is expected to be 4,013.

During Phase II, work is to begin on a 29-acre office center along U.S.1 and a seven acre commercial site along Walton Road.

In the final phase, from 1985 to 1987, an additional 986 garden apartments are expected to be built, adding another 1,490 persons and giving a total development population of 5,503, based on 2.5 persons per unit. In that phase, a motel along U.S.1 and a five acre commercial site along Leonard Road are expected to be built. GDC officials noted they have a 20-acre site in their plans for a hospital. At present there are no plans for the firm to build the hospital. In the past, GDC officials have said they hoped another organization would do so.

A large portion of the Midport project, totaling 480 acres, is to be deeded to what GDC officials term "greenways". This acreage will include the drainage system, as well as some lands left undeveloped. Allen said GDC proposes a special taxing district to be set up for Midport residents to pay for maintenance of the drainage system.

Existing marshes and ponds will generally be incorporated into the drainage system and used as stormwater retention areas. Swales connecting the ponds and marshes will be used to eventually route the water into two existing drainageways that lead to the North Fork of the St. Lucie River. Control structures are planned to regulate the rate of water runoff.

GDC plans to deed a 16 acre tract, including a pond, to the city for use as a park. The firm also plans to deed a 70 acre tract north of Walton Road to the school board for a middle and high school and a smaller tract, south of Walton, for an elementary school. The park and school sites will be given to the two governing bodies.

All four council members present expressed favor of the presentation made Tuesday. Councilman Schuyler Sharpe was absent.

Nursing home is sought

By the time you read this, a 120-bed nursing home may be approved by health officials for Port St. Lucie.

On Wednesday night, Health Planning Council members were to have met in Fort Pierce to consider requests by one firm seeking approval of a 120-bed nursing home in Port St. Lucie and another firm requesting a 102-bed nursing home in Fort Pierce.

Gerald Girard, a Port St. Lucie representative on the five-county Health Planning Council, said Tuesday, "As far as I can determine, we will only be able to approve one of the two requests, as there is a limitation on how many beds can be granted a certificate of need in one area." He added that a vote for one nursing home or the other was planned for Wednesday night and that "my personal inclination would be for the one in Port St Lucie, because that would at least give us some type of medical facility for the south county area.

The Eden Park Management Company, which currently operates the Abiejean Russel Nursing Home in Fort Pierce and another nursing home in St. Lucie County, made the request for the 120-bed nursing home in Port St. Lucie. Girard said the firm didn't specify the proposed location of the nursing home, other than to indicate it would be between U.S.1 and the Florida Turnpike.

Cather Industries made the request for a 102-bed nursing home, to be located at 31st Street and Florida Avenue.

According to Health Planning Council rules, only a given number of nursing or medical beds are slotted the area the council has jurisdiction over. The local Health Planning Council covers Palm Beach, Martin, St. Lucie, Indian River and Okeechobee counties. Girard says that Palm Beach County has 18 voting members on the council, compared to a total of only 12 from the remaining counties. In the past, he said, this has resulted in Palm Beach County being overbuilt with hospital beds and has left an insufficient allotment of beds for the remaining counties. He said his inclination to favor the nursing home in Port St. Lucie is based on what he believes is a shortage of medical care facilities for the city and south county residents.

The nursing home proposed for Port St. Lucie would cover Port St. Lucie, south St. Lucie county and a portion of the north Martin County, whereas the applicant for the Fort Pierce nursing home would take in persons from Fort Pierce and Port St. Lucie if approved.

Results of the council's decision will be published in The Mirror next week.

Peacock ranch may be developed massive area encompassing 35 to square miles west of Port St. Lucie pparently under consideration for lopment.

n Shannon, director of the ue Coast Regional Planning cil, confirmed Tuesday that presentatives from a foreign ary consulting firm met with him ers what would be required to ship the sprawling Sonny Peacock ch west of Port St. Lucie.

mon, who said the planning and agement consultants did not fy the potential developer, noted the meeting was basically just to re the consultants of the edure required for seeking lopment of regional impact oval.

e peacock ranch is bordered on nst by the far western Port St. city limits and by the Florida ike to the north of the city. The ern border of the property is d the Martin-St. Lucie county and the western border is formed ate roads 709 and 609, according nnon. He said he was not sure what the northern border of the land is.

"It's an area of over 35 square miles," Shannon said, adding that the consultants did not present any development plans during the meeting. "It was a very preliminary meeting. They wanted to know who should be contacted and what the timetable is for seeking a development of regional impact approval. Basically, what they were doing was a reconnaissance thing for the owner and will now probably begin mapping out a strategy on what's needed to develop the land," he said. Shannon emphasized that the consultants did not indicate what sort of development considerations were being made for the land.

Port St. Lucie city planner Mike Sznuyog attended the conference and estimated the ranch area at about 40 square miles. He said, "they asked how to apply for a DRI, but I have no idea what it would include," and added that the consultants indicated they probably won't be back for more talks for another six or seven months.

outine audit of city is due ough an exact analysis of how ry fared financially during the year which ended on Sept. 30 be known for awhile, the City of t. Lucie appears to be in pretty financial condition.

t the word from the city r Gerald Van Patten.

n asked for an analysis this Van Patten explained that he know exact figures until a state audit is conducted later always keep the books open for ple of weeks after the fiscal year allow time for last minute bills mitted to us. Then the audit is ed. The auditors are due here ," he said.

ite of not having final figures n Patten noted that the city's cash reserve will probably come out at around $1 million. He said the city currently has $800,000 of that money in certificates of deposit.

Van Patten added that when the final figure for the amount of revenue collected by the city in the last year its compared to city expenditures for the year, there will probably be around $180,000 in extra funds collected.

One area of the city budget where much more funds were received than anticipated is from building permit fees. More than $300,000 was collected by the city in the past fiscal year. That budget projected that only $175,000 in building fees would come to the city. For the recently started fiscal year, the budget projects $300,000 will be collected in building fees.

The editor of The Mirror, Richard E. Campbell, takes full responsibility for the mistake, and regrets the failure of our "fail safe" system in removing it before it came into type.

The Mirror is on record in support of Mr. Tilton's route, and has, in the past, supported Mr. Tilton's public spirited effort to resolve a problem that has caused so much debate and community infighting as to the route of I-95. We continue to support that route and Tilton's efforts in the matter.

740 unit mobile home park is on city agenda

The developer of Spanish Lakes and Spanish Lakes Riverfront mobile home parks will meet with Port St. Lucie Planning and Zoning Board members Monday, Oct.16, to seek site plan approval for a new, 740-unit mobile home park.

The new project, to be known as Golf Village Park, will, if approved, become the first mobile home park within city limits. The two Spanish Lakes parks are in the unincorporated portion of the county.

The Planning and Zoning Board and the city council have already given preliminary approval to the new park. If the Planning and Zoning Board grants its final site approval Monday, the project will likely be presented soon to the city council for a final okay.

The park is to be located to the east of U.S.1, along Commercial Street at the industrial park north of Walton Road. Plans call for Commercial Street to be extended to Walton Road to provide a second access to the park.

The city's site review committee, composed of city manager Leonard Silvia, city planner Mike Sznuyog, city engineer William Miley and planning board chairman Vaughn Lewis, recently examined the site plan. The committee noted that city law would prevent a sign for the park from being as large as the ones for the Spanish Lakes parks, but, other than that, had no objections to the plan.

In other action slated for the Planning and Zoning Board meeting at 1:30 p.m. Monday, board members will be asked to grant a variance to General Development Corporation to allow expansion of the Sandpiper Villas project along the North Fork. GDC recorded its plat for the Villas project before a city law established a law requiring building to be at least 75 feet from the river. Of the 51 additional units GDC hopes to add to the existing project, 18 of them would fall within that 75 foot limit.

Realtor Paul Zinter will make a request by a Dr. Henry concerning annexation and zoning on Pruitt Road at Mitchell Avenue. Discussion on the city's model home law, criteria for church development, a presentation on the GDC Midport DRI area, and discussion of a request for R-2A zoning along canal C-24 are other items on the agenda.

Italian-Americans meet at S.L. Riverfront

The Italian-American Club will hold a meeting at 7:00 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 12 in the arts and crafts room at the Spanish Lakes Riverfront recreation center.

Christmas tree lighting

Even though Halloween hasn't arrived yet, city council members are already planning for Christmas.

Mayor William McChesney told fellow council members Tuesday that the Port St. Lucie Band has offered again to perform a concert of Christmas carols during the city's annual tree lighting ceremony. He noted the band is already rehearsing for the holiday season and said since the band is planning many performances during the season, the council should pick a date for the tree lighting ceremony early. "He (band leader Charles Edgette) needs to know so he can plan the rest of his schedule," McChesney said.

So, council members decided to set the event for Monday, Nov. 27, with an alternate date of Dec. 11 if the band is already committed to play elsewhere on Nov. 27.

In light of the city's ongoing battle with Fort Pierce developer Peter Smith over Southport Shopping Center, where city hall is located, Mayor McChesney said location other than the grounds next to city hall may be needed for the treelighting ceremony.

Chamber membership drive to begin soon

BY SALLY LATHAM

The Chamber of Commerce of Jensen Beach, hurting this year for new members, is beefing up its annual membership drive, the board was informed at Monday night's meeting.

Emphasizing the importance of the drive was Gene Greenwood, who reported on thebudget. The balance for operations is rapidly dropping because of "The impossibly miserable showing in getting new members."

"The trend has got to be reversed," Greenwood said, "or we're going to be bankrupt."

Ron Mitchell, president of Jensen Beach Bank, said that he and Richard Campbell, editor of The Mirror Newspapers, are heading up membership drive teams. They'll work in friendly competition to recruit new members and to keep present members on the active list.

"But it's up to each member and director of the Chamber to get out and make contacts," Mitchell said.

The Chamber sidestepped any action on two of the most controversial issues of the day -- casino gambling and the route of I-95 through Martin County, a subject on which hearings have been held in the past two weeks.

On casino gambling, the board agreed that it "is bad," but that it is "too volatile an issue for the Chamber of Commerce to vote on." Members voted unanimously not to take a stand on the subject.

Similarly, they chose not to respond to the Department of Transportation's invitation to react to the proposed I-95 routes. Said secretary Barbara Toro: "It would be most intelligent to write a letter to DOT and say we'll go along with whatever they've decided. They're going to do it anyway."

Unofficially, boardmember John Heyburn said he approves the proposed western route, because "it's going to help the merchants--people can't get to West Palm Beach so darn quick to shop."

Progress is being made on the clean-up and beautification of the community center adjacent to the C of C headquarters, president Fred Meeker announced.

"They're debugging and moving the furniture off the stage," he said. The roof has already been repaired by the county, he said.

Earlier this year, the county commission accepted the building on a lease basis, as a central recreation facility for the Jensen area. Since no money was in the budget for improvements in the present fiscal year, the work is being done slowly, and only as money becomes available.

Leif Erikson gets a great welcome

The Vikings landed one of the best festal days in the history of the Leif Erikson Day celebration on Sunday, at the annual Norse Celebration of the ancient ancestral arrival on American shores nearly 1000 years ago.

"We had one of the best days we've ever had for the celebration," Philip Lee, Leif Erikson Day chairman told The Mirror. "It wasn't too hot or too cold. The only trouble we had was landing the boats, because of the wind."

The Sons of Norway festival drew a crowd estimated at between 3,000 and 4,000 for the colorful ceremony, which was the combined effort of the 11 SON lodges from throughout Florida. Some 130 of the direct descendants of Norwegians were among the more than 200 attending the Saturday night banquet and dance held at the Holiday Inn, and who contributed measurably to the success of the Sunday pageant and festival.

The Viking Queen, chosen on the basis of the amount of money contributed to the Sons of Norway charities, was 74-year-old Austid Dexee of Coral Gables, a member of the Everglades chapter of Fort Myers.

Denise Lee, wife of the chairman of the local chapter, was "Miss Gulfstream."

Politically-prominent Chuck Nergard was master of ceremonies for the pageant, which included landing of two Viking boats on the shore of the Jensen Beach Causeway.

"We had just one incident," Lee said. "An Indian was injured by a Viking, in the landing ruckus. But the Viking took the Indian to the camp fire, and they ended up smoking the peacepipe."

Salvation Army plans expansion to Martin

Plans for the expansion of Salvation Army services into Martin County got a boost this week as the first collection drop box was located in the Jensen Beach Shopping Plaza.

Major Byrd Hudson, Salvation Army director for Ft. Pierce, said that there would be two boxes in Jensen Beach to serve those who would like to donate merchandise and clothing to the army thrift store in Ft. Pierce.

Persons with items too large for the box can call the thrift store at 464-3620, and drivers will pick up the items at homes in the Jensen Beach area every Monday.

"We will see what the response is first, and if we need to devote more days to the project we will do so," Byrd said.

The drop box is the result of the development of Salvation Army services to the county brought about by the two-year-old advisory board of the army. Chairman Dick Campbell was present when the first box was placed in the center.

"We hope to have a thrift store in Stuart by the middle of next year," Campbell said. He added that the advisory board had expanded the annual Christmas appeal this year to include kettles in Indiantown, Port Salerno, Stuart and Jensen Beach. The kettles will be manned by local service clubs.

Halloween contests

If Columbus Day's here, can Halloween be far behind?

No. And every kid in Jensen Beach Elementary School will tell you about it. This is the week for the annual Halloween Carnival poster contest, and every home room is outdoing itself in the spook and witch department, competing for the prizes which will be awarded Monday at the school.

The carnival, sponsored by the Parent Teachers' Association, again will be the high point in excitement for the fall term. And the pre-carnival activity is rampant, according to chairman, Mrs. Susan Merritt.

The Carnival will take place from 1 to 4 p.m. on Oct. 28, and everyone in the community is being invited to turn out for the fun.

One of the most exciting parts of the gala, Mrs. Merritt said, will be the arrival of Bill Jolliffe, to do the make-up. Bill is an expert, and does the make-up for plays at the Barn Theatre in Stuart, so the thrill is that much the greater to be "done" by a pro."

The haunted house will be another of the big thrills of the carnival afternoon, which will include games, races, food and fun.

The PTA is selling tickets for a trip to Nassau in conjunction with the event. They are on sale at the Family Butcher Shop, J&J Reynolds and Winn Dixie. Attractions will include 14 wonderful prizes donated by merchants, Mrs. Merritt said.

DROPBOX--The first Salvation Army drop box in Martin County was located this week at the Jensen Beach Shopping Plaza. Donations will be picked up each week on Monday. Pictured above are Duke Logsdon and Tommy Logsdon, army truck drivers, with Dick Campbell, chairman of the Martin County Salvation Army advisory board.

Improved transportation for retarded

The Martin County Association for Retarded Citizens is working on a plan to provide greater mobility for the elderly and the handicapped, according to MCARC President Bob Batterman, who attended a recent meeting with the State Department on Transportation on the subject.

At the past MCARC meeting, held at Stuart Middle School's special education building, members voted to resurrect the unit's group living home project. Named to serve on the committee were Harry Bittle, H.S. D'Ambrogio, Mick Smith, Suzy Hutcheson, Ken Van Leeuen and Bob Batterman. D'Ambrogio is attempting to locate an available property to locate the center on.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

To paraphrase an adage, "A little knowledge can be costly."

Such was the case when, soon after we moved to Sewall's Point in February 1974, we were harassed (no, intimidated) into action that not only served no useful purpose but also proved to be very expensive.

The article headed, "To eliminate the dodder: cut," on page 10 of your October 5, 1978, edition provides readers with little factual and/or helpful information. In truth, the message is frankly misleading. In addition, it could motivate relatively new residents of this town - people who may be as ill-informed and/or as uninformed as we were - to pay opportunistic businessmen for worthless services. This letter, therefore, attempts to correct the misstatements and amplify the inadequate data presented in that story.

There was dodder on the Sewall's Point lot we purchased early in 1970, and there was (and is) dodder on the property on which we now live when we bought it in 1972. The top two-thirds of one of our live oaks, an enormous tree that is about 250 years old, is completely blanketed with dodder. And, the upper-most branches of a younger live oak in our yard, only about 100 years old, are encrusted with the vine's insidious tendrils. We understand that dodder has lived in our trees for decades.

Thus, your statement that dodder "recently has begun to infest Sewall's Point" is totally erroneous. On the contrary, the vines were here long before we were. Two residents, one who has lived here for twenty years and another who has lived here twenty-five years, have recalled to us that there was at least as much dodder here when they came to Sewall's Point as there is now.

Yet, probably the most alarming deception in your article appears in the lead, "If your landscape is "doddering," the only solution is major surgery." Absurd! What does "major surgery" mean in that sentence? Amputation? Destruction? Attempting to eradicate dodder, as any truthful person who has lived in this area for more than a year can tell you, is like trying to eliminate the common cold: an impossibility since dodder seeds, like cold viruses, flourish in the air all around us.

But the statement in your story that rankles me most is, "It was (John) Nairn . . . who first contacted (County Agricultural Agent) Whitty about it (dodder). Hogwash! My husband and I discussed dodder with Whitty in 1974, and we certainly were not the first. Since then, on a number of occasions, we have asked him and others in his office as well as in the State Division of Forestry how to expunge dodder. The answers have always been, "There is no known way to stop the vine from propagating."

A dozen times my husband has labored for hours - pulling, tugging, unwinding, yanking, cutting dodder from our trees. And twice we have paid hundreds of dollars to so-called professionals who said they could remove the vines, neither of which time was all the dodder removed and neither of which time did neighbors who also have dodder-laden trees have the vines removed from them. As a result, within weeks, there was as much dodder on our trees as there had been before we paid dearly to have it removed.

My husband and I (and we are not alone) have learned the hard-work way as well as the wasted-money way that dollars spent for dodder removal are dollars squandered for, unless every tree within many miles of our property is cleared of dodder, the vines will quickly reappear. For example, directly across the street from our older live oak, in the woods, is a large tree filled with dodder. Unless that property-owner, and all others around us whose trees are vine-infested, eradicates dodder, our live oaks and yours have not the slimmest chance of a vine-free existance.

Very truly yours,
Mrs. Francis J. Matuszewski

To the editor:

At a recent public hearing on the location of I-95, some incorrect statements were made concerning my involvement in the selection of the route.

Over a year ago, Chick Reinhardt was attempting to persuade the Martin County Commission to place the easterly-westerly route of I-95 on the ballot so that the people could vote on whether to go east or west. The commissioners advised that there was no design for an easterly route.

I volunteered, as a public spirited citizen, to design an easterly route that would miss virtually every home and not cause relocation of many families.

The county furnished me with an aerial map, and I drew a route that missed all but one home. Later, the Department of Transportation moved the route (Alternate 9) so much as a mile so that it goes through a number of homes.

Anyone can see and compare the two routes at the County Administration Building, on display in the Commission meeting room.

It is my opinion that the route I drew would be the most beneficial to the people of Martin County.

The innuendos that I would profit from the route are false. I own no land in the area, and do not represent any persons who own land in the area. The route was planned to go through the property of larger land owners who had not yet developed, making it possible to reduce the number of landowners the state had to deal with, the cost of the land, and not disrupt heavily developed areas.

I was born here and intend to live my life here. I plan to continue to say and do what I feel is in the best interest of Martin County. Being a member of a pioneer Martin County family gives me no special privilege of power. However, it does make me want to see Martin county grow properly, which I will work hard to do.

Sincerely,
Ransom R. Tilton

NEGOTIATING AN INVESTMENT PURCHASE

QUESTION: A while back I found an investment house that I liked very much. The figures all seemed to check out and I negotiated for about a month with K. The seller originally wanted $180,000, and I offered $170,000. After a bit of arguing back and forth, he agreed to take $185,000, but I felt that the property was worth a maximum of $180,000. We couldn't get together over the $5,000 difference. I heard just last week that the property had been sold. I'm upset because I spent a lot of time and energy on the project. Do you think I should have paid the price?

ANSWER: Your situation is repeated in the real estate market every day. Unfortunately, real estate is not a commodity on which you can put a market value to the dollar. Even our appraiser friends will tell you that an estimate of market value can vary by 5 percent or more. Another way to express this is to say that if three highly qualified appraisers, who have spent their lives studying market factors, were assigned the same appraisal job, they could rightfully vary by 5 percent or more in their estimate of a given property's value.

In asking your case, the appraisers might have estimated the value at $180,000, $185,000, or $190,000. And keep in mind that appraisers do not set the actual value- they estimate it. The market value is set by folks like you and me who conduct negotiations at arm's length (and, more specifically, the buyer who finally acted).

If the property suited your investment goals, a 2 percent price difference should not have held you back.

If you'd like to discuss your investment goals, call me at 334-6747, or stop by the Investment Center Real Estate, Inc., at Port St. Lucie Blvd., & U.S.1 South 1 - Jensen Beach, Fl. I look forward to working with you.

First of Martin County's savings plans let you be a smart saver. You can put some of your savings in a regular account where they will be immediately available, yet earn the highest allowable interest. Then you can invest other funds in good return, short term certificates. For higher yields, that will help build a nest egg for you, there are a variety of longer term certificates to choose from.

Whichever plan, or combination of plans, you choose, your savings earn interest compounded daily and are safely insured up to $40,000 by an agency of the federal government.

Now, where should you invest your savings to get the highest return, with the greatest protection?

In spite of reservations that the city may be creating more problems for itself by allowing the formation of another propertyowners association, city council members voted Tuesday to give final approval for a 164-unit townhouse project in the Midport area of the city.

The project, to be built by General Development Corporation, is to be known as Rivergreen Villas and is to be located on a 30-acre tract on the southwest corner of the intersection of Midport Road and Lyngate Drive.

Allen GDC official Wayne Allen said that roads in the project would be private and narrower than city standards allow and that the maintenance of roads, drainage facilities and recreation facilities would be the responsibility of a propertyowners association (POA), several council members expressed reservations about the project.

Vice Mayor Mike Reeb noted that a POA in Floresta Pines II had failed and that plans are now afoot for the city to take over the drainage system maintenance in that area. He questioned whether the Rivergreen Villas might encounter similar problems and become an additional city burden. The proposed POA fee for the townhouse project calls for $300 a year from each POA member the first year of maintenance.

Allen said he felt the POA would work because the dues would not only go for street and drainage work, but also for recreation facilities. He said this would give the POA members a more visible sign of where the money is going and he predicted dues payment collections would not be the problem they became for Floresta Pines II.

Immediately following council approval of the project, Allen again spoke about a POA. But this time, it was a proposal to disband the West Midport Property Owners Association to avoid the same problems Floresta Pines II encountered. He said that POA didn't include any responsibility other than for greenway drainage system maintenance.

At a recent meeting of that POA's membership, there was an overwhelming vote to dissolve the POA. A number of the POA members spoke at city council meeting. The council is considering either accepting all greenway maintenance responsibility in that area or to accept only the drainage maintenance and let the propertyowners take care of land left in its natural state around the drainage system. It was estimated that the total greenway maintenance cost the first year would be around $38,008 and it was proposed for the city to either assume the total cost, starting a year from now, or to assume one fourth of that cost and assess the rest of the cost to the residents by forming a special taxing district. A number of residents spoke against the taxing district idea, saying they felt all the maintenance responsibility should fall to the city. No decision was made by the council and the matter is slated for continued discussion at a future workshop meeting. While that topic was discussed, residents from other areas complained the city is not maintaining drainage systems in their neighborhoods.

A plan to install no parking signs along Irving Street by Sportsmans Park to protect newly installed trees and a sidewalk won council approval.

The council accepted Honda ditch and approved first reading of an ordinance to allow the city to borrow up to $600,000 for construction of a new city hall. Final approval was given to allow a funeral home to be built, to revise a fence law and to adopt a ban of the parking of heavy equipment, large trucks and buses in residential areas.
